Just Postpone It...

Empty class seats greet professors. Convertible tops go down. Men perch on steps of their houses. Coeds and their dates stroll hand in hand. Crowds head for picnics.

about daily. Perhaps it's the constant reminder of the draft and possible UMT and the frequent trips of coeds to army camps or the increased number of "Pfc's" before names on envelopes.

Advantage to All to Develop Intelligence of Nation's Youth

By Rod Riggs

In the midst of the controversy about the college draft deferment and its relative justice or injustice, there seems to be one point that is constantly referred to as the crux around which the argument revolves.

Well then, something needs to be done about it. Obviously, one solution would be to have public colleges, just like the high schools are now. But this in itself would only complicate the scheme.
