Violin Solo . . .

Every outgoing editor comes up with a violin solo, and every editor begins his violin solo by saying that he's going to write a violin solo. So here's my violin solo.

We won't attempt to bore our readers with a sob story about how much we have enjoyed and appreciated our four years at Nebraska and our work on The Daily Nebraskan. It is enough to say that we have.

No doubt we have made many enemies and few friends, but a college newspaper editor can expect this situation. We have tried to carry out projects which we have felt would benefit the students and the University.

Most of them have been failures, but one or two have succeeded in getting small results.

However, we do wish to thank those students and faculty members who expressed their appreciation for more adequate news coverage during the semester. Our reporters and news editors have worked long hours to fill the large paper, and any expressions of thanks were gratefully and appreciatively received. If The Daily Nebraskan was in any way successful, the credit goes to those reporters and news editors who did a great share of the writing.

That's it. Good luck to the seniors and to those who still have a few years of college ahead of them. Hold out. It won't be long now.

Editorial Briefs

Scholarship plus leadership has paid off for Mary Frances Johnson and Jean Vierek, Ag junior and freshman who have won the Danforth scholarship to the American Youth Foundation Leadership Training camp. On this basis they became the recipients for the leadership program in Michigan this summer. Their remarkable records in leadership have paved the way for further training in this line, as well as an enjoyable camp activity program.

Just to see what four years in University can do for a would-be artist, students may see on display in Morrill hall the work of 33 graduating art seniors. That these students have ability cannot be questioned; their work exhibits some of the finest student talent.

Students looking for something to do in their spare time this summer will be able to find the answer to their needs in the new, Council-sponsored summer activities group. With Ann Barger efficiently carrying the load of top coordinator, the new program should keep activities going at full speed during the summer months. Such a project has long been needed. The services which campus activities can perform for the University undoubtedly can be expanded through year-out operation.

Thirteen freshman actors will take over the presentation of the mystery play, "Guest in the House," in the Thursday and Friday night experimental theater production. Student and faculty audiences will enjoy this display of first-year acting, as suspense builds up to a surprise conclusion. The freshmen are ending their first year with a most entertaining contribution to the campus.

The right person to take Delta Sigma Rho's cup for top freshman debating was Joan Krueger. The "Rag" staff doesn't need to be told of this girl's ability, because we are all well acquainted with her outstanding work. Off to a shining start in campus debate activities, Miss Krueger's future looks just as promising.

Not only hard work, but outstanding work has won for Arthur Beindorff the Samuel Avery memorial fellowship. Studying for his doctor's degree in chemistry, Beindorff has displayed the exceptional ability which calls for such splendid recognition. The award goes to one of the most deserving students in the University, an individual who takes his education seriously.

Dr. John P. Senning's unanimous election to the presidency of the Lincoln board of education proves his obvious capacity for this important job. University students and instructors are proud to have a Nebraska faculty member representing them in this vital position of public concern.

D.P. Student Will Benefit From Play

Proceeds from a good-will offering to be taken at a play sponsored by the Wesley Foundation will be used to help bring a displaced person to the United States.

Money received from "Dear Brutus," a comedy by Sir James Barrie, to be produced Friday, May 19, in Grace Methodist church, will go into a fund currently being raised to bring a person from northern Europe to study in the United States. The play is part of a campaign by five Methodist student groups to raise $1,200 for the fund.

Five University students will be featured in the cast, Robert Anderson, Wallace Palmer, Joan Jones, Mary Lou Carr, Aileen Kernes and several Wesleyan students have parts in the play. Frank Wright, a University student is directing.

No admission will be charged for the play.

Letterip

To the Editor:

In your recent editorial "Students Plus," it is obvious that the research on which it is based was limited to an interview with the dean of one college in the University. It seems to me that before making assertions about such an important matter as degrees with distinction, all of the deans of the colleges concerned should have been consulted.

I feel that it should be pointed out that the determination of the conditions under which students shall receive degrees with distinction or high distinction was left to the individual colleges. Your editorial indicated the conditions which are used in the College of Arts and Sciences. The conditions which are used in other colleges were not suggested. It was indicated however that whatever they might be they were inferior to the conditions used in the College of Arts and Sciences.

In the Teachers college the faculty has determined that there shall be three conditions under which students may receive consideration for a degree with distinction: (1) high scholarship, (2) superior professional promise, (3) demonstrated qualities of superior personality including particular emphasis on leadership. It is important to note that a student with high scholarship alone does not receive a degree with distinction. He must have all three qualities. Several times the faculty has refused to grant a degree with distinction to a student with the highest scholastic achievement in the senior class because he made a mediocre showing on his practice teaching and in his other professional courses in education.

So the statement in your editorial: "In any college but Arts and Sciences graduation with distinction implies no more than honorary or Honor Convocation recognition" is not true. Unless the eight students in the Arts and Sciences college, to whom you refer in your editorial, had a superior achievement record in practice teaching and in other professional courses in education they would not be considered for a degree with distinction in the Teachers College, even if they were registered hr.

It should be pointed out too, that the two "hurdles" for candidates for degrees with distinction in the College of Arts and Sciences, to which you refer in your editorial, might be two more tests of the acquisition and organization of knowledge, hence merely additional tests of high scholarship. The members of the faculty of the Teachers college believe that the candidates for a degree with distinction should demonstrate superior ability in the application of knowledge as well as of skills and insights in a professional field, in addition to superior exemplification of the acquisition and organization of knowledge, and in addition to having demonstrated qualities of superior personality, including leadership. I should hope that if these three conditions for a degree with distinction prevailed in the field of professional journalism that one of the tests of the quality of an editorial would be accuracy of statement based on available facts.

I want to say that I heartily agree with the last sentence in your editorial, "Graduation with distinction undoubtedly should point out the student for the highest record in college achievement." And this necessarily implies, I think, that the faculty in each college should continue to determine the conditions which will "point out" such students. I think it would be unfortunate if all colleges in this University adopted the same conditions for the selection of candidates for degrees with distinction, simply because the purposes of colleges vary, and their conception of what constitutes an outstanding student varies accordingly.

Sincerely yours,

Oscar H. Werner

will remain on Ag campus until the game next year.

The game marked the end of YM activities for the present school year. A picnic supper was served after the game, with Tom Lamber in charge of arrangements. A recognition service for the graduating senior members closed the evening's program.

'Jug' Returns To Ag Campus

"The Little Brown Jug" returned to the Ag college campus as the result of the third annual Ag-City YM softball game held Tuesday.

The Ag YM swamped their city counterparts 13-1 in a game at Peter Pan park. The winning Ag men got 17 hits while Darrell Heiss limited the city softballers to five.

The third inning was the big inning for Ag, when they got seven runs on ten hits. Darrell Heiss and George Heiss homered for the winners and Warren Monson hit a grand slam homer.
