

Audience Shows Wild Enthusiasm For Duke Ellington's Concert

By Art Epstein
For the fine reception that Duke Ellington and his band received last night from the students of the University and the people of Lincoln, the entire crew wants you to know that they "Love You Madly." To say the least, the wild enthusiasm that the crowd had for the pieces that the royalty of ultra-modern music, Duke Ellington, played was not a show of courtesy, but rather a personal response to truly wonderful music.

"The Moochie," first offered of a medley of three songs, is a medley that has been in and out of the Ellington library since its first recording in 1928. Quentin Jackson trombone, Nelson Williams trumpet, and Russell Procope alto sax, were featured soloists for the first number. Second in the trio was Jaun Tizol playing a valve trombone solo on "Caravan," a song that he and the Duke wrote. Final of the group of three was "Ring Dem Bells" that Ellington wrote in 1930.

Featured Solo
Harry Carney played the featured solo on the "bari-sax" on a song that really fitted the title of "Frustration." After the tremendous sax solo, the mystery of the phrase of "love you madly" was lifted when the girl vocalist Barbara Windfield sang the song of the same name. As far as pop tunes go, "Madly" should be one of Duke's top sellers. The song should be out very shortly. Following the single number that Barbara sang trumpet man "Cat" Anderson took off on "Coloratura." This piece showed that the "Cat" can really reach that high register for which he is so famous. Paul Gonsalves played the kind of sax that has the audience jumping in their seats. Paul gave his version of the Ellington theme song, "Take the 'A' Train."

The last score before intermission was the piece that made the show sound like a great concert. The tune "Harlem," was to remind one of the five senses. From the first two notes that Ray Nance used to introduce the number to the final beat the audience was under the spell of the music. When the final note did sound, everyone in the audience was limp and exhausted, but in a frame of mind that left them completely satisfied of what they had just heard. The applause for that number was enough to shake the foundation, it was that well accepted.

Before Its Time
After the intermission the first score that was played was "Controversial." This song was the fight of the music to come as to what it was in the past. The first part of the two piece score was entitled "Later." This music is beyond a doubt ten years before its time. The second part, "Before My Time" went back to before Dixie. Feature on the second portion was a combo of Russell Procope, Harold Baker and Quentin Jackson.

Misled Men Hand Corsage Money to AUF

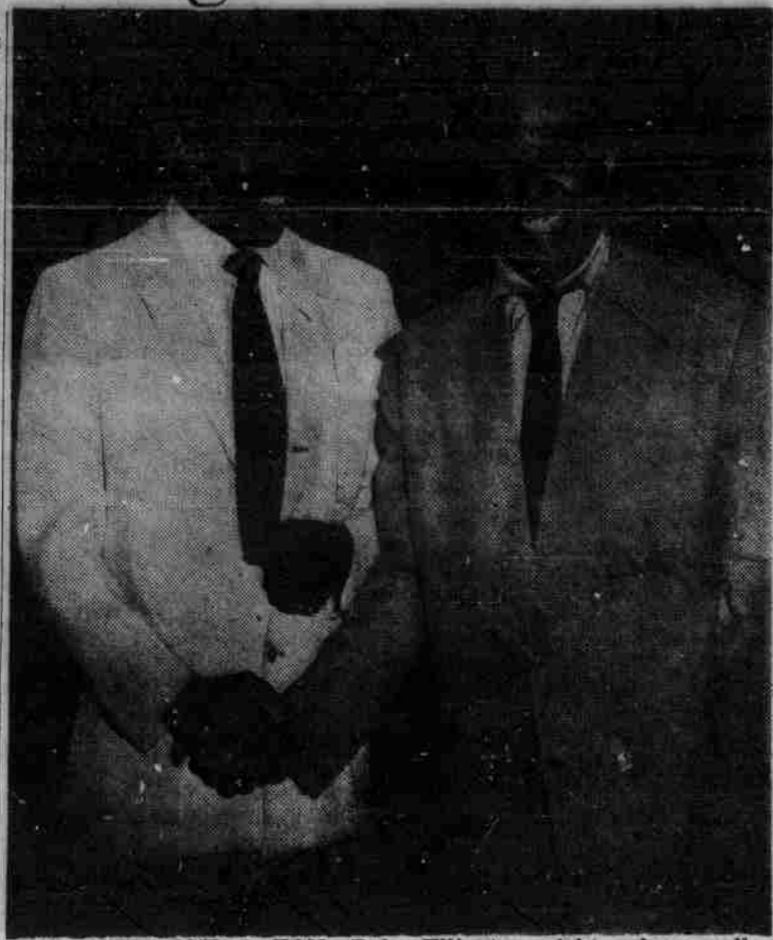

Save money?
The boys in 1948 thought they would when corsage for the junior-senior prom were banned. They soon discovered, however, that they would be asked to donate this money to AUF.

AUF collections were taken at the door the night of the prom by members of the Innocents Society, sponsors of the prom.

Also prom goes this year will have a dime more when they leave than those who went in 1948. The tickets this year are $1.90. They were $2.00 in 1948.

During the war, proms were discontinued because of the shortage of man-power. In 1941, however, Count Basic played and for the first time, boys without tuxedos were allowed to wear business suits.

Another practice which changed with the prom in 1941 was that of any girl entering her name for prom queen. Last year, Cornhusker beauty queens were announced at the prom instead of a prom queen. This year the queen will be chosen from the candidates submitted from each organized women's house.

featured three of the top Ellington artists. In "Duet," Wendell Marshall, bass, and Jimmy Hamilton, clarinet, played terrific harmony together. The "Threesome" was a show stopper. Lewie Bellson on the drums proved to be the people that in a year he will be the best drummer in the business. He had the audience in a state of suspense all through his performance.

The Amendment

The amendment is proposed to replace or change in part, points b, c, d, e, f, g, and h under provision 1; points a and b, under provision 2, and points a and b under provision 4 of section II, article II of the present constitution.

1. Method of selection and election:
 - a. This will remain unaltered.
 - b. There shall be representation from any authorized group on the Agricultural college campus that meets the standard of one (1) or more meetings per month during the nine school months.
 - (1) This representation shall be based on the average actual attendance of members at regularly scheduled meetings during the preceding semester.
 - (a) Any otherwise qualified organization shall have a minimum average attendance of ten members for the first representative.
 - (b) Any otherwise qualified organization shall have a minimum average attendance of an additional fifty members for a second representative.
 - (2) All departmental, honorary, religious or other organizations meeting requirements and authorization as set forth in this constitution shall be eligible for representation.
 - (a) Initial judgment of authorization shall be left to the Agricultural Executive board.
 - (b) Final judgment of authorization shall be left to the faculty advisors of the Agricultural Executive board and the Dean of the Agriculture college.
 - (3) No student member of the Agricultural Executive board shall officially represent more than one organization.
 - c. There shall be two hold-over members elected by the Agricultural Executive board from their own membership before representatives of organizations are elected in the spring to serve the following year.
 - d. If after representatives of organizations are elected in the spring to serve the following year, the ratio of men to women on the Agricultural Executive board is not in accordance with the ratio of men to women students regularly enrolled in the Agricultural college at the beginning of the next fall semester, an all campus election shall be held to elect the woman or man to fill the ranks. Women shall elect their representatives and the men shall elect their representatives.
 - e. Point 1 will be written as point e and remain unaltered.
 - e. Time of election:
 - a. Any special members needed to be elected at large to balance the ratio (refer to point d, provision 1) shall be elected at a special campus election in the fall.
 - b. Representative members to serve on the Agricultural Executive board shall be elected by qualified organizations from their membership at their last meeting in April.
3. Vacancies:
 - a. This will remain unaltered.
 - b. This will remain unaltered.
4. Filling vacancies:
 - Vacancies in the Agricultural Executive board in that part of the membership which represents qualified organizations shall be filled by the organization from which the vacancy occurs from their membership. The organization shall fill the vacancy at their next regular meeting after a written notification of the vacancy has been given to the presiding officer or secretary of the organization by the secretary of the Agricultural Executive board. In case a qualified member is not available, or if the vacancy is not filled within thirty days, the organization shall lose representation for the remainder of the semester during which the vacancy occurred.

Louie Bellson is one terrific drummer. And any of those people who happened to hear his drum solo at the Duke Ellington concert will be quick to agree.

Such talent just doesn't come over night, though. Louie started playing drums at the age of five in the back room of his father's music store in Moline, Ill. Before joining The Duke he was with Harry James and Tommy Dorsey.

Louie, when away from his drums, is a quiet, almost shy person who takes an active interest in his surroundings. While taking a quick tour of the campus he had a 'crib' (ice cream is his most potent stimulant) and appeared on Art Epstein's program over KNU.

Although he liked the campus, he just couldn't get over the weather. "Is it really snow?" he asked when the white stuff first started coming down.

Right now Louie is on a "health kick" to regain weight lost from lack of sleep. He doesn't drink or smoke and eats three big meals a day. Besides that there are numerous lunches of ice cream and milk before and after every practice session.

His newest recording is a drum solo on the T. Dorsey record, "Do I Love You" on Columbia records.

Summer Job Filings Open

Students interested for the position of Summer Activities Co-ordinator may file now for the position.

The co-ordinator, whose job will include the supervising of all summer activity projects, will work with a summer activities board. The board will be made up of representatives from each of the activities or organizations which have summer work to be done.

The applicants may either be a man or woman and a sophomore or junior at the present time; must be planning to attend the University's 1951 summer school session; be very familiar with and interested in the campus activities and must have a weighted average of at least 4.5, certified by the registrar.

Letters of application should be placed in the Student Council mailbox in the basement of the Union not later than 5 p. m., Tuesday, April 17.

The applicants will be interviewed by the Council at the meeting Wednesday, April 18. The Summer Activities Co-ordinator will be chosen by the Council at that time.

University co-eds — Don't forget that today is the last day to apply for Coed Counselor Big Sister position. Apply in Ellen Smith hall from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. today.

Entry Deadline Saturday For Ag Sign Competition

Deadline for submitting plans in the Ag college sign contest is Saturday, April 14. All plans must be turned in to Room 202, Agricultural hall.

Ag students were oriented to the idea Monday when assignments were distributed in classrooms by the Dean requesting that all students submit their ideas.

The paper should be in the form of a plan or sketch of a sign for Ag College. On the sign must appear the name:

COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE, UNIVERSITY OF NEBRASKA.

New Ideas Needed
One sign for each of the two entrances to the campus, the cost not to exceed $125 each has been okayed by Dean W. V. Lambert. The instruction stated that new and different ideas are needed.

All students enrolled in the University along with faculty are eligible to participate in the prize winning contest. The winner with his sketches will be announced in the May issue of the Cornhusker Countryman. In addition, he will be awarded $10.

Dean Lambert and the Ag Exec board will judge the entries after the closing date and announce the winner.

Eugene Robinson, chairman of the Ag Exec board campus improvements committee, has pointed out that an engineer's drafting board is not necessary to win the contest. Dean Lambert has said that only completeness of idea and central design will be judged.

Always Delayed
The office of the Dean has worked spasmodically for the past eight years in attempts to formally name the campus. But, according to reports, it has always been a job that could be put off.

Several designs have been submitted so far and many more are expected today and tomorrow.

University students will be allowed to use student activity tickets for the baseball game and track meet on Saturday. The football game will cost one dollar to everyone, however.
