Peculiar Tactics Dominate Campus Political History

first of two installments.) By Jerry Bailey

Rambling down through the years of University history, sink-ing to a whisper while the nation was at war and rising to a roar in times of peace, has come the noise of campus politics.

University politics have for a long time been carried on in smoke-filled rooms, discussed over coffee mugs and beer glasses, and paraded openly at the time of spring and fall election days, when police raided a houses were attacked

With a last burst of activity in 1940, the Barb Union defeated the Progressive office-holders in an upset. A surprising number of Ag men assembled to cast the deciding votes. In 1941 the Barb Council and Barb Union quietly folded. A reorganized Barb Party attempted to reform the Student Council later in the year. Progressive sympathizers punched Liberal ID cards twice during the fall elections. When the Liberals tried to vote in the spring, they were told that they had voted before the polls even opened. A standing joke in those days was the sight of party candidates, go-ing over committee lists they were going to appoint even be-fore elections were held.

How about a fine woolen scarf today? There are plaids and plain. Or perhaps a warm pair of gloves-a gay headscarf? A wide assortment is available.

No, it's not a bargain basement or even a rummage sale, though chances are it soon may be if nothing is changed.

This is an example of the variety offered by the "lost and found department" of the Ag Union, official one and only department of its kind on campus. So if you've lost it, and it's small enough to go through the double doors of the Activities building, you'll probably find it among the loot stored in the checkroom of the Union.
