"Tomorrow" . . .

News of the international situation within the past two days, particularly the position of the United States has had a sobering effect upon the campus.

At the beginning of the semester similar thoughts and conversation were present. But with the success of the United Nations forces in late weeks came optimism.

The mood has reversed again during these past two days. Once more students are asking themselves, "What will the present situation mean to my education and my future?"

It is impossible to answer these questions—"only time will tell" as they say in the books. Theories to the final outcome will abound but nothing can be proved yet.

However, complete pessimism is not warranted yet. There is still the big "if" remaining which could change the international picture.

Asian Traveler Says Shooting War With Russians Unlikely

"I doubt if there will be an all-out shooting war with Russia in the near future."

Those are the words of John Strohm, Woodstock, Ill., author and world traveler, as he addressed the Farm and Home Days audience at the University Wednesday.

"In my judgment," said Mr. Strohm, "Russia is not prepared to fight a global, all-out atomic war because she simply does not have the industry, food, communications and transportation to do it."

in a state of semi-starvation where events could scarcely turn toward the worse.

He termed Japan as one of the brightest spots in the Far East—"whether it be war or peace."

Farm and Home Days are sponsored jointly by the Lincoln Junior Chamber of Commerce and the University.

German Technicians

But, said the correspondent for Country Gentleman, Russia has made great strides recently with German technicians.

He pointed out that the Chinese soldiers now fighting in Korea are an example of Soviet Russia's technique.

Mr. Strohm predicted a long period of semi-mobilization for this country—"as we try to anticipate Russian moves and bolster our weak defenses all over the world."

1. Pakistan is weak but pugnacious, wants to go to war with India over Kashmir.

2. India is half-starved. She depends for internal stability on the life threads of two old men—Nehru and Patel.

3. Indonesian must export to live—and yet her production has been going down and down.

4. The Philippines are ripe for a blowup.

5. The nationalists of Indo-China demand that the French withdraw their soldiers.

Mr. Strohm said we face a gigantic job if we hope to stabilize south and southeast Asia.

The natives, he said, are suspicious of the white man's imperialism. "Many of them live
