

Smart Coeds Plan Flexible Wardrobes

To incoming coeds—plan your college wardrobe simply but conclusively.

Don't come to Nebraska with the idea that you must have an entirely new wardrobe... and lots of it.

With practical knowledge of what and why Nebraska coeds wear and of what their basic wardrobe consist, you can come to college ready to pass any so-called "fashion test."

The coed's wardrobe is mainly built around two items—the sweater and skirt. Not the baggy sweater and skirt of high school days, but the sweater and skirt with the casual and neat air.

NEBRASKA coeds plan their wardrobes with care, finding items that are fashionable and will last longer than three or four months. And the stress is on the durability and flexibility of your wardrobe.

Here at Nebraska you'll find that coeds start wearing their sweaters and skirts earlier in the fall and later in the spring than usual. Of course, this is sensible homage to the unpredictable Nebraska weather. Planning a wardrobe to fit the weather is smart business.

FOR DRESSIER occasions, you'll find that fashion-wise and budget-wise coeds choose carefully before buying. A simply cut dress, when worn with the correct accessories can change for every occasion... can change to fit the mood.

Let us remind you now that Nebraska Coeds are by no means extremists—their clothes are tasteful but simple. The practical coed has to keep in mind that her clothes will have to last for a longer time than it takes for a designer to conjure up the pronounced fads and doodads that make fashion magazines change month in and month out.

FOR THOSE traditional formal dances on campus, one formal is sufficient for the practical coed. An evening skirt might also be practical. It can be made to be adapted as to present a different appearance each time it is worn.

The Short Bob . . .

and even give a lift to those morales along about Military ball exam time.

Keeping practicability in mind, a good, strong winter coat is one very essential item. Though those light toppers may look good on the magazine model, she would surely freeze when wearing it during the cold days that Nebraska furnished. A rain coat is also another item to "come in handy."

GOING ON to the subject of playtime, college coeds still cling Destination—Fun . . .

THE FRIENDLY GREETING—Typical of the Cornhusker family are the students waving a friendly greeting to you, the new student. The whole Cornhusker family is waiting to meet you, help you with your problems, and further your abilities.

NU Students Vote for Bigger Union

A "Nebraska Next" campaign followed by an all-student vote ended in the provision for the expansion of the Student Union.

With the affirmative results of the election by the students, an additional $3 has been added to semester tuition costs, for the proposed Union addition.

The additional funds acquired by a $3 increase in tuition will permit $600,000 worth of facilities to be provided in the city and ag Unions.

Seen as essential to betterment of Union facilities are improvements in three categories: Recreational, cultural, and service.

Recreational additions would include bowling alleys, a properly equipped billiard room, a better ping pong room and a game room combined possibly with a trophy room and social dancing room.

Cultural additions proposed are informal recital reception room with wall arrangement providing for art displays and a seating capacity of 150.

Service additions will include improvement for fountain service, multiple purpose conference dining room, student organization rooms, suitable provisions for Union activities, commuters lunch room, craft and hobby shop, television-audio lounge, ticket and sales booth and auxiliary checkstand facilities.

to those old worn out blue jeans. They're every popular for picnics, studying or just plain lazying around. Remember, however, that they are strictly taboo in

A friendly smile and a warm welcome denote the personality of Duane E. Lake, director of the University Student Union.

Lake, who was recently elected national president of the association of College Unions, is head coordinator and director of the Unions on both city and ag campuses.

Working with Lake on the Student Union staff is Mrs. Genevieve Grimm, head of the Student Union activities program. Mrs. Grimm is a 1949 graduate of the University.

THE MAIN business office in the Student Union is located at the right of the front doors in the entrance hall. Directly across from this office, to the left, is the Activities office.

The job of activities director includes overseeing all phases of student participation in Union activities. Mrs. Grimm works with the Student Union board, which is made up of faculty advisors and students, in providing a program of events for the Union.

Such events and activities as Union dances, Sunday night flickers, ping pong and bridge tournaments, lessons in dancing and bridge, the craft shop, convocations, parties and even the juke box in the crib all are taken care of through the Union activities committees.

IN REALITY, it is the job of the students on the Union board and committees who carry on the work of the activities under the direction of Mrs. Grimm.

Every hour of the day finds students running errands, doing mimeograph work, refereeing ping pong tournaments at the Union.

Each year, the Union also sends Mr. Lake and one or two representatives from the Union board to national convention.

Attendance reports show that nearly 10,000 people attend Union dances throughout the year. Convocations and lectures accommodate more than 9,000 and concerts about the same number.

In addition to day-by-day activities, the Union also brings culture to the students through the appearance of nationally known concert pianists or shows such as the Stan Kenton "Innovations in Modern Music," presented last year.

Even though enrollment figures may drop, the Union will still be the center of student life on campus.

class rooms or on the campus proper when spending the afternoon in the library.

In closing, you might find this suggestion helpful. Don't stock up on your entire wardrobe before you arrive on campus. Many coeds wait until they arrive to complete their wardrobes, making sure of college fashions and buying them in a college town from college stores. Many coeds do it. It's a good idea.

Student Union Social Center Of Campus

If you're looking for a pleasant way to be educated along social recreational and cultural lines, drop around your Student Union.

Here you will find almost every kind of activity to keep you busy during your off hours. Whether it's an hour studying "cribology" over coffee in the Union Crib, or an hour studying lessons on bridge from a qualified Culbertson expert, you too, may find a home at the Union.

The variety of things to do at the Union is almost endless.

IF YOU'RE hunting for a quiet place to study, the Book Nook, located on first floor is the place to go. Or if you want to hear some records the Music room on second is furnished with hundreds of records of almost every phase of music. It's all free for the asking too.

The spacious lounge on first floor is a good place to meet friends for a chat, and the Crib is an ever-constant hub of activity as friends meet for a coke or cup of coffee.

A check stand on first floor accommodates coats, books and other items while you eat at the Campus line or the Crib, and ping pong paddles, bridge decks and other items are also checked out there.

Ping Pong tables are located in the basement of the Union, as is the Craft Shop. The Card Room is located on second floor.

The Student Union is also the center for other campus extra-curricular activities. In the basement are offices of three campus publications—The Daily Nebraskan, campus newspaper; Cornshucks, campus humor magazine; and Cornhusker, yearbook. Upstairs on third floor are offices for Builders, ISA, Corn Cobs, Tassels, Interfraternity Council, Kosmet Klub, Student Council, Red Cross College Unit, All University Fund, and many others.

'Joe College' Fashions Lean To Simplicity

WHAT TO WEAR, when to wear it, and how to look collegiate. Every college freshman faces this problem when he comes to the campus the first time.

The best answer to the problem of what to wear boils down to simplicity, whether it be in men's or women's fashions.

First of all, what to wear to class is of prime importance. The typical Joe College picture visualizing a neat appearing young man in saddles—very loud saddles—has entered a lost age, for such young men are rarely on the Nebraska campus.

Instead, a typical Joe College enters the classroom each morning in a pair of clean levis or cords with a white shirt, sleeves rolled to the elbows, or a nice looking wool pullover. The sweaters, varied in fashion, range from cashmere to a combination wool and suede barrel sweater.

When the weather gets a little cooler, brightly checked or plain colored wool shirts are worn with the levis or cords, or the necessary garbardine slacks.

Lather or suede jackets or garbadine top coats are worn during the winter months, to stem the cold winds, and when the zero mark is hit, out comes the windbreakers and hooded jackets.

Of course, every college man should have a good suit that is suitable for movie dates or for semi-formal dance. And speaking of suits, dress shirts are becoming more of a noted apparel than in previous years. They will be featured in pastel shades, almost always with French cuffs and simple cuff links.

Getting on to formal attire, contrary to beliefs, tuxedos are not a campus "must". However, they are a good item to have on hand if the budget permits, but if not, there are several shops in Lincoln that rent them for nominal fees. Many times a dark suit is suitable instead of the required "tux."

Shoes are also another item of interest on the men's fashion list. Oxfords, sponge soled loafers, casuals, and the new white suede shoes will be popular on campus this fall. All will be clean and neat in appearance.

With a wardrobe including a few of each of the items mentioned above, any college man can be called well dressed, and be the typical Joe College of today.

In summary, it takes a neat appearance, plus a good personality to fill a typical Joe College wardrobe.

Conventional Bob

This shoulder-length hairdo has lasted thru the long-hair to boyish cut areas. It has proven its popularity by the refusal of thousands of women to cut their tresses. If, as in the case above, the coed has naturally curly hair, and finds this style more becoming, nothing any sharper than a comb is allowed near the head. If you happen to look better in the shoulder-length bob, don't take a scissors to your hair... wear it in the way that suits you the best... it's conventional.
