

Sophomore Coed Displays Air Line Insignia Collection

A collection of air line insignias by University sophomore Joan Franke is now on display in the front windows of the Continental National bank, 12th and O streets.

Two-thirds of the collection, which totals 275 insignias, is being shown in the bank windows. The other third is on display in the Omaha Public Library.

The insignias represent every operating passenger air line in the world. Many of them are very rare, and according to friends of Miss Franke, the collection has a priceless value.

One particular insignia brought a buying offer of $500. Though the collection has not been evaluated, a similar one was valued at $1,500 in the Chicago Hobby show of 1949.

Began in 1947

Miss Franke's collection began in 1947 when a friend gave her a few stickers as souvenirs. This prompted her to begin collecting them as a hobby. The present collection was formed through writing to air line companies, and to collectors who had the same hobby. About a dozen people in different parts of the world collect air line insignias.

Many of the air lines whose insignias are included in the collection have consolidated or discontinued operation, thus increasing the value of the insignias. The most valuable one in Miss Franke's collection is the red and silver of TWA, with the name "Lindbergh Line" on it.

Most Colorful

Among the most colorful are the "Malayans Line," the Sabena Belgium Air Lines" to the Congo with their savage dress marking, and the "Teal Line" of Australia, known as the Alphabet Line." The latter company initials the luggage of each passenger with the letter of the last name, and the name of the air line—thus a name becomes "A Teal," etc.

The world's first air line "K.L.M.'s" (Royal Dutch) and the "B.O.A.C.'s" (British Overseas Air Lines) have a number of different insignias, each honoring the country to which the air flights go.

Other countries represented in the collection are Iran, Ethiopia, the Holy Land, China, Iceland, and West Africa.

Student Congress Plans Conference

The second World Student Congress of the International Union of Students has been announced by the National Students Association for Aug. 14 to 28 in Prague, Czechoslovakia.

According to NSA, the conference will offer the "students opportunity to meet and discuss their major aims and problems." Students from more than 64 countries are planning to attend the meetings.

The committee for International Student Cooperation since its formation in 1948 has been working to increase American participation in the world student movement.

According to the NSA release, the aim and purpose of CISC has been stated as to "provide American Students with factual information about the IUS; establish means by which American students can avail themselves of the travel opportunities and participate in the intercultural and other activities of the IUS."

Phi Delta Kappa Hears W. O. Reed

Phi Delta Kappa members were told that Nebraska is building a strong system of community-centered, locally-controlled schools by State Supt. Wayne O. Reed at the annual banquet of the group held in the Union Wednesday.

The honorary education fraternity heard Reed compliment the newly revised course of study for Nebraska elementary schools. He stated that Nebraska has taken national leadership in organizing such institutions as Cornhusker Boys and Girls State and county governments.

These institutions, he said, develop outstanding media for the practice of good citizenship.

Reed reviewed some of the outstanding advancements in elementary and secondary education during the eight years he has served as state superintendent of public instruction, and called on his listeners to continue to work with the parents of Nebraska to further improve their children's educational opportunities.

Visual Aids, Book Displays, Close Today

Today is the last day to view the annual Textbook and Audio-visual Aids Exhibits in Burnett hall.

Textbooks for elementary, junior and senior high schools have been on display this week for the benefit of teachers and superintendents attending the summer session.

This year, the audio-visual aids exhibit was held in conjunction with the textbook display. The latest equipment for showing films, slides, photographs etc. will be on display today for the last time.

Though smaller exhibits are shown throughout the state during the school year, this show is the only extensive display of materials for the classroom offered by approximately 25 textbook and supply companies.

The display has been under the direction of H. B. Vifquain, secretary-treasurer of the Nebraska Bookmens association.

Hours which the exhibit will be open today are 9 a. m. to noon, and 1 to 4 p. m.

All-Staters To Appear in Band Concert

All-State fine arts students who have been practicing in the band for the past two weeks will show their talents Sunday, June 25 at 7:30 p. m. in the Union ballroom. Under the direction of Russell Suppiger, director of instrumental music, Maywood, Ill., and Walter Olsen, director of music at Fremont, the All-Staters will present a program of eight musical numbers.

Split Program

Three pieces will be conducted by Olsen, while guest conductor Suppiger will conduct the remainder of the program. A variety of pieces has been planned, including two symphonic numbers and several marches.

Eight Numbers

The program is as follows: Themes from the First Roman-Rhapsody, Eensco; Chit Chat (Polka), Strauss; Liberty (March), Morris. Mr. Olsen, Conducting. Hymn of Freedom, Brahms First Symphony, Brahms; Shalimar (Overture), Buchtel; Vanished Army (March), Alford;

NU Sponsors Crops Field Day

The University agricultural substation at North Platte sponsored an annual crops field day Wednesday.

Speakers at the meet included Dr. W. V. Lambert, dean of the College of Agriculture, Dr. M. L. Baker, and W. W. Burr, also of the University.

"A penny for your thoughts."

City Businessman Aids Pound Fund

Frank H. Woods, prominent Lincoln businessman, has donated $5,000 to the Roscoe Pound Lectureship Fund announced recently by Earl Cline, Chairman of the Nebraska Bar Association Pound Lectureship committee.

The gift was made to the University Foundation which will administer the fund. The Nebraska Bar is endeavoring to raise $50,000 for the fund, income from which will be used to finance an annual series of lectures at the University's College of Law by prominent jurists and other outstanding authorities.

The Lectureship was inaugurated by Dr. Pound who gave a series of three lectures at the University recently.

Both Mr. Cline and Dean Edmund Belsheim of the University's Law College praised Mr. Woods' gift highly.

Insect Control Has NU Hearing

The basic problems of insect control in ten midwestern states were discussed at a meeting of a Great Plains council sub-committee on entomology Wednesday at the University of Nebraska Student Union.

The committee's findings will be incorporated into a comprehensive report to be given to U. S. Department of Agriculture and land grant colleges officials. States represented at the session were Montana, Colorado, North and South Dakota, Wyoming, and Nebraska. Other states on the committee but not represented are Kansas, Texas, Oklahoma, and Arizona.

Dr. George Gilbertson, Agricultural Extension Service Director in South Dakota, is chairman of the committee. Dr. Ephraim Hixson represented the University of Nebraska.
