Ag Extension Service Staff Reorganization Announced

A reorganization of the Agricultural Extension Service administrative staff at the University was announced today.

E. W. Janike was named associate director of the field branch of the college of agriculture. Clyde Noyes was appointed state leader of program planning. Wesley M. Antes was formally named state 4-H club and Rural Youth leader and Guy R. Davis was appointed assistant state 4-H club leader.

The Board of Regents approved the recommendations of Dean W. V. Lambert for the reorganization plans. Dean Lambert is also director of the Extension service as well as Dean of the college of agriculture and director of the agricultural experiment station.

Gould Absent

Janike has been acting associate director for the past year in the absence of Harry G. Gould, on leave on an agricultural mission in Turkey. Gould resigned his post but will continue as administrative assistant and his leave in that capacity was approved for one year from the University.

A native of Butler county, Janike graduated from the University of Nebraska in 1930. He served as extension livestockman and district supervisor before becoming secretary of the Omaha Livestock Exchange in 1945. Upon his return to the University staff in 1949, he was made state 4-H club leader and later also was named acting Associate Director of the Extension Service.

Maunder Resigns

A. H. Maunder, in charge of program planning, has resigned his position and will remain with the Food and Agriculture organization.

NU Coach Speaks at Ag Breakfast

The poorest people in the world are the stubborn ones. This was the opinion of Marvin Franklin, University end coach and one-time navy chaplain, in his address at the pre-Easter breakfast at the Ag Union Sunday.

His speech was based on a quotation from Revelations: "Behold before thee an open door and no one can shut it unto thee."

"Our stubbornness may shut him out to the door of our own hearts," Franklin said, "the poorest people in the world are those who haven't opened their hearts."

Proceeding the address, the Ag college vocal group sang "O Loving Father," by Del Riego and "Sheep and Lambs," by Homer. Rev. Charles Kemp, YMCA secretary, offered the invocation. The closing benediction was given by Rev. Alvin Peterson of the Lutheran student house.

GRAND CHAMPION SHOWMAN—Bob Watson shows off one of his animals at the Junior Ak-Sar-Ben show, held last Saturday night. He received the title of Grand Champion Showman over four, class champion showmen by Ed Janike, state 4-H club leader. His beef, "Bright a Lady 2nd," won him the top honor. Watson's name will be engraved on a trophy presented by the Nebraska Live Stock Breeders and Feeders association.

YEA TEAM! The center of attraction, this young lady receives plenty of attention from contemporary prep cheerleaders as well as some pointers from University Yell King Frank Piccolo, (standing, right) and assistant Brick Paulson, (kneeling). The members of the NU Yell Squad held "conferences" with the enthusiastic pepsters as a part of the "get acquainted" program designed to "sell" the University to visiting high schoolers attending last week's state basketball tournament held on the campus.

Union to Hold Chess Class

David Moomaw has been entrusted by the Union to instruct chess players on a series of six, Wednesdays from 7 to 9 p.m. in the Union.

The series of lessons will include both beginning pointers and techniques for advanced players. The series will close with a chess tournament.

The lessons are sponsored by the Union recreation committee and is under the Chess club, Bill Munson is chairman. The lessons will be recreational with an hour of instruction and an hour of play.

Twenty-five persons have already registered for the Chess club, any others are invited to participate in the series of lessons.

State Index Above 1949

Business boomed in 15 of Nebraska's principal cities in 1950, suggesting general statewide prosperity, the University of Nebraska business administration college reports.

The business index for all 15 cities was 11.1 per cent above 1949, according to Dr. Edgar Z. Palmer, head of the business research department.

Chadron, the smallest reporting city, showed a business increase of 21.9, largest in the state. Dr. Palmer said all of the nine indicators used to measure business activity showed substantial increases in Chadron during the year. The largest was a 67 per cent boost in building permits.

Omaha, with a 14.3 per cent increase, was second largest in the state. Building permits were up 78.8 per cent in Omaha, gas used increased 47 per cent, newspaper advertising was 23.4 per cent, mortgages recorded 18 per cent and bank debts 16.2 per cent.

Two other cities reported increases above the state average. They were Scottsbluff with 13.7 and Grand Island with 12.7.

The percentage gain for other cities is as follows: Columbus 10.6, Nebraska City 10.5, McCook 10.5, Beatrice 10.5, Fremont 9.5, Norfolk 9.4, Hastings 7.7, Lincoln 7.6, North Platte 7.6, Holdrege 6.5, and Kearney 3.6.

The figures, Dr. Palmer explained, indicate both the influence of rising prices and the physical volume of business.

Coed Presidents (Continued From Page 1)

French, Beth Wilkins is secretary-treasurer.

Pat Wiedman will serve as the new Aquaquettes president. Claire Raisch and Elaine Esch tied for secretary. This tie will be voted off later.

Treasurer of the group is Sally Mallory. Mary Jane Weir is in charge of publicity.

New president of Rifle club is Joy Burd. Duckpins prey is Barbara Tooley and Barbara Bibeck, secretary.

NU Police Keep Peace, Friends

By DON PIEPER
If you are parked on a red line, you had better hurry and move the car.

The campus police have given out 3,000 tickets already this year and the greatest percentage of them have been for red line parking violations.

Sgt. John C. Furrow and his staff of seven officers are on patrol all hours of the day and night looking for violators of the red lines rule or of any of the many other campus ordinances.

Window peepers on 16th street, center-of-the-hot parkers, intoxicated serenaders, those without parking stickers, and the boys who won't leave their dates at the proper AWS hour are the competitors of the red line individuals for most-offense honors.

Males Like Adventure
In an effort to show their superiority over the females, the male population of NU has garnered the largest percentage of the 3,000 tickets. Of the 55 people sent to the Deans this year for third offenses, only four or five are girls. This seems to show that men assert themselves more. They would rather live dangerously.

But, students never should fear the campus cop. It is department policy the Sergeant said, for the cops to be courteous and to make university life easier for the students.

There are times though, when the best policy is a firm one. For instance, you cannot laugh it off when someone steals a copy, complete with answers, of the One Armed Driving 203 final exam.

Response Favorable
NU students have responded to this benevolent policy with what the sergeant terms "excellent cooperation."

"There could be far more trouble in a town of 7-8,000 people," he said, "than there is in this group of 7,000 University students."

Every night, the cops patrol both the city and Ag campuses. They check to see if all doors are locked, all lights out, all coeds in and all animals happy and safe. A touring cop on Ag campus once found a cow giving birth to her youngster. He immediately called an animal obstetrician to aid the process.

Sometimes things disappear from Ag too. A group of hungry thieves once made off with some university turkeys.

Biggest Headache
Traffic gives the campus policemen their biggest headache. Most of the traffic regulations on campus are similar to city laws. For example, it is illegal to drive a 1932 Rolls Royce on a campus sidewalk.

Although the policemen do all their work on foot, they can still make life rather sad for any especially reckless driver.

Sports and social events are the traffic trouble makers. Any major function at the Coliseum or stadium causes the cops a great deal of work.

Childish Tendencies
The officers who help NU students repress any childish tendencies are J. S. Sharpnack, Henry Kolb, George Barkdoll, Albert Strayer, John Lutz, Harry Wolfe, Claude Lane and Sergeant Furrow.

They are devoted to keeping peace. But they will also help pull a stalled car, retrieve stolen articles or expell a many-times offender of the laws. They design and distribute the parking stickers. And they try to provide parking space for everyone who desires it.

They are the law, but they are also real nice guys.

IF IN DOUBT, ASK A COP—

And it seems that these high school cops attending the recent state tourney, couldn't have sought better advice. Shown above (center, left) pointing out the directions for the desired destination is Sgt. John Furrow. At right is Henry Kolb, another regular campus cop. A friendly policy toward all students at the University has been followed by the campus police in the belief that it pays off in the long run. The cops carried on a valuable service last week in showing the same courtesy to prep visitors and other crowds present at the championship tournament.

A panel of leading educational psychologists under the direction of Dr. D. A. Worcester, of the educational psychology department at the University, discussed the ideas used by other schools teaching similar subjects. The schools participating in the panel were Ohio State university,

"Growing interest in the improvement of teaching effectiveness at the college level is evident in certain places," said Dr. Warren G. Baller, of the educational psychology department.

He has recently returned from a meeting of the National Council of College Teachers of Education in Atlantic City, New Jersey. The council is a part of the American Association of School Administration which is America's annual big teacher's meeting. Approximately ten to twelve thousand persons attended the affair.

Teaching Principles Don't Make Teachers

The interest in the improvement of college level teaching was summed up in the discussion of the group in educational psychology: "How do you teach beginning courses in educational psychology?" The group decided that these courses were unsatisfactorily taught and developed two ideas for improvement. The teacher must realize that most persons in these type of classes do not want or plan to be professors in psychology and that principles of teaching, alone, do not make teachers.

One idea was consistent throughout the discussion. This was the emphasis upon helping the young instructors to appraise the effectiveness of their teaching. The appraisal could be accomplished by visiting the classes of other instructors who teach the same subject; having more experienced staff members visit the younger teachers class; tape recording of class sessions with the other staff members helping to analyze the results; regular scheduled meetings of the staff to discuss their work and method; and student rating scales.

Employing Program

These procedures are being employed in the program of the educational psychology department of the University.

Many experiments are being tried in colleges to teach beginning educational psychology more effectively. Round table group discussions; groups of students of small tables cooperatively working out daily work and tests (learning group grade); play back of recordings for class discussion; use of films on human behavior and development; and case studies interpreted by the class, are some of the experiments being used in other colleges.

Dr. Baller said that plans were being made to hold a conference at the University for instructors in Nebraska who were teaching introductory educational psychology. This is being tried as one more step toward securing more uniformity in courses and improvement in instruction.

Applications for Washington Summer Seminar Available

The Washington Student Citizenship Seminar sponsored by the National YWCA and YMCA will be held again this year in Washington, D. C. This is a summer project which gives students an opportunity for a job in any several government offices, and is open to both men and women of all races, creeds and beliefs.

Earnings Used

"Most students can pay for all seminar, living and travel expenses out of their earnings," said Miss Shinn, University YWCA director and assistant director of the seminar last year. The average receives $10 a day, but most of this is spent in Washington, D. C., due to the high cost of living, said Miss Shinn.

Those applying will have preference if they can do stenographic work or are campus leaders. However, others are accepted.

Four evenings a week during the seminar are spent in session with senators, administrators, visiting the White House and President.

For Good Citizenship

The project is not designed especially for political science or professional political workers, but for anyone interested in future good citizenship. The students do not engage in political action as they are employed in government positions.

Student interested in these summer projects may see colored slides on these summer projects Tuesday at 12:30, 3:30 and 4:30 p.m. on the third floor of the Union. Here they will be told additional information concerning the Washington Student Citizenship Seminar.

Law College Offers Exams

Aptitude examinations for entry into the University law college will be given Friday, March 30, and arrangements should be made now by those wishing to take the exams. Dean E. O. Belsham, dean of the college of Law announced.

The examinations will require a total of about seven hours and will be given two periods in room 202 of the law college. The first half will occupy Friday afternoon on March 30. The second half will be given Saturday morning, March 31.

Dean Belsham explained that all students who enter the college next fall will be required to take the examinations. Even students who are uncertain as to whether they will be on the campus next fall should take the examinations this spring, he suggested.

The minimum requirements for admission to the college is completion of 63 hours of undergraduate work.
