GOP Invites Mac to Speak To Congress
"There is a possibility that Gen. Douglas MacArthur may be back in the United States in a week to address congress, according to House Republican Leader Martin.

Republicans, who are very upset about MacArthur's dismissal, have invited the general to address a joint meeting of congress and are sponsoring such a resolution. It will be considered by the house rules committee today and Martin said that he is sure that both the house and the senate will approve it.

Martin isn't sure how the senate feels about the proposal, however. Senator Kerr of Oklahoma, democrat, said that he believed that it would be unwise for the general to speak to congress and he will try to prevent it.

In case the democrats fight the resolution, republicans are thinking of renting a large hall for a party conference at which everyone would be invited.

Martin talked to MacArthur by telephone and said that he is "ready and eager" to accept a congressional invitation. Informed sources in Tokyo.

TRUMAN EXPLAINS HIS SITUATION, POLICY
President Truman spoke to the American people Wednesday night and told them why he fired Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

The president said that his policy is aimed at preventing a third World War and the policies of MacArthur are not in agreement with those.

"We do not want to see the conflict in Korea extended," he said. "We are trying to prevent a world war—not start one."

He made it clear that if a threatened new mass offensive by the communists in Korea is crushed, the Reds may decide that further aggression there or elsewhere is "folly."

The president praised Ridgway saying that as commander of the Eighth army in Korea he has shown the qualities of leadership needed for his new job.

Mr. Truman said that "real peace" could be obtained if three conditions are present:
"One: The fighting must stop.
"Two: Concrete steps must be taken to insure that the fighting will not break out again.
"Three: There must be an end to aggression."

College Days Plans Told By Library

Love Library's College Days plans include a schedule of 15 minute tours and continuous open house. John D. Chapman, division librarian, will be in charge of arrangements for displays, tours and demonstrations.

Tours will be conducted Thursday, April 26, from 9 a.m. to 12 noon, from 2 to 5 p.m. and 12 noon and Saturday's between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Definite Route
A definite route through the library will be followed during each tour. Visitors will first see the study rooms on first floor and the new study room with coffee and coffee machines. Next they will be shown the humanities reading room, the filing room and the storage section.

A special feature of the tour will be the showing of the microfilm device which enables persons to read rare books of which film strips have been made.

Another feature set up by the library will be a display on second floor. The display will show a collection of extremely rare books which are usually kept under lock and key. Mr. Chapman will explain and answer questions about the display, which will include a number of first editions and classics.

Complete Showing
The aim of the library's College Days committee is "to let the students and alumni see every part of the first and second floors of the library, if they so desire."

"We want the visitors," said the committee, "to realize that Love Library is a pretty wonderful place to study."

It Happened At NU

Many University students were surprised and disgusted to find the door leading to the room in which their eight o'clock was held firmly closed and locked Wednesday morning.

A certain professor had become rather tired of having his lectures interrupted by the constant stream of students at 8:05 a.m. who couldn't quite get up in time to get to class at the traditional eight o'clock.

A unique idea—one that caught many students off guard—one that might prove extremely effective.

Jr.-Sr. Class Day Changed To April 20

Junior-senior class day has been postponed until Friday, April 20. Aaron Schmidt, chairman of the class day activities, stated that weather conditions forced the postponement.

The competition between junior and senior class members will be held in Pioneer park. A softball game between the Motor Boards and junior coeds will be one of the features of the day. All women who wish to play on class teams should contact Pat Wiedman, 6-2440.

Henry Cech, chairman of the softball game between the Innocents and junior men, said that if enough students are interested other games will be scheduled. All men wishing to enter the competition should call Cech at 3-1690.

Mixed games will follow the club competition. These include sack races, egg throwing and three-legged races. At the end of the day scores for each class will be computed. On Ivy Day the losing class will present the winners with a trophy.

The junior and seniors hope to establish a new tradition on the University campus. All fellow class members are urged to participate.

Seventy-Two Coeds to Attend Cheerleading Practice Today—Final Tryouts Thursday

Seventy-two University coeds will attend a cheerleading practice from 3 to 5 p.m. on the Coliseum stage today.

Frank Piccolo, Brick Paulson, Don Devries, George Hancock, Dick Clausen and Leonard Kehl will supervise the yell squad workout for the coeds that have indicated interest in being on the squad for next year.

Piccolo, yell king for this year's squad, has asked that everyone attend the practice today. No elimination will result from not attending the practice, but the men who are to direct the workouts would like to be able to help each of the seventy-two girls who will be trying-out.

Piccolo also said that "a lot of final opinion will result from the workout today."

Ag Will Vote April 23 On Constitution Change

Ag Exec members Wednesday passed a motion to set up machinery for a special all Ag student election April 23.

The long consideration on the ballot will be the proposed amendment to the Ag Exec board constitution that provides authorized Ag college organizations representation to the board. It also guarantees proportional representation of men and women.

Little opposition was voiced as Carl Gerwick, chairman of a Voc Ag association committee, submitted the proposal and opened the floor to questions. He asked, however, that the amendment be left in its present draft.

Weeks of Debate
The action followed several weeks of debate that saw many portions of the amendment ironed out and others left as ammunition for a constitutional committee next year.

The only question during the Wednesday meeting centered around the technicality of whether the two weeks had elapsed between point of submitting an Ag Exec board amendment and the actual approval by the board.

It was agreed that this requirement had been met through six previous sessions of all clubs discussing and altering the bill.

In a nutshell, the amendment provides: Representation from any authorized group on Ag campus. This includes religious, honorary, departmental and service groups. One member will be allowed for the first ten members average attendance, and an additional member for the next 50.

There shall be two hold-over members elected from the Ag Exec board itself in the spring to serve the following fall.

If after the next year's members are chosen by the clubs, the ratio of men and women on the Ag Exec board is not the same as the ratio of men to women students enrolled in the college, an election shall be held to fill the ranks. This election is designed to act as a guarantee to the women and will be held in the fall of the year.

Pick Members in April
Organizations will vote to pick their member or members at their last meeting in April.

The all Ag campus election necessary to alter the constitution was named for Monday, April 23, between the hours of 9 a. m. and 5 p. m. The election booth will be set up in the Ag Union.

Eugene Robinson, board member, made the point that adequate publicity of the proposal and its effect it will have upon the Ag student governing system is a necessity.

He suggested that everyone "in the know" talk over the idea with their friends and in their organizations prior to the election, in the hope that the entire student body will "get out and vote" and make an intelligent decision.

A few weak points in the proposed amendment are evident, the committee admits, but just about everyone on Ag campus feels that this is the right kind of change in the governing system.

Students Offered Interview Jobs

Students who need some extra pocket money may find their opportunity this weekend.

Language, English Classes Give Plans for College Days

The departments of language and English have announced their plans for participation in College Days activities, April 26 to 28.

William K. Pfeiler, overall chairman for College Days projects of the language department, will work with Dr. Boyd G. Carter and Charles W. Colman in managing College Days activities.

Dr. Carter will have charge of the romance languages part and Colman, the Germanic languages. Both sections will hold open houses during tours.

Classroom tours will be conducted in order that College Days visitors may see the work done in the speech laboratories. Work done on the short wave reception sets and other language devices will be demonstrated.

Tours Thursday and Friday
Tours through the Germanic lab and the romance lab will be taken only between 2 and 5 p.m., Thursday, April 26 and between 9 a.m. and 12 noon Friday.

Language instructors, however, will be in their offices at all times during College Days to consult with people interested in language. They can be reached in Rooms 301, 302, 303, 304, 325, 327, and 328, Burnett hall.

College Days plans for the English department are under the leadership of Dr. Chris C. Pulos and several graduate assistants. Classroom tours will be held Thursday and Friday, with actual classes in session.

Several classes have been planned specially for College Days visitors. At 9 a.m., Thursday, April 26 a special class for high school students will be conducted by Dr. Kenneth Forward. The class will concern freshman English and classification by registration examinations. The class may be attended by from 20 to 40 high school students.

Friday at 9 a.m., an English 12 class will be held for 10 to 30 visitors. Oral reports will be given by class members on vacations.

Orin Stepanek or Miss Bernice Slote, professors of English, will conduct a special class Friday at 10 a.m. The class will explain sophomore literature and poetry records. There will be accommodations for 30 high school students.

Each group of College Days visitors who wish to see the English department will report to Room 124, Andrews hall. There an assistant in the English department will meet them to guide and explain the tours and classroom sessions.

Cosmos Slate Carnival Show For Saturday

"Midway Marvel" Cosmopolitan club's new show will be given Saturday, April 14, at 9:30 p.m. in the Union ballroom with a Nigerian dance as the first number.

The show is woven around a carnival and circus theme. It will feature Linda Sirks on the piano with her rendition of "Rigoletto." Illar, son of the imported pianist, will do a curtain number about "The Flea." These acts represent the European contributions to the program.

A Persian conception of a dream will be danced by Lois McGlashan.

Patsy Dutton will do one of her pantomime numbers as another of the several curtain acts.

Some studies in rhythm by a six-piece South American combo will compose a good part of the evening's entertainment.

Albers Sorenson's orchestra has been engaged to play for the dancing following the show. This will last from 8 until 12 p.m. Dancers may wear costumes if they wish. A prize will be awarded to the wearer of the best costume.

Admission price for the show and dance is $1.

Friday the 13th Jinx Haunts Coed

The wind howled and lashed at attacking all the buildings within its reach. It forced the schools of snowflakes into momentary spins in the streets.

The night was an inky blackness—impenetrable—or so it seemed to the listless little coed who stood at the window of her room, abstractly looking out on the dreary scene in which the elements were the actors.

Suddenly, as if by impulse, she whirled to find herself facing a brightly lighted, cheery room again. She had a distasteful look on her face, as though she had just gulped down a bottle of castor oil.

Roommate Unconcerned
"I don't like it!" she asserted disgustedly.

reading the latest issue of the "Hollywood Scandal Sheet," looked up questioningly.

"Do you know what day tomorrow is?" she asked the girl on the floor.

"Friday, of course," came the disinterested answer.

"Friday—sure—but what Friday?" she persisted.

"How should I know? I never keep track of dates anymore."

"Friday the 13th, stupid!" she burst out exasperatedly.

When a matter-of-fact "Who cares?" came to her from below, Suzie Superstitious remained silent. She had no more to say. In fact, she couldn't say anything. She hadn't been squelched. She was just scared.

Still Scared
She had done all her lessons for the following day. She had no tests in any of her subjects. She was pinned. Nevertheless, she was scared.

Suzie became disgusted all over again when she remembered that her roommate had four big tests the next day—and on top of that, she still didn't have a date for the big formal that weekend.

"She should be concerned—the fool!" thought Suzie, already in agony over the Friday 13th idea.

That night, Suzie kissed her four-leaf clover, hung her rabbit's foot around her neck, rubbed her lucky penny on the backs of both hands, dusted her face with a special powder designed to keep off evil spirits, and, with her fingers crossed, she trudged off to bed.

Her roommate retired as usual.

Both girls went through their pre-class day primping rituals. They attended their classes as usual, not seeing each other until suppertime.

The dinner bell rang. The girls sat down together at the evening meal.

Suzie was the first to speak. "I never should have gotten up today!" she concluded, realizing it too late.

"Why?"

"Do you know what those awful instructors did today? They must have all gotten together to conspire against me. All of them sprung surprise quizzes! I've never seen anything so atrocious in all my life! I'll bet I flunked them all. I didn't know a thing!" came the cloudburst of adjectives.

"That's too bad," her roommate returned, half sympathetically.

"My instructors cancelled their classes today. Had too many other things to do besides making up tests, I guess."

Luck Runs Out Again
Suzie was in misery. "And that isn't all," she wailed. "That silly pinmate of mine had to come down with the chicken-pox today! He will be quarantined for the next two weeks! That means we won't be going to the big formal like I'd planned!"

"Oh, I meant to tell you," her companion babbled, as if she hadn't heard a word the other had said, "Rod Razorback, that All-American that all the girls have been dying to go with, asked me to go to the formal this weekend. He said he'd been in student health with measles all week, or he'd have asked me sooner."

Suzie groaned and slumped back in her chair. She wasn't hungry anymore.

"How can some people be so lucky—and especially on Friday the 13th?" she asked herself.
