

WERE YOU THERE—Gathered in the almost vacant Union ballroom Tuesday night, a group of interested University students listen to student-faculty panel discussion on the faults of the present examination system at the University. Moderator of the discussion was Chancellor R. G. Gustavson. Composed of three other faculty panel speakers and three student panel speakers, the group was represented by Dean of Student Affairs T. J. Thompson, Roz Howard, student; Bob Parker, student; Prof. J. L. Sellers; Prof. Ephraim Hixon and Roz Howard, president of the Student Council. (Rag Photo by Hank Lammers.)

Exam Panel Attendance 'Disappointing'

Disappointment because of the small number attending was the general opinion of members of the student-faculty panel discussion on the faults of the present examination system at the University held Tuesday evening.

Both faculty members and student participants believe the students are either not enough interested in the problem, or do not think it pressing enough to take time to discuss it.

Roz Howard, Student Council president, pointed out, "Evidently, from the meager attendance at the discussion, students are satisfied with the status quo."

Cheating Worse

"The status quo to me," continued Howard, "means an overabundance of cheating. To my observation, and it is not all personal, the trend for cheating is not getting better; it is still on its way down. The status quo does not sufficiently discourage students from cheating."

Howard expressed belief that "perhaps the Student Council does not represent the students on this problem—maybe they are in favor of the status quo."

Stace Explains Democratic Values in Human Nature

"Our democratic values, I believe, are applicable to all human beings because they are expressions of the essential rational nature of man."

Dr. W. T. Stace, professor of philosophy at Dartmouth, said before a crowd in Love library Wednesday evening, March 23. The title of his lecture, "Democratic Values," was the second in a series of three the professor is to give concerning "What Are Our Values?"

The basic values underlying democracy will survive as long as man continues to populate the earth, the professor said.

"The values of democracy are freedom, equality and individualism," the lecturer said. "This does not mean, however, that every nation or culture thinks them valuable," he continued.

It does not mean that non-democratic nations or cultures would find democracy satisfactory immediately after they adopted our values, he said.

The Montgomery lecturer declared that "it means only that if the right conditions are present—if for example their natural resources or literacy were sufficiently developed—all peoples would in the end find that democracy expresses their own natures and contributes most to their happiness."

Answers Questions

Professor Stace tried to answer the question "Are democratic values good for all human beings or are they good for a particular culture such as we have here in America?" and "Do we have a right to go around the world trying to convert other peoples to a democratic way of life?"

The Montgomery lecturers are sponsored yearly by the University Research Council and brought to the campus by the James Henry Montgomery Memorial Fund.

Professor Stace's last lecture will be presented Friday, March 24, on "Why Do We Fail?"

March Issue of 'Countryman' Out

The March issue of the Cornhusker Countryman will be on sale Thursday and Friday, March 23 and 24, at the Ag Union and Ag hall.

Eleanor Erickson is the editor, and Arlen Beam is the business editor of the Countryman. Rex Messersmith is the managing editor and Ernie Rousek, circulation manager.

The magazine is a monthly edition for Ag students and faculty members. Its circulation also extends to the high schools and county agents throughout the state.

Single issues of the magazine sell for 15 cents.

Six Students Indicted in Assault Case All Suspended From University

The six university students who were charged Wednesday in municipal court with assault with intent to commit rape will be "indefinitely suspended," according to T. J. Thompson, dean of student affairs.

"There is a possibility of more drastic action," said Dean Thompson, "depending on the circumstances that are involved."

Those accused of seizing and molesting two girls are James E. Beal, David M. Darlington, Edward E. Angle, Alan J. Bayley, Don L. Eicher and Robert W. Fulk. Two of them, Beal and Fulk, were taken to court on both Friday and Saturday nights and are charged on two counts. All six pleaded not guilty. Preliminary hearings for the group will be held on March 31 at 10 a. m.

Release on Bond

All of the students have been released on bond, $7,500 each for the two admitting participation both evenings and $5,000 each for the others. They were represented by Attorneys Lyle Holland, L. R. Doyle, Carl Sanden and Robert Van Pell.

It is charged that the two girls, one from Teachers college high school and the other from Northeast, were forced into cars, taken to the Angle home and molested. According to a doctor's report, neither of the girls was raped, but the one who was taken Saturday night was "sexually abused."

Darlington, Beal, Eicher and Fulk signed statements admitting that they had been involved Friday night, and Bayley, Angle, Darlington and Beal Saturday night.

Home Ec Club Plans Annual Silver Tea

The Home Ec club will sponsor a Silver Tea, Sunday at Love Memorial hall from 3 to 5 p. m.

The purpose of the tea, an annual event, is to raise funds for the foreign fellowship fund. The money is used to bring a foreign student to the Nebraska campus.

The University has obtained a foreign student for the last four years. It is hoped that another student will be able to enroll at Nebraska next year.

Chairman of the tea, Ruth Fischer, said a foreign student will speak at 3:30 and again at 4:30 o'clock. She will tell of conditions in her native country and the merit of the Home Ec scholarship.

Music arrangements will be presented between the talks. Numbers will be presented by Joyce Kuehl, Marilyn Cook and Shirley Keevert.

Last year's scholarship holder was Maria Constantines, who graduated in January.

Visual Aid Topic Of Free Lecture

A visual aid representative, Mr. Echols will give a free lecture Saturday at 9:30 a. m. in the Temple building, Room 24.

The use of visual aids in education will be the subject of Echols' lecture. At present he is attending the M.E.N.C. convention in St. Louis.

Echols plans to come to the University to confer with the visual aid department. He is the director of the Education department of the Pan American Band Instrument company.

Dairy, Beef Cattle

Dairy cattle and beef cattle will be shown next with various breeds represented. This will be followed by a jumping horse performance by six local horse enthusiasts.

The ropewalks will give a demonstration of cow cutting as it is done in the West. The horses that are trained for cutting were furnished by the Monahan Cattle company of Hyannis.

Final competition will be for the championship showman award. Winners of the various classes will meet in the arena for this final show which will be judged by E. W. Jancke, state 4-H club leader. Last years winner was Robert Beck.

Co-judging masters of the Block and Bridle-sponsored show are Wilber Pawley and Stan Lambert. Lambert is also manager of the entire show.

Robert Raun will be master of ceremonies.

Model UN Recommends Continuance of UNESCO

Dr. Sorenson Defines Role Of UNESCO

UNESCO's role in the continuing struggle for world peace and better living for all mankind, and the organization's place in the family of United Nations specialized agencies was described by Dr. Frank Sorenson at the third plenary session of the model General Assembly Wednesday afternoon.

Dr. Sorenson, who is chairman of the department of educational services and director of the summer session, presented the progress report on UNESCO that is to appear soon in the official printed Bulletin of the United Nations.

In the words of Dr. Jamie Torres Bodet, director-general of the organization, Dr. Sorenson pointed out that UNESCO "is not merely an administration—it is the center of a crusade. It is not a secretariat and staff, but a faith in the hearts of men."

Important Function

One of the most important functions of the organization, stressed Dr. Sorenson, is creating educational settings. "We all realize," he continued, "that you can't make an individual learn, but it is possible to establish a setting conducive to study—such as, for example, the model United Nations on this campus."

4 Point Program

Dr. Sorenson outlined the 1949 four-point program: 1. A careful study of the needs of schools, libraries and museums in war. 2. The UNESCO report was given in two parts—a review of the organization's work for the past year, and the forecast for 1950.

According to Dr. Bodet, the speaker said, the job of UNESCO is "to promote and sponsor projects that promise to help the masses, projects that would warrant the support and assistance of some of the world's great men and women and projects that would bring quick results."

Dona Barbara To Show Here March 24, 25

The film, "Dona Barbara" which is to be sponsored by the modern language department, will be shown Thursday afternoon, March 24 at 3 p. m. and Friday evening, March 25, at 7:30 p. m. The schedule of the film, to be shown in Morrill hall auditorium, was previously announced at the wrong time.

Based on a novel of the same name by Romulo Gallegos, ex-president of Venezuela, the story concerns Dona Barbara, a strong-willed woman who takes delight in ruining men so she can take over their property. The novel, published in 1929, has been hailed as one of the greatest pieces of contemporary Spanish-language literature.

The star of the film is Maria Felix, the "Hedy Lamarr" of Latin America. Dona Barbara lives outside the law and is considered by many to be a symbol of the late Dictator Gomez of Venezuela.

The author of the novel, Gallegos, is one of the most famous South American authors. He is a liberal, favoring a democratic government for his country. He served as a minister of education for Venezuela, president of Venezuela in 1946, but was overthrown by a military junta in 1948. He is now living in exile in the United States.

Tickets to the film are 25 cents, and are available at the modern language department in Burnett Hall.

IVCF Official To Describe Mission Work

Wesley Gustafson, missionary secretary of Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship in North America will address the local chapter of IVCF Thursday evening, 7:30 p. m. in room 315 of the Union.

WES GUSTAFSON — IVCF missionary secretary in North America, will speak at a meeting of that group in the Union tonight at 7:30 p. m., room 315.

After graduating from Trinity seminary in Chicago, Gustafson took additional work at Midland college and the University of California where he took graduate work in oriental studies. He was also president of the IVCF chapter at the University of California.

Before leaving for China in 1946, Gustafson served as pastor to congregations in Fremont and Berkeley, Calif. During his term as missionary, he served in the Canton, China area and taught in a Chinese seminary and Bible institute. Gustafson was also active in instructing University Bible classes.

Because of illness in the family, Gustafson returned with his family to the United States in 1948. Upon his return, he was appointed traveling secretary for the Free Church Youth Fellowship, youth group of the Evangelical Free church, which position he held till accepting his present position. He is now responsible for the missionary arm of IVCF (Foreign Missions Fellowship) in the United States and Canada.

An offering will be received by IVCF student work at the University of Hawaii at this meeting to which students and faculty are cordially invited.

Strong Soviet Opposition Overridden

Despite a heated barrage of opposition led by the Soviet Union and its satellites, the report of the third committee, the Social, Cultural and Humanitarian committee, was passed by the General Assembly at the third plenary session Wednesday afternoon.

The report, submitted by Chairman George Witcox, after three meetings by the committee, recommended that the Assembly commend and urge continuance of the work of the UNESCO. The committee reports expressed the opinion that the organization is fulfilling its purpose and is not working outside of its realm, as the Soviet delegation has charged.

The first protest was offered by the Ukraine delegation. Ruth Sorenson, chairman, pointed out that the organization is one of "cultural imperialism, and urged all countries, especially the smaller nations, not to surrender their culture to an international bureaucracy dominated by the United States."

Miss Sorenson continued by saying that the United States ought to "clean up their own back yard." She cited examples where the country had barred teachers from teaching because of being accused of being communistic. She pointed to the state of Nebraska as another place where the United States ought to "clean up." In that state, she said, a legislative committee examines teachers to see if they are communists before allowing them to teach in the University. Certain magazines are barred in some cities, she continued, and "anything pertaining to communism is barred in some places." She concluded by saying that "because it is so bad in the United States, the Ukraine certainly did not want such a situation on an international basis."

Answering the attack on her country, Irene Hunter, chairman of the United States delegation said that "Russia has not taken into consideration all the facts." She asked the Ukraine "why they don't petition for membership in the organization and voice their opinions of the organization there, rather than outside of the body."

In answer to the charge that UNESCO is dominated by the United States, Miss Hunter pointed out that every nation in the body has one vote, despite what financial aid they give the organization. "What better example can we cite for improving culture and education in the world than UNESCO?" she asked the Assembly.

Presenting the Soviet Union's opposition to the report, George Hancock said "there is no question but what the United States controls UNESCO. She controls See MODEL ASSEMBLY, Page 4

Angry Russians Stomp Out Of Mock Assembly

Russian delegates stomped out of the UN mock Assembly Wednesday night with a clatter of chairs and a slamming of briefcases.

The action was taken following the 25-6 approval by the fourth plenary session of a Yugoslav amendment which would provide for international inspection of all armaments. The plan was offered as an amendment to a Russian proposal which would have placed all arms in an international stockpile for the use of the United Nations.

Jerry Matzke, Russian delegate denounced approval of the amendment. He said that Russia could not support the proposal since it indicated a lack of good faith on the part of the rest of the world, and the United States in particular.

The General Assembly adjourned without taking final action on the report of the Political and Security Committee. In addition to the twenty-five non-controversial proposals previously recommended by the UN Military Staff Committee, these four proposals were presented by the Political and Security Committee:

The Security Council would be empowered to make arrangements for policing and guarding in the event of an emergency.

A committee would be established by the Security Council to set up and maintain seven bases for the use of United Nations troops. The seven-member committee would provide for the use of these troops at stated bases in an emergency.

A supreme commander for all UN forces would be selected by the national commanders of the member nations. He would be selected for a four-year term, with his successor to assist him for his last two years of office.

UN Forces would be rotated so that the total force available would be larger than that of any single member nation.

A proposal regarding a dispute between the mythical states of Mexico and the United Confederation was referred to the World Court session to be held Thursday night.

Law Students to Stage Session Of Model World Court Procedure

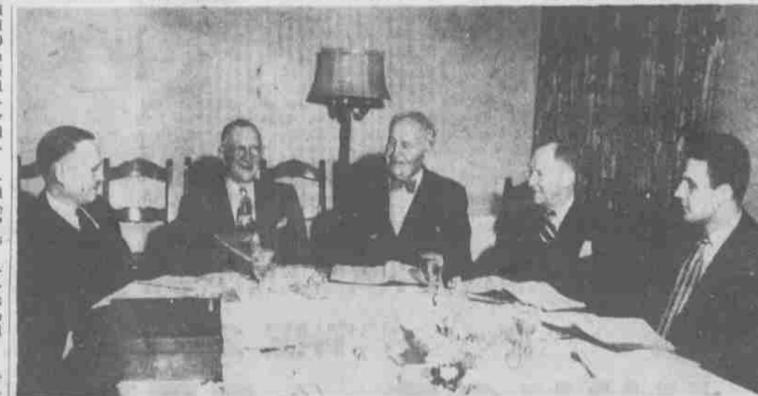

A unique event, the World Court moot session, will be held in the Union ballroom at 7:30 p. m. Thursday. The presentation of the model court session is a part of the University's United Nations general assembly program, and its purpose is to show students and all others interested just how the world court functions.

The fates of the mythical nations of Mexico and the United Confederation will rest in the hands of the "World Court," when Nebraska law students stage this working model.

Douglas E. Peters, Jr., will present arguments in behalf of Mexico. The United Confederation's case will be submitted by two other students, Ted Sorenson and Claude Shokes.

Incidents Involved

Incidents involved in the case have been set up to match circumstances which might arise in the Rio Grande country, but the fundamental points of law at issue are the same as those which See WORLD COURT, Page 4.

JUDGES of the World Court moot session are Willard B. Cowles, James E. Lawrence, C. Petrus Peterson, Clarence Davis and John H. Pender. The Court, part of the United Nations Assembly, will judge a mythical case involving Mexico and the United Confederation. Three Nebraska law students, Ted Sorenson, Douglas Peters and Claude Shokes will present the arguments. The court will be open to the public and will be held Thursday at 7:30 p. m. in the Union ballroom.

Council Airs Proposals for Examinations

The exam question was again a main topic for discussion by the Student Council last night. Discussing the results of the student faculty meeting Tuesday night, Roz Howard expressed his regret that there were more faculty members present than undergraduate students.

"It must mean that the students are satisfied with the exam situation as it now stands," he stated.

"I believe we should tackle the problem from a long range plan as well as from a practical viewpoint. I feel that if we could instill the honor system it would extend beyond the classroom," said Howard. He cited a statement made by Chancellor R. G. Gustavson in which the Chancellor said that he was opposed to students being spoon-fed, forced to learn by having tests every three weeks.

Rob Raun criticized the viewpoint of faculty members who feel that just because cheating has always been done it will continue to be done.

Don Stern stated, "I don't think the honor system will work in the overall University. It will not overlap outside the final room. Cheating is something that does not develop in a person, if he is going to cheat he is going to cheat. Only way we can help the situation is to de-emphasize finals."

"It is fairly easy to attend the University of Nebraska compared to other schools which had more rigid entrance requirement," Rod Lindwall declared. "We can't say that the honor system would automatically solve the question," he added.

The idea of promoting the honor system during freshman orientation was brought out by Rob Raun.

"We must approach the problem See COUNCIL, Page 4.
