Frosh 'Night'...

The first weeks of every school year are set aside for the freshman. All of the programs from the freshman convocation to the Dean of Women's tea are designed to acquaint and orient new students with the University campus, its traditions, its organizations and the role a new student plays in his first year at college. The emphasis is on John Smith, freshman at the University of Nebraska—it is his week to learn and benefit from the activities designated especially for him.

One of the most extensive of these programs is the annual Frosh Hop, scheduled this year for Saturday night. The "Hop" does not specialize in one certain phase of campus life, but combines the essential points of the many "orientation courses" into a full evening's entertainment. There are several reasons why we think the Frosh Hop is important to freshman. Firstly, the program probably goes further into the orientation theme than any other; secondly, it offers one of the best chances for members of the class of 1954 to become acquainted with each other; and finally, the evening is not entirely serious in nature, but offers entertainment as well.

While the emphasis is on the freshman, upperclassman may find it profitable to attend, if only for the sake of welcoming new students to the University. But whoever is present, we feel certain it will be an evening well spent and, we hope, well attended.

The Rag Congratulates...

THE UNION COMMITTEES—who were responsible for the outstanding Chancellor's Reception and Union Open house. Combining these two University traditions for the second consecutive year, these Union committees entertained successfully the 250 students and faculty members attending the function. THE COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE—for continuing the policy in not replacing lost ID cards until football tickets were purchased. This action prevented those unscrupulous students who would take advantage of the opportunity to buy another football ticket, and by such selfishness cause a shortage of activity tickets. The move by this office was designed for student protection and it deserves the commendation of all students. MEMBERS OF THE UNIVERSITY SINGERS—new and old, who are preparing to carry on the outstanding reputation this choral group has earned. THE 101 NEW FACULTY MEMBERS—who have been added to the University's 1950-51 staff. On behalf of the students, welcome to Nebraska and best wishes for a successful year.

Cords Display Style Trends In Foot Wear

By Ruth Raymond

Undoubtedly during these past few weeks of registration, standing in lines, running madly around the Nebraska campus, and in general, doing lots of footwork, the University students have been pretty conscious of their feet and shoes.

Well, maybe the feet but not so much the shoes. Fellows spend the year 'round wearing almost the same footwear, but have you ever noticed the different trends in the girls' shoes? Every once in a while, every two or three months to be exact, some fad hits the campus and the girls blossom out in a new creation for the feet.

Right now the trend seems to be towards wearing loafers. No colored ones, just the good, old brown ones. Don't let this fool you, though. Even though they might be starting out with a conservative angle, before the year is over something radical and startling will appear.

Always Variations
However standard and plain loafers might seem to be, there are already quite a few variations of this old theme. To begin with, the most widely-worn loafer this fall is the kind with a fringe flap on the front of the shoe extending towards the toe. Then we have the type with the gold bar across the instep that resembles a horse bit. (Girls do go in for the novel, don't they?)

We also have the shoe with the lattice work toe. This style may be obtained in different colors, for the gal who likes variety. Seen around the campus quite frequently, too, is the loafer with a plain piece of leather across the toe which extends over the side of the shoe.

We mustn't slight the traditional saddle shoes that some of the fairer sex are sporting this fall. Brown and white "saddles" seem to be the thing for school wear. Of course, we must realize that no one ever polishes these shoes. No matter how dirty they become, this sign of character must not be erased. The grimmer, the better.

Zippers and Crepe
Do you remember the prominent fad of last year? Everyone wore suede or leather footings with a zipper up the front. Most of these shoes had wedge heels and crepe or rubber soles. And have you forgotten the creation that looked more like a bedroom slipper than anything else? This was usually in suede, also, and seems to have been the last word in comfort. This shoe usually tied in front and came up high on the ankle in back.

We could go on about the different styles in gals shoes, but why don't you see for yourself? Just glance at a few feet during your next class or trip around the campus. Right now you'll probably see not too much variation. But give the gals time. They'll come out with a shoe that looks impossible to wear. But it'll be style and they'll all wear them.

Engineers Sell NU 'Blueprint' Subscriptions

Sporting cards to identify themselves, salesmen for the Nebraska Blueprint, monthly engineering magazine, started pushing sales on 1950 subscriptions of the magazine this week.

The magazine, written and edited by students in the College of Engineering, is starting its fiftieth season of publication this fall. Plans have been made to produce a special anniversary edition later in the year.

Salesmen by engineers, the subject matter with which it deals does not limit its subscribers to engineers. Articles dealing with Nebraska industries such as a story on the recent attempt at oil drilling, and an explanation of highway testing, together with occasional architectural subjects as a complete coverage on the almost finished Ferguson hall have been among previous articles in the monthly.

Occasionally, papers which students have written on various phases of engineering are published, and past features have included articles on campus personalities, and a regular joke page.

Subscriptions can now be obtained from any Blueprint salesman or in the Blueprint office, 306 Union, for $1.50 for eight issues.
