

Female Drivers Frustrated

BY AL EDEE

This is story number 4,693 on the subject of woman drivers vs. American civilization.

Don't go overboard on the subject. Women drivers deserve comment but the wholesale supply of copy on the touchy topic has produced undesirable effects.

Women are now using their husbands as chauffeurs with the excuse that they are unable to control the 120 horsepower engines of today. They are, after all, mere women. But a popular magazine has a comment on women which is a wise one. Never underestimate the power of a woman.

Career Women

There is a peculiar brand of women now known as the career woman. This kind of woman is out to destroy the popular myth of the woman driver situation but they usually wind up destroying the new 1950 "Faithful Forever" car that was built to last for years.

The average woman is nervous behind the wheel of a automobile. She fully realizes that thousands of men who suffer their wives' and girl friends' nagging are given a sense of guiding their own destiny when directing operations on the mechanical monster of the road. The power of the engine, the strong grip of the wheel and the vivid daydreams of the hen-pecked man transform Joe Jones into the conqueror of the earth. Beware, little people, he says.

Male Conceit

The overbearing conceit of man enveloped in the low regard of the woman driver destroys his own peace of mind. The man teaching the woman to drive acts as if the lady were in the baboon family. The woman in a hysteria at all the mechanical gadgets finally gives up learning to drive. She is then content to vent her frustrations from the back seat where she is most effective.

Many brave women, however, do drive today. The same women have friends who have friends who are trying to change the accident statistics records so that men are now smirched as the main offenders of "awful" driving.

Judging Teams To Compete At Stock Show

Two University judging teams will compete in contests this week in Chicago. The livestock and the crops judging teams will both enter contests at the International show, being held there.

The crops team left last Sunday to compete against students from seven states at Kansas City Tuesday, Nov. 21, during the national collegiate crops judging contest.

They will then go on to enter the international crops judging contest at Chicago, Nov. 25.

Members of this team include Norman Swanson, Eugene Heuerman, Don Kerl, and John Wilkinson.

The livestock judging team plans to leave Thursday to compete in the Chicago International collegiate livestock judging contest also being held the 25th of Nov.

Out of the ten men who were competing for the team, the following members have been selected: Dean Eberspacher, Bob Beck, Gayle Hattan, Paul Kemling, and Rob Raun.

All ten members will work out until Thursday which means no vacation. This list may be changed without notice, according to team coach M. A. Alexander.

Tax Discussion Planned on Ag

Nebraska's taxation problems will get a full airing at the opening session of Farm and Home Week at the University Wednesday, Nov. 29.

A panel moderated by Dr. W. V. Lambert, dean of the College of Agriculture, will discuss all angles of the subject. In the group will be Charles Marshall, president of the Nebraska Farm Bureau Federation; Robert Armstrong, Omaha, former tax commissioner; Mrs. Fred Dollison, David City, rural homemaker; and R. A. Watson, Hastings, president of the Nebraska Education Association.

The Farm and Home week program will feature the latest in research in both agriculture and homemaking. Extension Dairyman C. W. Nibler, chairman of the arrangements committee, said there will be different demonstrations, exhibits and talks every day to bring Nebraska farmers and their wives up to date on the latest research.

There will be fun the first evening, too. The Lincoln Junior Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring their annual square dance for the Farm and Home week crowd. About 100 sets of square dancers attended at the University coliseum during last year's Farm and Home week.

Rag Crystal Ball Winners Told

Winners of the Daily Nebraskan Crystal Ball contest for Nov. 17 have been announced. They are:

First place: Romaine Rasmussen, entry number 7.

Second place: Charley Toogood, entry number 32.

Third place: Tony Winey, entry number 24.

The three winners correctly prognosticated every game in the contest except the Notre Dame-Kansas tie.

Three people picked the tie game but missed on other games to put them out of the contest. Toogood and Winey are both varsity football players.
