No Trial Necessary To Fire Suspects
Government workers suspected of being disloyal may be fired without a trial, the Supreme Court decided by a 4 to 4 tie vote Monday.

The decision was made in the case of Dorothy Bailey, an employee of the U. S. Employment service, fired because "reasonable grounds existed" for thinking she might not be loyal to the United States. Secret FBI reports were the basis of the report.

By a 5 to 3 vote, the court decided that the decision did not concern the validity of the entire loyalty program.

Selective Service Suggests Legal Draft Dodging Methods

There is a way to dodge the draft—legally! Yes, that's right. YOU can forget your draft board and enjoy yourself at the same time.

Simple. Go abroad this summer. Local draft boards were recently authorized to issue permits to leave the United States to young men who wish to travel abroad this summer, according to word received by the Council on Student Travel from the Selective Service board.

What was that remark about the high cost of traveling?

originally planned to revise only the article in the old constitution dealing with Council representation, but careful study showed that the whole constitution needed revision.

Constitution 'Stronger'
The committee, which has worked on the constitution since September, feels that the revisions make this constitution stronger than the previous one and makes better rules for election, publicity and general conduct.

By-laws will be drawn up later so the whole may be submitted to the Board of Regents for last approval.

The council urges all students to study the new constitution thoroughly and recommend any constructive changes. Anyone with recommendations may attend the meeting where they will be considered by the student governing body and the faculty members.
