

'Duh!' Expresses Students' Attitudes Towards Last Few Weeks of School

Duh! That's the way most students feel about the last few weeks of school.

The term papers that they postponed until instructors began to demand them; the day-by-day reports that they were supposed to have kept and the books that they didn't read because they didn't have any tests in it before the final.

These students succumbed to the ancient disease known as postponitis.

Do It Now!

"Do it now," could well be the motto of the students as they spend the wee hours of the morning preparing the assignments that they should have done weeks ago.

"I'll do better next semester" is always their cry. They usually begin the next semester by keeping up, and then, well, somehow they begin to have coffee or go to a show or "out with the kids" and get behind in their studies. It happens every semester.

Rare indeed is the student who is not behind in something by the end of the semester. With an "I'll do it tomorrow" attitude, they do the things that are so much more fun than studying.

Approximately 20 to 23 hours of the day are spent in serious study toward the end of the semester by many students. They spend their daylight hours in the library ferreting out information.

During the fall semester, this is much easier for the average student to bear. The weather is usually cold, and not very good for other activities anyway. But in the spring, picnics, baseball games, swimming and numerous other activities are so much more inviting than is studying. Many potential "9" students only get "5's" because they just didn't get around to doing their assignments.

Diversed Interests

During the course of studying, the student usually paces the room, turns on the radio, reads the latest magazines and finally grudgingly sits down to work. He finds himself unable to concentrate, and as a result, takes twice as long to accomplish the appointed task.

It happens every spring.

Receipts for Cotton and Denim dance pictures must be presented at the photo laboratory Wednesday, Thursday or Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Students Saddened by Death Of NU Tradition, Corn Shucks

Students are wondering whether Corn Shucks is going to die or just fade away.

Ron Raitt, student at NU, when asked whether he was sad or glad Corn Shucks couldn't have their last issue, stated he was very sad. It reminded him of a popular song—"Old magazines never die, but Corn Shucks is fading away."

Another student when approached upon this subject announced that he was sad as he always got a big laugh out of it—too bad they don't have any jokes in it.

A group of students gathered in the Crib said "Yes, we want another issue. We're tired of reading the Rag and want something else to read."

From various other students came statements like: "We want our money for the last issue back." "Completely unaware of not having another issue."

"I'll have nothing to send to my girl friend in Kansas for her birthday." "If it was a humor magazine, I'd probably miss it."

Many other students that we didn't contact probably have other comments to say on the subject. Frank Jacobs, editor of the magazine would be glad to know any other comments and will be open for interviews any afternoon in the Corn Shucks office.

Interviews for Staff Positions On Publications Slated May 19

Interviews for summer and fall staff positions on The Daily Nebraskan and for fall positions on the Cornhusker yearbook are Saturday, May 19, 8 a.m., at the University faculty lounge.

Following these interviews the student-faculty committee on student publications will appoint the new members of the publications staffs.

Editor and business manager are the summer positions for The Daily Nebraskan. They receive a set salary plus a bonus at the end of the eight-week period.

The "Rag's" fall staff consists of editor and business manager, news editor, five feature editors, Ag editor, sports editor, staff photographer, society editor, assistant business manager, (3) and assistant sports editor.

Available Cornhusker positions are: editor and business manager, assistant editor, managing editor and assistant business manager. Three students and four faculty members compose the committee on student publications who select the staffs.

Leon Pfeiffer, senior member; Gerald Matzke, junior member; and Norman Rasmussen, sophomore member, are the student members of the committee.

The committee is headed by Roger V. Shumate, political science professor. William C. Harper, director of student affairs, Mary E. Guthrie, home economics professor; and William J. Arnold, professor of psychology, are the faculty board members.

Bruce Nicoll, of the University public relations department, acts as liaison officer for the committee. He works between the members of student publications and the committee on publications.

Student Council Constitution

We, the students of the University of Nebraska, with the consent of the University Senate, do hereby ordain and establish this constitution for the administration of student affairs.

Section 1. The name of this organization shall be The Student Council of the University of Nebraska.

Section 2. The purpose of this organization shall be to act as the supreme student governing body in the selection and coordination of all phases of student self-government and to serve as an agency through which faculty-student relationships may be maintained.

Section 3. Legislative Powers The Student Council shall have the following legislative powers: a. To regulate and coordinate the activities of all student organizations and student groups of general university interest.

b. To recognize and approve the constitutions of any new student organization, without which recognition and approval no organization shall be permitted to function as a constituent organization of the Student Council.

c. To regulate and coordinate the activities of all student organizations and student groups of general university interest.

d. To control student pep rallies, pep demonstrations, and student migrations.

e. To schedule and conduct all student sections of general university interest.

f. To act as liaison between students and faculty.

g. To exercise other powers that may benefit the student body.

h. To institute such legislation as shall be necessary to carry out the foregoing powers of the Student Council.

Section 4. Executive Powers The Student Council shall have the following executive powers: a. To see that all laws, regulations, and resolutions of the Student Council are carried out in accordance with its constitutional powers.

b. To suspend or dismiss from office any student executive who shall refuse to carry out his legislative duties.

c. To permit appeals by any student organization or faculty member to the appropriate committees of the University Senate.

Section 5. Representative Powers a. The colleges listed herein shall be entitled to the following representation on the Student Council:

tion of the replacement shall be governed by the rules previously specified for the election of organization or group representative.

6. Inactive organizations or groups shall be deprived of representation on the Student Council.

a. Senior Representatives Five seniors, at least one man and one woman, shall be nominated and elected by the outgoing Student Council at the first meeting after the general election, from nominees of that body to serve during their senior year.

b. Faculty Representatives Two faculty members, one man and one woman, appointed by the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs from nominations submitted by the Student Council.

c. The organization eligible to participate in the election of this representative will be designated by the Student Council.

Section 10. Eligibility Filing, Selection of Officers, and Publicity a. To be eligible for membership on the Student Council, candidates must meet the following requirements:

1. Each candidate shall be a bona fide member of the college, organization, or group which he proposes to represent.

2. Membership on the Student Council shall be contingent on retention of continued membership in one's respective college, organization, or group.

3. Regular University rules shall govern in determining a candidate's eligibility.

4. Each candidate or hold-over member shall have a minimum cumulative average of five.

5. For Law College candidates only pre-law grades shall be considered in the computation of the cumulative average.

Section 11. College Filings a. Nominations of college representatives for election to the Student Council shall be filed in the Office of the Dean of Student Affairs. At least ten days prior to the day upon which filings open the vice-president of the Student Council shall publicize through the Daily Nebraskan the period for filings.

b. Filings will open the first Monday in April and shall run for one week, closing on Saturday noon of the week. If spring vacation conflicts with this date, the Student Council shall designate the last full school week prior to spring vacation for filing.

c. Special filing forms shall be obtained from the Office of the Dean of Student Affairs.

d. The form shall contain the following information: 1. Name, address, and position sought.

2. Grade average, college class (to be certified by the registrar).

3. Social fraternity or organized house (membership, offices held).

4. Professional fraternities and societies (membership, offices held).

5. Activities (membership, offices held).

6. A statement signed by the candidate to this effect: "I hereby agree that if elected to the Student Council I will arrange my school schedule to permit my attendance at the regular meetings of the Student Council."

7. Other information desired by the Student Council.

8. Signatures of 25 bona fide students within the candidate's college must be obtained for each candidate filing.

9. Each candidate shall be photographed. The photograph and filing information will be published in a manner specified by the Student Council.

10. Failure to complete the filing form will invalidate the filing.

Section 12. Organizations and Groups a. Members representing organizations and groups shall meet the same eligibility requirements as college representatives with the exception of the requirement for 25 signatures, photographs, and publicity.

16. To supervise all other elections of general University interest approved by the Student Council.

Report Tells Of Progress With Crops

Progress in crops research is outlined in a report of the University's Box Butte experiment farm which has been submitted to the county commissioners by Dean W. V. Lambert of the college of agriculture.

Highlights of the document: Results of 20 years of crop rotations have been compiled. It shows that potato production after summer fallowing is dependable all years.

But in half or more of the year's potato production following wheat or corn is uncertain.

More than double the yield of wheat is usually obtained after summer fallowing than when wheat follows wheat.

Experimental Varieties Approximately 800 lines or varieties of potatoes were grown on the farm in 1950. Eighty of the most promising were used to find their suitability for dryland culture and to develop a supply of foundation seed potatoes for later distribution for tests at other places and later for distribution to potato growers.

The Progress variety, developed in this program during the past 13 years, is rapidly replacing Triumph in western Nebraska because the tubers of the former have very little scab and do not crack during harvest.

An experiment is being conducted to find the best planting rate for the new variety and the best methods of cultivation for dryland use. During the past summer facilities at the farm were used for some technical studies with potatoes to find factors influencing drought or heat endurance, food manufacturing efficiency of different varieties of potatoes and relation of type of plant growth which enables some varieties to survive hail damage better than others.

Synthetic Variety An Iowa corn hybrid—No. 4417—has been found to outyield Daves No. 2—the local open pollinated variety that has been used at the farm for many years. Progress is being made in developing a synthetic variety for northwestern Nebraska because seed of it would be much cheaper. Throughout a period of years an improved synthetic variety might—because of the variability within it—be more productive in such a short season country than hybrids with their uniform types of plants.

Scientists found that it was possible to screen out many lines of wheat that were readily damaged by hail after two severe storms which hit the winter wheat nursery last summer. Much information obtained as to winter hardiness and drought endurance is being used as a guide in making selections for later use.

10-Year Test During a 10-year wheat test the Cheyenne variety has averaged the best yield—32.3 bushels per acre. Nebred follows with an average yield of 30.7. Pawnee and Comanche were next, both averaging 29.7.

Despite sorghum plantings being destroyed for grain yields by hail, the Norghum variety recovered well and some grain matured.

Even with wheat damage by hail and drought last summer there were increased yields after nitrogen application when the wheat followed summer fallow. But there was no increase in yield when wheat followed until 60 pounds of nitrogen per acre was applied.

The protein content of wheat was increased directly with nitrogen fertilizer during the past two years. Phosphorus applications had little effect. Mid-September seeding showed better results than late August seeding both years.
