

Negro Folklore and Dances Final Artist Series Feature

American Negro Folklore will be presented as the final program in the 1950 Summer Artist Series, when the Katherine Flowers Dancers appear in "Bamboula to Bop," Wednesday, July 19, at 8 p.m. in the air-conditioned Union ballroom.

Dances dating back 300 years in American Negro folklore form part of this entertainment. Old dance forms with all their traditions, humor, subtlety, and color have been brought back to life, and in them there may be detected the historical antecedents of some of our seemingly most modern theatre.

There is a considerable variety—primitive dance rituals springing from the Voodoo Snake Worship and Black Magic of the Louisiana Creoles, the gay and delightful social dance that became the famous Cake Walk, the fast and furious Bamboula itself, theatrical source materials and street cries, and "Be-Bop."

The dances are staged by Katherine Flowers, a Northwestern University graduate and former teacher of Women's Physical Education in the Chicago schools. Her narrations briefly introduce historical situations and atmosphere. Six dancers, who also play Congo drums and piano, form the troupe.

Katherine Flowers wanted to discover the secret of the unusual and basic ability of the Negro to dance as he does, so she combined the study of Anthropology with dance while a student. Then she traveled the South investigating the origins of these famous dances among the Negroes.

At present, she is working on a book, a compilation of her findings. She has authored many newspaper and magazine articles on American Negro Dance.

The program presented by the 1950 Summer Sessions and the Union will be free to students, faculty, and guests of the University.

Art Teacher Gets Fullbright Scholarship

LeRoy Burket, University art instructor, is the recipient of a 1950 Fullbright Award, Dean R. W. Goss of the Graduate College has announced.

Burket will leave for Paris, France in August where he will study for the next school year at the Sorbonne and later at the Ecole National Supérieure de Beaux Arts. He has been given a year's leave of absence from the University.

A native of Iowa, Burket holds a bachelors and masters degree in fine arts from the University of Iowa. He joined the University of Nebraska faculty in 1948.

Purchase Prize

Last year one of his oil paintings "Rock Inhabitants," won a $200 purchase prize at the Ninth Annual Missouri Exhibition held in St. Louis. In 1949 also, one of his sculptures, "Figure," done in Georgian marble, was selected for exhibition in the Third International Sculpture Show in Philadelphia, one of the foremost exhibitions of its kind. Other paintings and drawings by Burket have been shown at the Walker Art Center in Minnesota, the Colorado Springs Art Center, Joslyn Art Museum in Omaha and the Mulvane Art Museum in Topeka, Kas.

Fullbright Award winners get transportation, allowances for books and supplies, free tuition, and living allowance. Funds used are foreign currencies realized through U. S. surplus property sales abroad.

The University's Art Department currently has another member of its faculty—Hal Wilmuth—studying in Rome as a Fullbright scholar for the 1949-50 school year.

Ag Professor Tells Graduate Job Placements

Dr. F. D. Weim, chairman of the agronomy department of the University has announced that several graduates of the University have accepted positions at other schools and will continue their graduate work this fall.

Leroy Nittler of Geneva, who received his masters degree with a major in agronomy will continue his graduate studies in plant breeding at Cornell University.

Elmer Remmenga, who graduated with high distinction in June with a Bachelor of Science degree, has accepted a position as assistant statistician in agronomy at Purdue University. In addition he will have the opportunity to work toward his Doctor's degree.

Merle Teel, who will receive his masters degree at the end of summer school with a major in agronomy, has accepted a position as instructor in agronomy at Purdue University. He will also continue his graduate work.

Donald Smith, who has been a graduate student in agronomy the past year, reports to Cornell University where he will continue his graduate studies in plant genetics.

In addition, Dr. Keim reported that Dr. Rosalind Morris recently returned to the University from California Institute of Technology, at Pasadena, Calif., where she had spent the past year on a faculty fellowship working in plant cytogenetics.

Margaret Fedde Accepts European Home Ec Jobs

Miss Margaret Fedde, who has just retired as chairman of the home economics department at the University will soon go overseas to accept two assignments.

Miss Fedde, who retired only July 1, from her position at the University will accept an assignment with the State Department in Germany for three months. Then, she will be on the staff of the Women's College at the University of Beirut in Lebanon.

The Nebraskan goes to Washington Aug. 14 to 19 to attend a seminar preparatory to her trip to Germany. In Germany, she will be working with the newly appointed director of Home Economics in the State of Hesse. Germany in the American zone is using the pattern of the land-grant colleges of the United States wherein programs in teaching, research and extension are unified and coordinated under one head.

Following her Germany assignment, Miss Fedde will join the staff at the University of Beirut in Lebanon. There she will assist with the teaching and administration of the home economics program and advise other colleges in the area.

After her six months service in Lebanon, Miss Fedde will continue around the world with Miss Alma Fritchhoff of Omaha, a graduate of the University and
