Regents O. K. Rag Union Fee Raises

An enlarged Union and a big size Daily Nebraskan are assured university students as a result of action taken by the Board of Regents in approving a $5 increase in tuition fees for the fall and spring semesters.

The increase, which will raise fees to $80 a semester, will provide for $1.50 more in student health fees. Three dollars of the remainder will go to retire bonds which will be issued to build an addition to the present Union, and to build a Union building on Ag campus. The Daily Nebraskan will receive 50 cents a semester from each student to help meet the operating deficit caused by the increased size in the Rag.

The fee increase was put to student vote April 26 and approved 2 to 1 for the Union addition. Students turned down the Rag fee increase.

When the addition to the Union is built, new recreational, service, and cultural facilities will be included. The addition will probably not be built until 1952.

Recreational improvements will include bowling alleys, a billiard room, ping pong with a minimum of eight tables, game room, and a recreational room. Service failities will provide more adequate fountain facilities, multiple purpose conference-dining rooms, student organization offices and file room, commuters lunch room, craft and hobby shop, television-audio lounge and increased check room facilities.

An informal recital-reception room will be included in the cultural category. The studio will be designed for a small stage to accommodate piano and instrumental recitals, broadcasts and coffee forums.

The Ag Union plan is for a low, ranch type structure. To be included are a multiple purpose lounge and dance floor; a unit of meeting rooms; a fountain room following a western motif; combination recreation unit, to include billiard rooms, ping pong and game areas; craft and hobby shop facilities; television-music lounge; and service facilities such as offices and checkroom.

The assurance of a large size Daily Nebraskan during the regular school year makes it possible for the staff to plan more adequate news and pictorial coverage of the campus.

The campaign for a larger Union was led by the Union expansion committee, headed by Fritz Simpson, editor of the Daily Nebraskan during the spring. The expansion committee planned an extensive campaign of publicity for the Union addition, and arranged for the voting which took place in the classrooms.

Bruce Kennedy Named Editor Of Fall 'Rag'

Editor of the Daily Nebraskan for the fall semester 1950-51 will be Bruce Kennedy, senior journalism major.

Summer Session Opens Tomorrow

Wednesday morning, 7 a. m. is the official opening of the 1950 summer session of the University.

According to Dr. Frank Sorenson, director of the summer session, approximately 3,500 students are expected to attend the six and eight weeks sessions. This will be slightly under the 3,700 mark set last summer.

Students will be attending one of two sessions—the eight weeks or the six weeks. Sorenson said the veteran enrollment this year is expected to drop about 25 percent.

Record Graduating Class Receives 1,661 Degrees

79th Senior Class Hears Call for Mature Leaders

The University's largest graduating class heard a call for a mature, moral, dynamic American leadership to give the world a lasting and decent peace.

It came from Norman Cousins, New York City, editor of The Saturday Review of Literature, who addressed the University's 79th annual commencement Monday morning at the Coliseum.

The commencement audience, largest ever assembled in University history, included 1,644 graduates who received a total of 1,661 degrees. Of their numbers 1,317 were men and 344 women. Veterans made up 56 per cent, compared with 64 per cent last year.

The 1950 class, including members who graduated from the College of Medicine nine days ago, numbers 1,775, or 259 more than in 1949. The number of degrees granted this spring, failed by one of reaching an even 1,800.

Honorary Degrees

At the ceremonies Monday, the University conferred honorary doctors degrees on three of its former students:

Dr. Ewald T. Grether, Dean of the School of Business Administration of the University of California, honorary Doctor of Laws.

Mari S. Sandoz, now residing in New York City, author of "Old Jules," and other books, honorary Doctor of Literature.

Dr. Arthur Bessey Smith, vice president of the Automatic Electric Laboratories, Inc., of Chicago, honorary Doctor of Engineering.

Cousins titled his address, "A Time For Ideals," and throughout it he urged Americans to consider carefully such questions as these:

"Is it true that a substantial portion of our foreign policy has been based on one of history's greatest miscalculations—the assumption that America would be able to maintain atomic monopoly for at least seven years after Hiroshima?"

H-Bomb

"Is it true that even if we succeed in manufacturing ten hydrogen bombs to Russia's one, we are still at a military disadvantage because of the concentration of our population and our industry, making us a supremely vulnerable target? Is it also true that Russia, because of the decentralization of her population and industry, is much better situated to withstand atomic warfare?"

"Is it true that even more important than military weapons today are the ideas that will determine which way the preponderance of the world's peoples are going to turn in the years just ahead? Is it true that this involves an ideological struggle which cannot be won without winning the respect and support of the billion and a half people outside the United States and Russia."

"Is it true that while we are engaged in post-mortems over China, a serious threat is developing to India, Indonesia, and in general, the entire area of Southeast Asia? Is it true that if this area goes the way of China America will have lost the cold war without firing a shot?"

Point Four

"Is it true that while we are procrastinating over Point Four, (the use of American capital to bolster underdeveloped areas of the world) Soviet Russia may be planning to take the ball away from us by moving in with a large-scale program for applying atomic energy to develop the resources of Far Eastern territories under its influence or control?"

"Is it true that our best chance for winning and maintaining the support of the preponderance of the world's peoples is not only through 'total diplomacy' but

Union to Present First Artist In Summer Series June 14

The first of the 1950 Summer Artist Series will feature Hal and Ruby Holbrook in their "Theater of Great Personalities," Wednesday, June 14. Curtain time is 8 p. m. and the place, the Union ballroom.

The series, presented by the summer sessions division, is free to the students, administration, faculty and guests of the university.

The Holbrooks, two of the fastest rising stars in the platform field, graduated from college only a few years ago. Since that time they have performed before nearly four hundred audiences, totaling over 150,000 people, from coast to coast.

Broadway Approves

Margo Jones, director of such Broadway hits as Joan of Lorraine and the Glass Menagerie, says of the Holbrooks, that she hopes "We will get a chance to work together someday."

In addition to their platform work, the Holbrooks have recently invaded the television field with such success that a featured program has been offered them. The greatest problem thus far, they say, is the question of time, since they are booked solidly this season.

Wide Range

The Holbrooks will present several scenes from their "Theater of Great Personalities." Their characterizations cover a wide range, including such figures as Mark Twain, Elizabeth and Essex, and the Brownings. Their newest comedy number is an episode from Moliere's farce, "The School for Wives," featuring its two principal characters, Arnalphe and Agnes.

Costumes and make-up highlight this diversified program. The Holbrooks have developed a technique of swift and startling changes of appearance which keep the program moving smoothly with little time wasted between scenes.

THE HOLBROOKS—To appear in the first of the Union Summer Artist Series on June 14.

Summer Class Registration Begins Today

Registration for the summer sessions will begin Tuesday, June 6 in the Coliseum and in the Military and Naval Science building.

New students may register Tuesday, as well as regular students who were unable to register during the early registration period last semester.

Procedure for signing up for classes in either the six or eight weeks sessions as outlined by Dr. Floyd Hoover, assistant registrar, are as follows:

Procedure

1. Students may see advisers in the Coliseum from 8 to 12 a. m. and from 1 to 4:30 p. m. After the students program has been set up with the aid of the advisers, they will pick up registration tickets at the northeast corner of the Coliseum.

2. Students will proceed from the Coliseum to the Military and Naval Science building at 14th and Vine streets, where they will receive class cards and fill out registration forms.

3. The last step is to report to the Physical Education building at 14th and W streets. Here students will fill out personal data cards and pay fees.

According to Dr. Hoover, those students who registered early, but did not clear fees on May 26 may claim their registration and pay fees June 6 in the Physical Education building.

Undergraduates may register late on June 8 without receiving permission from the instructor of the class desired. Beginning June 9, undergraduates must secure permission of the instructors to register late. After June 7, undergrads will pay a late registration fee of $3. The late fee will increase $1 each week.

Graduate Students

Graduate students may register until June 12 without penalty. After that date, they will be required to pay the $3 late fee.

Students who wish to add and drop courses may do so June 8. Steps for this procedure are:

1. Confer with adviser and obtain an add and drop worksheet, signed by both the adviser and the academic dean of the college.

2. Report to the Military and Naval Science building to take the necessary steps to add or drop a course.

Summer 'Daily' Changes Size

As everything does when summer comes, the Daily Nebraska has again taken on a new appearance.

Regular students will note that the "King" size Rag has been abandoned for the summer in favor of the tabloid version. The Nebraskan will reach students twice a week this summer, on Tuesday and Friday mornings.

Anyone wishing news in the paper should contact the Rag office extension 4226, any morning between 9 and 11 a. m.
