

Second All-School Clinic To Hear Charles Malik

Dr. Charles Malik of the United Nations will be the featured speaker at the second in the series of three All-University clinics built around the theme of "Is a Third War the Only Answer?"

Dr. Malik will discuss the question "Is the U. N. Failing?" on Monday and Tuesday, June 26 and 27. He will deliver his main address at 7:30 a. m. Monday, June 26 in Love Library auditorium.

The clinics are being held during the Summer Session for the second year. According to Dr. Frank E. Sorenson, director of the Summer Session, the function of the All-University clinics is "providing the students with a general education which is highly desirable."

Dr. Sorenson feels that in addition to their regular work, students should be brought into focus with two or three of the most significant developments in society today. This is done by using the clinic method.

First Clinics.

Dr. Sorenson cited the first clinic held last week as an example. Chancellor R. G. Gustavson presented the first lecture on "Can Science Save Us?" Dr. Gustavson pointed out that science alone is a means to an end, the goal of which is determined by social scientists.

The 300 students and Lincoln residents attending the first clinic were told by Dr. Gustavson how the new scientific developments affect the lives of people in Nebraska. During the discussion period, the role of science in today's world was discussed.

Though most students will never have an opportunity to study some of the advanced sciences, Dr. Sorenson said, they can acquire a slight familiarity with the

'50 Seniors Give $65 Scholarship

The senior class of 1950 has decided to turn the $65 they earned during senior week selling the class ribbons into a scholarship fund for a 1951 senior man or woman.

This was announced by Mary Helen Mallory and Pat McCormack who were on the committee for deciding what should be done with the senior gift fund.

The winner of the scholarship will be announced by Dean T. J. Thompson in the fall.

This last spring was the first senior day on this campus. About the second week in May seniors were selling red and white ribbons to be worn on senior day. When the great day came around they took a skip to Linoma Beach and had a big picnic. It was very well attended and it looks like senior day may become a tradition on the university campus.

subjects through clinics such as these.

Two Questions.

When Dr. Malik appears on the campus next week, he will discuss two questions many people have asked about the U. N. First, "Is the U. N. Failing?" and second "What is the Universal Doctrine of Human Rights?"

Malik who is the U. N. delegate from Lebanon, will address the people of Nebraska over the Nebraska network program, as well as meet with the faculty at a special luncheon to be held June 26. Only members of the summer session staff may attend the luncheon.

One of the most important phases of the all-University clinics according to Dr. Sorenson is the discussion period which is held on the second day of the clinic. This is meant as a summing up and "tying together" period. The discussion will be held from 10 to 11 a. m. June 27 in Love Library auditorium.

During the discussion period,

Chancellor Gustavson plans to participate in the discussion period which will be concerned with "Implications of the University Declaration of Human Rights."

Dr. Malik, who is chairman on leave of the department of philosophy of the American University in Beirut, Lebanon, is a close associate of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt in matters pertaining to the Universal Document of Human Rights. He is also the minister to the United States from Lebanon.

Final Talk.

The final clinic will be held July 10 and 11, and will consider the question "Why Feed the Multitudes?" Dr. Duncan Wall, director of public relations for the World Food and Agricultural organization will be the featured speaker.

Dr. W. V. Lambert, dean of the College of Agriculture will be the chairman of the final clinic. At the discussion session, consideration will be given "Nebraska's Place in the World Food and Agricultural Organization."

'Uninformed' Find Confusion In Love Library Procedures

(The following feature story is reprinted from the Summer Daily Nebraska, 1949, because it offers an unusual picture of the library and how to use it.)

Love with a capital "L" refers to Love Library, home of hapless underclassmen with term paper troubles and haven of the more businesslike University students. To any person who missed, escaped or avoided a tour of the library as a class project, the library can be a pretty confusing place.

We would not say this unless we had personally observed it, but it is possible to be on the University campus for four years without understanding even the simplest library procedures. It happened last semester.

Dropped In

The graduating senior dropped into the humanities reading room on second floor, one afternoon and evidently spotted a book which interested her. This reminded her that she needed some references for her term report, which must have been her first, and she began her search for information. One of my friends met her looking perplexed in the hall.

"The book I want isn't in there," she said, pointing toward the reading room. "Where do you suppose I could find it?"

The friend tentatively suggested that she refer to the card catalog. "Card catalog" registered somewhere and the girl managed to discover that her book was not in any of the reading rooms or branch libraries. (The absence of any little colored half cards just in front of the regular book card gave her the clue.) "Your book is in the stacks," the friend explained.

"How do I get in to find it?" was the next question.

"You don't—you have to fill out a call slip and give it to the librarian at the loan desk and she'll send someone after it."

What's That?

The book was duly brought in and the friend went back to checking out her own book. It wasn't long until the girl was back. "What's that?" the girl asked, pointing to the little square of blue cardboard.

"That's a library card," friend explained. "Everybody has one."

"I don't," the senior said. "Can I use yours?"

Friend shoved it over and the girl checked out the book.

The moral of all this is—find out now how the library works early in the game and make it work for you, for if it works against you, you may find it hard on both your pocketbook and your friendships.

Books are placed in Love Library according to a division plan in four large reading rooms—humanities, science, social studies, and education. This is done to break down the barriers between students and books. Related books, periodicals and reference books are conveniently grouped for the use of students who need only walk to a shelf to choose one, and start reading.

The Library has space for over 800,000 books and documents and now contains the majority of the half million books which comprise the University libraries.

Completed in 1943, when the army moved in, the library was erected with the gift of $850,000 from the estate of Don L. Love, for many years a prominent Lincoln lawyer and banker who was also twice mayor of the city.

Lutherans Plan Picnic Tuesday

The regular weekly meeting of the Lutheran student association will be held Tuesday, June 20, at 6 p. m. If the weather permits, the group will leave from the Student House, 1440 Q St., for a picnic. The Lutheran student pastor, Alvin M. Petersen, will lead the discussion following the picnic supper.

A famous writer recently put it:

"In addition to the Golden Gate Bridge, Mark Hopkins, and the Earthquake, the city of San Francisco also produced my mother-in-law. And with this last mentioned accomplishment, it jumped the gun on Oak Ridge, Tenn., which did not get around to the atom bomb until some sixty-five years later."

Voc Ag Teachers Win Scholarships

Summer school scholarship winners for vocational agriculture instructors were announced Friday by Dr. C. E. Rhoad, chairman of the University vocational education department.

The 11 scholarships, totaling $300, are made available thru the Nebraska Co-Operative council. Recipients were: Donald Bealer, Rushville; Walter Crumbliss, Ravenna; Edgar Hamm, Norfolk; George Harrison, Millford; Dean Lundy, Harrison; Duane Nielsen, Auburn; Lloyd Schmaderke, Lincoln; Elvin Schultz, Crete; Eldor Splittgerber, Albion; James Wall, Waverly; L. E. Watson, Humboldt.

All of the instructors, with the exception of Schultz, are attending the University of Nebraska college of agriculture. Schultz is attending the University of Illinois.

History repeats itself. An archeologist reports that Europe touched America millions of years ago.

Summer Rest Found in Union

Summer school dull, just cannot find anything around campus to do? The best remedy that can be found is in the Union facilities which are available to all students.

If a little activity, with little effort is needed, there are the ping pong tables. If you enjoy reading a good novel on the best seller list, the Book Nook contains all of the latest in published material.

So you want music: classical, popular, jazz, bebop, or rag-time? Records are waiting on the shelves of the Music room. If you are a card shark at heart and always feel at home when shuffling a deck, the card room is equipped with comfortable chairs, tables and inexhaustible supply of card games.

Perhaps you are just tired and would prefer to relax in an easy chair, the lounge can easily fill the bill.

These are just a few suggestions as to what can be found in "Your" Union.
