

Rosenlof Urges 'Sit Tight'

This is not the time for students enrolled in the University to become in anywise disturbed about their future status in relation to the draft and their call to duty in the armed forces. Every student now in school owes it to himself and to his country to remain in school and to carry on in the normal fashion. The assumption that any student will be any less fairly treated by remaining in the University and taking his chances with the Selective Service than in enlisting in the services as some have been disposed to think is not true. The great need of the armed forces is for trained personnel. University students, it is understood, would in the advantageous position to be recognized as such.

Draft boards are universally deferring students who are in good standing and continue so to the end of the current year. Many registered in the ROTC program have a further opportunity to be deferred beyond the current school year. At least 75 per cent or 80 percent or maybe more of the present freshman class will in all likelihood be accepted for the second year of basic training. The present sophomore group of almost 400 in the first semester and over 350 or thereabouts in the second semester will also be given the opportunity of advanced ROTC. Of the sophomores who complete the year of basic training, at least 60 per cent or more will be selected for advanced ROTC training and will therefore be further deferred. Once selected for advanced ROTC, the chances are very great that they will be permitted to continue to the conclusion of their advanced ROTC training and upon graduation become commissioned officers in the armed forces.

The need for trained personnel was never greater. The University has a responsibility in this regard and, therefore, urges all students now in the ROTC program to stand pat and continue with their training, in the knowledge that they will be allowed to carry on to the end so that there may be an adequate number graduating from the University in each succeeding year to provide adequately for the demand of highly trained personnel. You owe it to yourselves as students to thus seek to qualify.

Every student subject to Selective Service should know that the extension of the Selective Service act of 1948 provides as follows:

"Section 6 (d) (2), Title I. Within such number as may be prescribed by the Secretary of Defense any person who, (A) on or after the effective date of this title, is selected for enrollment of continuance in the senior division, Reserve Officers' Training corps, or the Air Reserve Officers' Training corps, or the Naval Reserve Officers' Training corps, or who, on or after the effective date of this title, is appointed a midshipman, United States Naval Reserve, and (B) agrees, in writing, to accept a commission if tendered and to serve, subject to call by the Secretary of the Army, the Secretary of the Air Force, or the Secretary of the Navy, respectively, not less than two years on active duty after receipt of a commission, shall be deferred from induction for training and service under this title until after completion or termination of the course of instruction and so long as he continues in a regular or reserve status upon being commissioned, but shall not be exempt from registration."

The strongest word the administrative officers of the University can give you is that you do not allow yourself to become hysterical or confused but rather that you "stick to your guns" as students on the campus knowing that the highly qualified people will be in as great a demand, in fact in greater demand, in the immediate future. Why not, therefore, continue on an even keel?

Any student concerned about this matter should consult with Colonel Workman of the Army, Colonel Jamieson of the Air force, and Captain Donovan of the navy. These men are all ready to advise you in a manner consistent with regulations and with your best interests in mind.

Before you take any action to drop out of school, be sure that you consult with these persons, that you may know what are your privileges and rights and that you may be guided in making right decisions.

Educational Leaders Offer Ideas on Military Deferment

The question of whether college men should be deferred from military service has drawn a number of varied replies from the nation's educational leaders. There are some, like the members of Gen. Lewis B. Hershey's advisory committee, who feel deferment should be granted to superior students. But the Association of American Universities recently issued a report urging enactment of a law to draft all men for two years of military service upon reaching the age of 18. It was felt that the critical situation warranted such a measure.

Proposals Given
But there were others who proposed less drastic steps. The New York State Association of Colleges and Universities declared that while basic military training for American youth was needed, their call to training should await their finishing of high school or college. The Rev. John Cavanaugh, president of Notre Dame university, put it this way: "The experiences of World War II have proved the need, not only in time of war, but in the vital post-war period of men trained in colleges and universities."

Meanwhile, college officials are considering the possibility of reestablishing the old wartime acceleration program, whereby a student can graduate in three years instead of the usual four. Officials frankly admit they don't like it too much; they feel it puts too much pressure on students and faculty alike.

To Consider Problems
On Jan. 19, representatives of the American Council for Education will meet to discuss these emergency problems, along with the problem of expected drop in enrollment.

Some college heads predict that the drop next year may exceed 50 per cent, in contrast to the 15 per cent drop predicted. Such a big dip would put national enrollment back to peacetime figures of 1940-41.

Look to This Story: Moral Before Leaping

The girls in a gym class at Phillips University, Enid, Okla., found themselves in hot water while back. Eager to try out the swimming pool after the installation of a new boiler, the girls dived in and came up screaming. It seems that the temperature of the water had been set at 110 degrees by mistake.

Evils of 'Witch Hunting' Told By Professor

"Witch-hunting periods in history reveal a vast and shocking contempt for human values and human lives," Dr. Paul Meadows, associate professor of sociology, said Thursday.

In a speech before the Knife and Fork club at the YWCA, Dr. Meadows discussed the much-used phrase, "witch-hunting," which refers to the persecution of non-conformists.

Analyzing several historical periods of so-called witchery and devil worship, he drew a few parallels with the present day.

Meadows explained that Peterson had said he had a list of suspected communists in Nebraska. In this connection he had promised that there never has been and never will be any hysterical witch-hunt of communism in Nebraska.

After quoting Gov. Val Peterson, the instructor stated that despite what the governor of Nebraska may think, "there never has been a witch-hunt without hysteria."

Meadows, on the other hand, asserts that any witch-hunt which occurs is bound to be hysterical. He contends that "a witch-hunt starts with anxiety, is fomented by hysteria, is led by hysterical men, and effectively silences all rational opposition."

He believes that in every case "countless numbers of innocent people, persons of integrity, have been made to suffer."

In conclusion, the University of Nebraska instructor said:

"The witch-hunt is intended to silence and intimidate opposition and criticism. Unhappily, it is easier to raise the hue and cry of Satanism than it is to reform the offending human environment. Indeed, the charge of Satanism has often been used to cloak the blackest of reaction."

Red Cross Plans War Orientation

An important Orientation meeting of the local and college Red Cross volunteer members will be held on Thursday Jan. 11. The meeting will be held at the Chapter house at 312 South 12th street at 7 p.m. All members and other interested people are urged to attend this meeting.

Those who do plan to attend are asked to notify either Dorothy Nordgren at the Chi Omega house or Mrs. Gene Grimm at the Student Union activities office.

New Training Program

In the past, the Red Cross College Unit has been considered just another activity by many of its members. Now, however, due to the impending international crisis, the training program in use during the war is being reactivated.

The protection and care of families and individuals subjected to enemy attack is a basic responsibility of all Governmental groups. Volunteer agencies, including Red Cross, participating in civil defense will serve under responsible Governmental Agencies.

The experience and resources of the Red Cross in its disaster program and other community services program will be utilized to advantage in planning and operation of civil defense.

Civil Defense

In opening the new program, the Red Cross will discuss such topics as training civil defense workers and the general public in first aid; training in home care of the sick and injured and nurse aid activities; provision of food, clothing, and temporary shelter on a mass care basis during an immediate emergency period; participation in a war-time nation-wide blood program; and making available its existing organized chapter volunteers and resources for participation in civil defense activities.

Butler U. Story Creates Furor

Freedom of the press hung in the balance for a time at Butler university when the student newspaper was threatened with disciplinary action for publishing the views of two queen candidates on whether girls should wear falsies.

Editors of the Collegian created a furor by carrying a banner story headlined, "Ellen and Helen are Firm Anti-Falsie Candidates." Public relations committee members were particularly unhappy over the story's subhead, which said, "Experts see win by a bust."

Hugh J. Phillips Receives Cancer Research Grant

HUGH J. PHILLIPS—A National Cancer Institute research fellowship of $2,000 will enable Phillips to continue cancer research at the University.

The National Cancer Institute has awarded a $2,000 fellowship to Hugh J. Phillips, advanced student in physiology.

Dr. Donald M. Pace, head of the University's physiology department said the fellowship would enable Mr. Phillips to take courses partially fulfilling requirements for the Ph.D. degree, and at the same time permit him to carry on research work related to the problem of cancer.

The study to be made by Mr. Phillips is concerned with understanding the breathing of cells, which are the basic units of all living things. He will compare the effect of cyanide on normal, healthy cells and on cancerous cells.

Dr. Pace said equipment for Mr. Phillips' research, and other studies being made in the department, would be purchased with a gift of $1,000 received this week from the University of Nebraska Foundation.

Mr. Phillips is originally from Augusta, Ga., and got his B.S. from the University of Florida. He came to Nebraska in 1947 and received his master's degree here. He has been working on the research related to cancer for the past six months. With new equipment, which has been ordered, the project will probably be completed within two years.

Bridge Tourney Starts Tuesday

Getting stale at your bridge? Unable to find anyone with the skill and endurance to tax your playing ability?

Well, here is a chance to show that you really are the Willie Hoppe of the bridge table.

The Union will hold its annual bridge tournament Jan. 9 and 10 and every one is invited to enter.

The tournament will be played off in duplicate so every one will have an opportunity to obtain the same score.

The games will be played from 4 to 6 p.m. on the appointed days in the Union game room. James Porter, who gave bridge lessons recently, will direct the tourney.

Jean Loudon, committee chairman, has announced that all students wishing to enter in the tournament should report to the Union activity office. Approximately 30 students are registered so far for the annual affair.

Last years winners were Steve Flansburg and Neil Atkinson.

Directory Released—Campus Astounded, World Comments

BY AMY PALMER

There's good news today. In spite of the international, national, local or any other small little situation you want to mention, there's still one bit of news that will indeed bring joy into your life. The Student Directories are now on sale.

It may sound impossible, implausible and imperceptible to some, but it's true.

Astonished? So is the rest of the world at the appearance of Gene Berg's latest offering to campus life.

Knowing the readers would be interested in what the rest of the world had to say with the reception of the book, your reporter hooked up her AP lines and these are the comments she heard.

In England, Sir Hower Rumppe was heard to say, "Bully for the Builders; tennis anyone?"

In France, the notorious young Pierre Guirre exclaimed when he received his copy. "Viva La France; Viva la directrice. Ma chérie, you will come to the cash-bath with me to read my new American magazine?"

Even Stalin took time to comment on the book and informed the world that Student Directories were first published in Russia in 1887 under the great benefactor and ruler Vladimir Goodivitch.

Punbanders in the black-market district of Lincoln were crushed by the announcement and made wild last minute attempts to get rid of their surplus supplies. One old timer remarked as he closed his stand, "Well, it couldn't last. I was getting good money while the shortage lasted. Even my 1942 copies were sellin'. Guess it's back to peadlin' weeds again. Where's my saxophone?"

Well that's the way the rest of the world feels about it. As for you, buy a copy and find out. They're only 50 cents and Berg has promised that the price will not be raised before President Truman enacts a price control bill.

Partying Students View Finals With Alarm; Study Inevitable

Bymie Gordon
There is no joy at old Nebraskan. Just go up to any coed and ask her.

Or any Joe College will tell you the reason.
The reason ain't pleasin'—it's the final season!

Yes, something new has come over the students at NU—in fact, they have a nu look about them. They are beginning to realize that now is the time for all good students to come to the aid of their textbooks (or vice-versa).

In other words, the students are becoming stouidous, but not by choice.

It seems most students are discovering that finals are just around the academic corner, and that they have shamefully neglected their studies. In fact, many of them have completely forgotten how to study.

So, in the public interest, we are offering some helpful advice on "how to study," or as it is popularly known—as around campus, "How to go Crazy by Getting Degrees."

The first method is commonly known as the "comfort-while-creaming" routine.

The equipment for this method includes cigarettes, some beverage (note: if a member of WTCU, warm milk will suffice), food (anything you have handy that's at all edible will do), a radio, a telephone and if you wish, your text books.

Of course, this method has its disadvantages, for it seems that by the time you have used the telephone eight or nine times, blasted the radio steadily for three or four hours and consumed the cigarettes, the beverage and the food, you are too punchy to study at all.

Intentions Good

Oh, well, you can always say your intentions were good (good for what, don't say).

Another method that has proven fairly successful is the "Learn While Sleeping" method. The equipment necessary for this arrangement consists merely of a phonograph, suitable records, ear phones and a comfortable bed.

The subject merely has to jump into bed, put on the earphones, turn on the phonograph (with the record, of course) and get ready for a very educational night of slumber.

This method has been proved to be very successful in most cases, but one experimenter of this method found its results almost disastrous.

One Wormey Schnook of Serutan Junction, Neb., tried this method. While sleeping, he turned over and his left leg accidentally turned up the volume.

You may recognize Wormey as the only man on campus with two punctured eardrums and a leopard-covered ear horn two feet long.

However, if you like to live dangerously, this is the method for you.

Study Surroundings

I would recommend a silent well-lighted room for studying purposes, but science has discovered that no person can stand more than 30 minutes of complete silence and that bright lights for any length of time might temporarily impair one's vision.

It would seem that there is

NU Delegates Asked to Attend History Meet

Faculty members and graduate students of the University history department have been invited to attend a history conference at the University of Kansas City, to be held Jan. 31 to Feb. 2.

Scholars and students from a 13-state area will take part in the conference.

Principle speakers at the three-day symposium will be Hodding Carter, magazine writer and newspaper editor; Mrs. Clyde Porter, co-author of "Across the Wide Missouri" and "Ruxton of the Rockies"; Avery Craven, professor of history at the University of Chicago; E. E. Dale of the University of Oklahoma; and Henry Nash Smith of the University of Minnesota.

A re-evaluation of the work of Frederick Jackson Turner, the first scholar to interpret American history in terms of the westward movement, will be the major topic.

Dr. Dale, author of "The Range Cattle Industry," and Dr. Craven, co-author of "Sources of Culture in the Middle West" were students of Turner's at Harvard.

Dr. Edgar Holt, University of Kansas City, is in charge of the conference. Cross activities.
