

Tom Rische

A Change In Pace

Every year about this time, American college campuses become a beehive of activity. There are "green" freshmen coming to school who are duly impressed by everything collegiate. There are seniors who are acquainted with most of the ins and outs of college life. And there are professors, who have seen the comings and goings of thousands of students.

The University of Nebraska is no exception this year. Students are returning to the business of studying after a summer of leisure, or of work. All this requires a drastic change in pace from more leisurely summertime activities. Most students greet this change with mixed feelings: they are glad to be back with their old friends and old habits, and a trifle sad to leave behind swimming, tennis-playing and other hot weather activities.

Along with all these changes, The Daily Nebraskan, too, is in the midst of a change of pace. This year, the staff plans to revise the paper from top to bottom. We plan a new type face and a new type of coverage. We hope to make the paper interesting to all students on the campus, whatever their subject field.

We on the staff have felt that coverage in the past was sometimes spotty, caused partially by a lack of help. This year, in addition to the students who will come to the office to work for love of work in journalism, we will also have students from Prof. William Hice's second semester reporting class and senior news problems courses to contribute to The Daily Nebraskan columns. Through this medium we hope to be able to expand our coverage.

We have lined up a number of features, some old, some new, for our readers this semester. Our columnists will include Nancy Benjamin, a staff writer and former editor of The Daily Nebraskan; John Gradwohl and Paul Gaiter, law college seniors; Amy Palmer, Daily Nebraskan Candid Reporter last semester, and Connie Gordon, who last semester joked her way through the Stolen Goods column.

We plan book reviews, movie reviews, and expanded interpretative coverage of national and international news, interviews with leading celebrities who may visit Lincoln, and more interviews with interesting students, of which there are nearly 7,000.

We plan critiques of visiting art, music and dramatic shows on campus. Last semester The Daily Nebraskan was accused of being a mere bulletin board for what went on on the campus. Let me say here and now, that I did not file for the editorship of The Daily Nebraskan with the idea of running a bulletin board. We are going to do our level best to put what you, the student, want in your paper.

We are trying an entirely new system of organization and coverage in our office. If it does

The Fine Art Of Making Love

The Park Stylus at Park College, Mo., has come up with some observations on the fine art of love making which might be of general interest to the University students. A course of general interest to students is being badly taught, the paper feels. The situation there as here is one which might well deserve the earnest consideration of each student. The editorial is as follows: "What has happened to the subtle art of making love? From my observation of the unabashed display of raw emotion just before closing hours, I think it has vanished from the Park campus. "Where is the finesse of love expressions? I ask myself as we plow through the grappling twosomes whose techniques are not above those of the little doggies who roam the campus.

"Art always necessitates concentration and at least some degree of privacy. Others are embarrassed or disgusted by the phenomena; I am sad. One girl said, 'I don't like kissing me in the vestibule because I can't give the kiss the attention it deserves.' Men! Maybe you're missing something. Take her off the front steps and find out. "Seriously, the majority of students, to say nothing of visiting alumni and parents are disgusted by the situation. Who would think of necking on Twelfth and Main in Kansas City? There's as much traffic in front of the girls' dorms as at that intersection. "Why do the aspiring lovers perform before friends, although they wouldn't dare before strangers?" "Doesn't sound too much different from the situation at the University of Nebraska does it? Men, take note.

CORNHUSKER IN WONDERLAND

not work, we will junk the system and try something else.

We have, in the opinion of this editor, a highly qualified staff. Your editor spent the summer as a staff writer for the Lincoln Star and has spent several years working on The Daily Nebraskan. Our associate editor, Joan Krueger, has served as editor of the Builders' special edition of The Daily Nebraskan and has been active in journalistic and aetate circles.

Our managing editors, Ruth Raymond and Don Pieper, are both veterans on The Daily Nebraskan staff. Miss Raymond is a former society editor on the Scottsbluff Star-Herald. Entering his third year as a journalism major, Pieper is vice president of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism fraternity.

Our other staff members are likewise no strangers to journalistic circles: Sue Gorton, Ken Rystrom, Jan Steffen, Sally Adams and Shirley Murphy, news editors; Jane Randall, feature editor; Dale Reynolds, Ag editor; Ann Gilligan, society editor; Bob Banks, sports editor; and Marshall Kushner, assistant sports editor; and Bob Sherman, photographer.

We intend to comment on leading national and international issues as well as purely campus issues. We want to discuss some of the problems of university students in these columns. We welcome any suggestions as to what readers would like.

We intend to point out what is right with the University as well as the more serious aspects. This should be a great year for the University of Nebraska and we are planning a great year for The Daily Nebraskan!

Pity The Poor Freshman

We wonder if the poor freshman entering college isn't just a little taken back by all the salesmen and saleswomen running around campus trying to sell them something which they "just have to have."

Students can get everything from a pencil with the complete football schedule printed on it to the new yearbook. It is impossible to walk down the street without being accosted by some individual who assures you that you just haven't lived until you have purchased his particular product.

The freshman is confused enough by the time he has had a conference with his adviser, gone through registration line, taken his physical and been indoctrinated in some of the University ways.

Why not leave the poor guy alone for just a little while?

CHANCELLOR PREDICTS 'TREMENDOUS YEAR'

To the Editor: From all signs this promises to be a great year at the University of Nebraska and I want to pass my sincere thanks along to the students. You do not have a great university without students! First, I would like to say to our Freshmen that they appear to be one of the best first-year classes I have ever seen. As I have watched you Freshmen getting started, I have been impressed with your conduct and your attitude. You act to me like young people who know why they came to the University of Nebraska and what they expect of a university. At the Freshman convocation, when I looked at you all assembled there, I was very proud of our Nebraska young people. I believe we are going to get along fine. Second, I have never seen a finer display of wholesome spirit than that demonstrated by the upperclass student leaders who aided so efficiently with New Student Week. I have had confidence in you all along but I fear I have underestimated you. You people did a magnificent job! I know that when we have the kind of help that you gave us, we are on the right track. If we can continue the wonderful beginning, we will make this a tremendous Cornhusker year. With all good wishes, R. G. Gustavson

Dear editor... We heartily welcome overseas students and fellow American students to our campus and cordially invite them to share in the program of the Cosmopolitan Club. The Cosmopolitan is an organization for the foreign and American students to promote international friendship and good will in the University by meeting regularly in the Union and exchanging ideas and interests. Our first meeting will be held on Wednesday, Sept. 19, at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Union. A reception committee will introduce visitors to the club members. I remain yours in Cosmopolitan Bill Saad, '51 President

To the Editor: As a student at the University, I would like you to publish this as an open letter to all other students. Are your parents financing your college education? If so, can they afford to plunk down $35 at a throw for football tickets to University games? If they can buy a pair of season tickets, that's fine. But if not, it seems that they are completely out of luck. In other words, single game tickets are simply not to be had. Season tickets are $17.50 apiece for five games—no saving from the price of single tickets. The parents who cannot leave their jobs to come to all the games have to buy $17.50 tickets for one or two games.

I know of a number of parents in several towns who ordered single admission tickets early in July. They were later informed that if any seats were left after block sections and season tickets were sold they would receive seats. Still later they received notice that there were no reserved seats for them—if they were lucky, they might get bleacher seats at the last minute.

I hope it is understood that this is not a case of one family in one Nebraska town. It occurred all over the state. Naturally, the first to be given the opportunity to witness the thrills of football games should be the students, faculty and alumni of the University. But next should come the parents, who must sacrifice and work hard to send their children to college. I realize that this season is to be a popular one for football. Everyone wants tickets and the athletic department must sell them to those who have the most ready cash. But it seems unfair that Lincoln businessmen can buy tickets by the carloads to give to their customers and friends, when there are not enough for the parents of University students. Out of about 32,500 reserved seats, it seems logical that some could be saved for the 12,000 or more parents. Therefore, it is my belief that instead of selling blocks of tickets to insurance companies and banks, athletic officials should see that tickets are sold to persons who have a more direct interest in the University. They seem to forget that collegiate football is still an "amateur" sport. Sincerely, A COED.

Bookstore Opens On Ag Campus

A branch of the Regents bookstore is now in operation at Ag college. Under the direction of Bill Sorenson, the bookstore will handle all Ag college books. The bookstore is located in the basement of the Foods and Nutrition building. Pencils, notebooks, and other necessary supplies may also be acquired there. A list of the textbooks required for Ag college courses may be found on each shelf, so that students will be sure of getting the right book. The store is operating on a "serve-yourself" basis. It will be permanent at Ag college. Regents bookstore on city campus will not handle any Ag college books except those which are used in classes on the city campus.

Dr. Kiener To Address First Audubon Meeting

Dr. Walter Kiener, biologist in the Fisheries Division of the Nebraska Game, Forestry and Parks commission, will speak at the first meeting of the Audubon Naturalists' club, Tuesday, Sept. 18. Color pictures of birds, mammals and flowers taken by Kiener while he was a forest ranger in Colorado will illustrate his talk, "A Naturalist in the Colorado Rocky Mountains." The meeting will include a report on the constitution and plans for the first annual Crete field day. It will be held in Morrill Hall auditorium at 7:30 p.m.

NEBRASKANETTES

Physics Teacher Inspires Chancellor; Career Begins As Science Teacher

He's lived in Nebraska for seven years and is classed as one of the state's loyal sons already. Of course, Reuben G. Gustavson, chancellor of the University of Nebraska, has had no trouble fitting in as a typical Nebraska character. He's a farm boy himself. He spent the greater part of his teens living on his father's farm in Colorado. The combination of interests in agriculture and science came when Gustavson was a junior in high school. "I was inspired," the chancellor reminisced, "by my physics teacher. He told me that chemistry was the coming thing."

When Gustavson attended the University of Denver, he capitalized on that instructor's advice. He received his A.B. and M.A. degrees there and went on to the University of Chicago to secure his Ph.D. Since then, he has held instructorships, dean's positions, and places as department head in the chemistry divisions at Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, the University of Denver and the University of Colorado. He was president of the University of Colorado from 1943 to '45.

Dr. Gustavson also held a variety of positions at the University of Chicago. He was a visiting professor of chemistry and served as vice president as Dean of the Faculties. During World War II, he aided the government in research on the atomic bomb through the Argonne National Laboratory at the University of Chicago.

His contribution to the war effort did not stop at that, however. He was director of a War Department project to test the effects of high altitude flights on aviators. The chancellor had a son in that war as well. Russell Gustavson was a navy aviation mechanic. He is now a senior at the University of Nebraska College of Medicine in Omaha.

"My son is a true Nebraskan," Gustavson asserted, "but my daughter, I must admit, has not seen too much of Nebraska. She received her degree from the University of Colorado and is now living in Chicago. Since Dr. Gustavson has come to Nebraska, he has driven many thousands of miles into every region of the state and has visited hundreds of farms and communities. Here, he has had an opportunity to meet and talk with all sorts of Nebraskans.

R. G. Gustavson

"The people in this state do not differ too much from those in other states where I've been," Gustavson stated. "I still find a certain wholeness about them that seems to be characteristic of the people in the mid-west." He ought to know. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Xi, Phi Lambda Upsilon and Tau Beta Pi—all honorary societies—plus being an honorary member of the Chicago Gynecological Society. Also, he served on the national educational committee for the Navy V-12 program. He is internationally known for research in biochemistry and has been the recipient of a great many awards, such as the Phi Lambda Upsilon prize in analytical chemistry, the Melzer Award in research and was knighted by the Swedish government in 1948 with the Order of the North Star, third highest honor of the nation. Truly, Chancellor Reuben G. Gustavson is someone for Nebraskans to be proud of. Indeed he has done well in his "adopted state."

Cornshucks Sales Campaign Fizzes; New Students Fail To Fail For Spiel Candid Reporter

Your Candid Reporter is back. Still out pestering people and following frustrated freshmen. Everyone seems to be standing in various and sundry lines around here; they add color—even if they don't get registered. To make matters worse (and to scrape up material for this column) it was definitely decided that the CR should get on the ball and pass out a few high-pressure sales talks. So, armed with a used receipt book, the candid reporter went out to sell subscription to our dear departed Cornshucks (One moment of silence, please.) The first customer, a sweet young thing, had just been through several lines and so was rather tired of persistent salesmen. When she saw the smiling face of the CR, she cringed and said, "Well, out with it. What are you selling?" Never daunted, the salesman gave with the spiel about Cornshucks being the humor mag, everybody reads it, funnier than... etc. At last there was a pause for breath and the freshman broke in screaming, "I like it. I like it. But you can't sell it to me unless you catch me." Like a streak of lightning she was off. I don't know, maybe this freshman week is too much for some people.

There's something wonderful about freshmen. Maybe it's that sweet, innocent appeal they have. Or their naive freshness. (This from a Junior). Anyway they're all good kids and maybe this should be an apology to all these people who stopped to listen to the false propaganda put out. And to those who "would like to have a copy, but just don't have the money right now." Take it all with a grain of salt and remember, your Candid Reporter is going to be out on the prowl every week looking for more innocent suckers—and they aren't all freshmen.

Foreign Fellowship Applications Open

Fellowships for study abroad during the 1952-53 academic year are now available to all graduate students or to those who will receive the bachelor's degree in January, June or July. Applicants must have a good scholastic record and know the language of the country in which they wish to study. Some nations in which study grants are available are Australia, Austria, Belgium, Burma, Egypt, France, Greece, India, Iran, Italy, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Pakistan, Philippines, Thailand, Turkey and the United Kingdom. Application forms and additional information may be secured in the graduate office, Social Sciences 111. Completed applications must be turned in by Oct. 15, 1951. A committee of the graduate faculty will review the applications. This committee will then recommend two students to the state Fulbright committee, which selects two candidates and two alternates from recommendations submitted by all Nebraska colleges.

There's something wonderful about freshmen. Maybe it's that sweet, innocent appeal they have. Or their naive freshness. (This from a Junior). Anyway they're all good kids and maybe this should be an apology to all these people who stopped to listen to the false propaganda put out. And to those who "would like to have a copy, but just don't have the money right now." Take it all with a grain of salt and remember, your Candid Reporter is going to be out on the prowl every week looking for more innocent suckers—and they aren't all freshmen.

No Male Shortage At Colorado University

Well, Flash is back with the trash again this year. Yes, I'm back at my old job of pilfering materials from campus papers all over the country. My first item of interest comes from the Silver and Gold, the student newspaper of the University of Colorado. In a story headlined, "Females With Slide-Rule Technique Find Man Shortage Non-Existent," the paper points out that girls in the engineering school just don't have any man shortage problems. They stated that each and every female engineer has 125 male engineers all to herself. "In other words," states the Silver and Gold, "at Colorado N., of the 1,518 students in engine school spring quarter, only 12 were women." Even though engineering is usually thought of as strictly a man's school, neither the profs nor the male students "mind having a little perfume mixed with their math."

STOLEN GOODS

From the University of New Mexico's Daily Lobo comes this bit of verse: "He asked me: 'When?'— I could not tell. He queried: 'Who?'— Again I fell. He named a man To me a stranger. And I could see Myself in danger. What was this plight—this mystery? Oh! Just my course in history!"

The Daily Nebraskan

Member: FORTY-NINTH YEAR Intercollegiate Press

The Daily Nebraskan is published by the students of the University of Nebraska in an expression of students' news and opinions only. According to Article II of the By-Laws governing student publications and administered by the Board of Publications, "it is the declared policy of the Board that publications, under its jurisdiction shall be free from editorial censorship on the part of the Board, or on the part of any member of the faculty of the University, but the members of the staff of the Daily Nebraskan are personally responsible for any editorial they set or do or cause to be printed." Subscription rates are $2.00 a semester, $3.00 a year and $4.00 for the college year. Single copies 5c. Published daily during the school year except Saturdays and Sundays, vacations and examination periods. One issue published during the month of August by the University of Nebraska under the supervision of the Committee on Student Publications, Nebraska, under the Act of Congress, March 3, 1879, and at special rate of postage provided for in Section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized September 16, 1925.

EDITORIAL STAFF: Editor: Tom Rische; Associate Editor: Jack Krueger; Managing Editor: Ruth Raymond, Don Pieper; News Editor: Sue Gorton, Jan Steffen, Ken Rystrom, Shirley Murphy, Sally Adams; Sports Editor: Bob Banks; Features Editor: Jane Randall; Ag Editor: Dale Reynolds; Candid Reporter: Amy Palmer; Photography Editor: Marshall Kushner; Photographer: Bob Sherman.

BUSINESS STAFF: Business Manager: Jack Cohen; Circulation Manager: Pete Berglund; Advertising Manager: Chuck Burmeister; Night News Editor: Jan Steffen, Ken Rystrom.

LIKE HAS CHOW IN THE FIELD... General Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander-in-chief of S.H.A.P.E., partakes of chow with American officers in the field during his visit with units of the fourth division at Baumholder, Germany. Left to right are Major General Barlan N. Harkness; General Thomas T. Handy, commander-in-chief of EUCOM; General Eisenhower; and Colonel Thomas N. Griffin, General Eisenhower interrupted his vacation to inspect the United States troop elements in the French and the United States occupied zones. He and his wife then returned to Bavaria where they resumed their vacation.