Russians Ask U.S. Withdrawal

The United States and five other countries called on the U.N. Security Council to order the immediate withdrawal of all Chinese troops from North Korea.

Jacob Malik replied that the Korean conflict can be peacefully settled only if the U.N. and United States withdraw from the battle.

His motion to block out the Korean question was defeated 10 to 1. The council voted 9 to 0 to put the problem of the Chinese intervention ahead of the Palestine case.

The United States, France and Britain asked the council to discuss the Chinese communist action instead of the Palestine problem.

UN Action

The security council has invited a representative from Peiping to discuss the charges that the Chinese communist forces are deployed for action against Korea and U.N. troops.

Warren R. Austin said that the attitude of the council may save the Peiping regime from a grave and tragic miscalculation.

The Korean war has resulted in a new farm land boom. Prices have climbed five per cent since last March.

Largest increases in land value have been in the corn belt and great plains states.

Bridges Destroyed

Strong allied air blows destroyed two border bridges in the supreme effort to choke off the Chinese red troops pouring into Korea.

The last of the four big hydro-electric plants which supply power to North Korea and parts of Manchuria is now in the hands of the U. S. marines as a result of a five-mile advance on the northwest front.

The U. S. superforts struck widely, dumping 10,000 fire bombs on the military center of Pukchin in north central Korea.

They loosed 96 tons of fire bombs on the red command post and supply post of Uiju. On the east coast they blasted the port of Chongjin.

Experimental Theater

A special experimental movie theater for children opened last week in Edinburgh, Scotland. Among its only rules: Adults will be admitted only if accompanied by a child.

The government is now trying to end the nationwide telephone equipment workers' strike. The union is demanding an unspecified "substantial boost" in wages that now average $1.55 to $1.62 per hour.

In Chicago a flash fire panicked 130 residents of a south side apartment. Six people are hospitalized with burns and injuries. No one was killed in what might have been a major tragedy.

Drills, Plaque Honor Vets At Ceremony

Half-time ceremonies at the Kansas State vs. Nebraska game Saturday featured a tribute to Veteran's Day theme.

The performance was put on as a tribute to the 19 N club men who were killed in World War II.

Both the Kansas State and the Nebraska bands massed on the field to honor the Veterans. Precision drills based on Army maneuvers were performed by the bands.

The Nebraska band formed a formation spelling out the word "Peace." William Day presented to Chancellor Gustavson a plaque bearing the names of the N club men who lost their lives in World War II. Gustavson accepted the plaque for the University.

Taps were sounded by the bands which were answered from the stands. The band sang "America, the Beautiful."

Pre-game ceremonies included the presentation of a flag pole by John Lawlor to the University. The combined hands then played "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Donald Lentz, conductor of University bands, was in charge of the pre-game and halftime arrangements.

Navy to Hire NU Science Graduates

The interviewers for the Naval ordnance will be at the University campus Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 15 and 16 to talk with deans and heads of the engineering, chemistry, physics and math departments and to students in these various fields.

Mr. Ralph M. Hogan, head of the manpower branch of the United States Naval ordnance department, will discuss personnel needs with the deans and department heads and will present opportunities for employment to juniors, seniors and graduates.

Those who will graduate with a bachelor's degree may earn $3,100 a year under this program and those with a master's degree can earn $3,825 a year. Dr. T. J. Thompson, dean of student affairs, said that he believes that the University is obligated to publicize this because the nation is in dire need of trained college graduates especially in these times of unrest.

Those who wish to sign up for interviews with these men should come to the office of student affairs, Room 104 at the Administration building on or before Tuesday, Nov. 14, to make the necessary arrangements and to read the available information.

Religion Life Committee Views Future

The committee for the promotion of Religion-in-Life met at a luncheon in the Union Thursday noon to evaluate this year's program.

Dick Nutt, Methodist Student Pastor, presided at the meeting of the students and pastors.

The group discussed the entire Religion-in-Life week. They pointed out the mistakes and successes of the program.

Discussion was also carried on about ways of improving the event for next year. It was decided that a more advantageous time to hold the week would be in the spring.

The committee felt that next year's program would require more careful planning in order to be completely successful.

An attempt will be made to clear the week of as many other activities as possible in order to remove any conflicting programs which might divert attention of the students from the Religion-in-Life week.

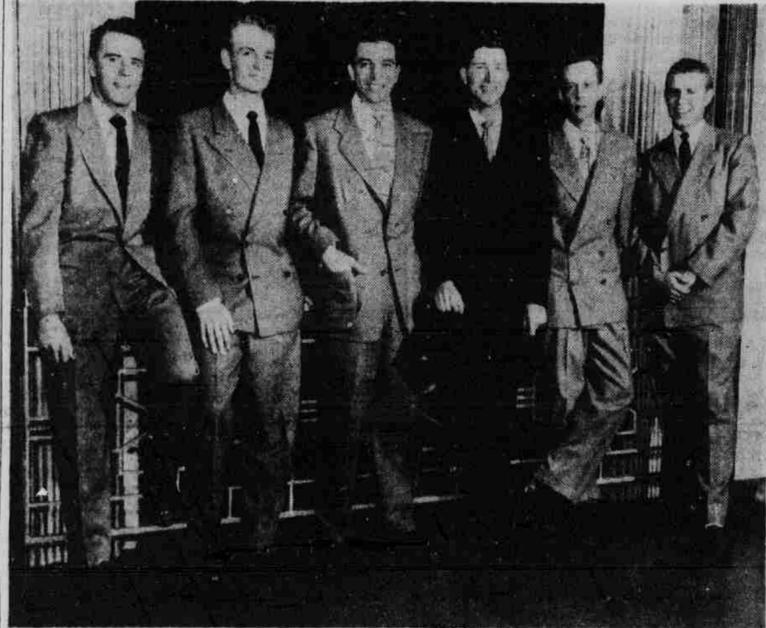

The group made plans to strive for an all campus coverage in next year's program. Tentative arrangements were discussed to cover all aspects of the succeeding event.

U.S. Ag Agent Cites Projects For Mo Basin

"The Missouri Basin Development Program," was the topic discussed by Mr. Gladwin E. Young, field representative of the U.S. agriculture department, before a joint meeting of three Ag college departmental clubs Thursday night.

"River basins have taken on special significance as units for developing and making efficient use of our wealth of natural resources," Mr. Young said. He went on to state that the Missouri river basin development program is an outstanding effort in this direction "because of its size and complexity."

"The objectives of the program stated simply," he said, "are to create new agricultural and industrial opportunities and to protect those we have."

"For the last 10 years the climate has been very kind to the people in the Missouri basin," Mr. Young said. But he added that this situation could not last forever.

"A stable foundation for agriculture in a region where drought is an unusually high risk in farming is, of course, a primary target of the program," he said.

He also said that the project is designed to contribute to flood control in the basin as well as provide irrigation.

Mr. Young emphasized that the individual farmers must carry out conservation on their farms in order to make this project work the best.

"Foremost among the contributions that you will be able to make is to go back to your home communities and become the scientific farmers, ranchers and homemakers of your generation," he told the group.

Ferguson Hall to Complete 'Moving In' Process Soon

The electrical engineering department of the University plans to start moving offices into Ferguson hall in two weeks, and to start some of the classes after Thanksgiving vacation, according to Roy M. Green, Dean of the College of Engineering and Architecture.

Some of the classes to be held in the new building will be electrical engineering 1, 100, and other general courses. It is expected that classes will be fully scheduled by second semester.

Red Brick

Ferguson hall stands on the site of old University hall, facing R street between 11th and 12th. It is red brick, trimmed with white limestone. The three story east wing will house all classrooms. The communications laboratories will be on the third floor of the east wing.

The two-story north wing will contain one large laboratory which will house the larger equipment needed for electrical engineering research. The communications laboratories, which have been in cramped quarters, will contain the radio television and electronic research equipment.

Astronomy classes will move from their present quarters into Ferguson hall. They will have one room for class work, one for storing equipment, and the roof for star study.

The University's large and small telescopes which are now on Ag campus will be moved to Ferguson hall. The section of the roof which will be used for star study will be enclosed by a seven foot wall, which will keep the lights of the city from interfering with the study.

During the construction of the new building the electrical engineering classes have been meeting in temporary buildings.

The date of the dedication of the building has not been set.
