

Bank Continues Search For 25 Escaped Students

By STAFF REPORTER
The search for 25 University students who are escaping with valuables continues. Several of them have been seized since the quest began Monday. However, according to recent reports, the greater majority of them are still missing. Description follows. If any of these people are located, they should be seized so as to permit action of authorities on them immediately.

These students are both male and female. Many of them are minors. A few of them are married. Subtract this sum from the total and it leaves the number of all the unmarried ones of 21 or over.

All of them weigh over 115 pounds. None of them have been indicted in the last 12 weeks—most of them have not come up for charges within the last six months.

The whole crew of 25 is in perfect health. As yet, however, authorities are lacking complete case histories on them.

Upon seizure, authorities advise that the individuals in question be limited to a strict diet of black coffee and orange juice. Captors are warned to keep a careful watch over prisoners to see that they consume no heavy meals. That is, if this period of pre-authoritative imprisonment does not exceed four hours.

It is well also, according to the authorities, to tell prisoners not to get nervous or panicky. It is rumored that legal imprisonment will last no more than an hour—just long enough to have them turn over the valuable substance in their possession.

Too, it might be well to put the captives in good humor by telling them that the canteen service operated by the authorities will serve them light refreshments following surrender of desired goods.

If it all sounds a little fishy, take another quick once-over. The Red Cross is soliciting blood donors as additions to the group which goes to meet the bloodmobile at the Scottish Rite Temple, 322 So. 15th, this Friday. Hours are 11 a.m. through 5 p.m.

Lincoln Schedules Marine Band

The United States Marine Band, "the President's own," will present two concerts in the Coliseum Oct. 26.

Sponsored by the American Legion Drum Corps of Lincoln, the band will present a special students' matinee in the afternoon and a full concert in the evening.

The President has specially approved a nationwide tour of the band this year, thus affording Lincoln the rare privilege of seeing the band outside of Washington and military functions.

The tour is limited, and comparatively few communities have been included on the concert schedule.

The Marine Band, now 153 years old, has performed for 32 Presidents. It was the country's first military band and is now the oldest symphonic organization in the nation.

During its long history, only 18 leaders have conducted the band. Among these John Philip Sousa and the present conductor, Major William F. Santelmann, are the best known.

According to one musical observer, "Probably no musical organization expresses the soul of this nation, its history, its religion, its character, its hopes and aspirations as does the United States Marine Band."

As the presidentially-approved corps, it has greeted royalty and foreign diplomats. It has supplied musical setting for every White House wedding, including those of Nellie Grant, Alice Roosevelt, and President Grover Cleveland.

"It's dignified and solemn tones," according to advance billing, "have accompanied our stricken leaders to their final resting place, including the martyred Lincoln and more recently, Franklin D. Roosevelt." Its symphonic arrangements, quartets and string ensembles are as well known in Washington, D.

Picasso Couldn't Attend Class Like Art Orientation; Here's Your Chance If You Haven't Heard Yet

"What is it with these guys like Picasso?" Now you can learn the answer to this and many similar questions about art. If you'd like to find out just what art does and how it does it, or if you've never had a chance to take any art, then this is an opportunity you can't afford to miss.

A course unlike any other in the University is being offered for the first time this semester. Its name is art 30 or art orientation. Its purpose is to teach understanding of art by letting a student express his ideas on what he thinks art should be.

Art orientation is much more than a mere discussion of theory; it lets the student show what art means to him by allowing him to work in any medium he chooses.

Don't think the competition in art 30 is tough—because there is none! A person's grade in the course depends only upon his interest, active participation, and application of information. No skill is necessary. This means that one with no natural art ability may get a better grade than someone with a lot of ability.

Although there is one special section for art majors and minors, two sections are open to any student attending the University. One may attend lectures on either Monday or Tuesday. Given by Duard W. Laging, head of the art

The Zeta Beta Taus, recently robbed of over $200 worth of personal items, report that there are no new developments in finding the thief.

Marshall Kushner, assistant historian of the fraternity, stated that pledges have not yet given up the search.

Liam H. Santelmann, under whose leadership for 29 years the band doubled in size and developed into both a military band and a symphonic organization. This combined 58 years of service by father and son preserves one of the longest and most productive legacies in musical history.

NEW ART COURSE . . . Art 30 students (l. to r.) Bob Yekel, Lynn Albers, Mary Hartman and Lois Frederick receive pointers from the instructor of the new art orientation course in which they are enrolled. The class is set up with a "floating lab" system in order that students may work with any phase of art they prefer.

department, these lectures touch on principles and theories of art. The students themselves may choose the subject which they want to know about.

An amazing feature of the course is its "floating lab" system. One may register, for example, in any of the several oil-painting classes which meet on Monday, and in any sculpture class which meets on Thursday. He may be working in an intermediate or advanced class, but he is not placed under the requirements for that class.

Anyone can work in two or more mediums of expression. These categories include oils, watercolors, composition, design (two-dimensional), volume (three-dimensional), sculpture, ceramics (pottery), and graphics (prints).

If a student dislikes working in one section he may change to another with "no red tape" whatsoever. The only requirement is that he stay with the class for two weeks or until he completes one piece of work. This allows everyone a chance to try his hand in all the various mediums in the fine arts during one semester.

The course is worth two elective credits on any degree, but to the person wishing to understand theories and techniques of contemporary art the value of art orientation cannot be measured in terms of credits.

Registration for the course closes Friday, Oct. 5.

Anyone interested in the course is urged to see his advisor or contact Laging, Room 208, Morrill hall for further details.

and he succeeds in mooching a cigarette.

2. This type refers to the girls. Their approach is very subtle, as the lady-moocher snuggles up to the boy friend perhaps a little closer, and whispers sweet little nothings in her boy friend's ear, namely, "Gimme a butt."

3. The blunt type, which in my professional opinion is the worst, but most mildly used among the peasants is "Gimme a cigarette."

4. The Elite type; which is the best is: "Gimme a cigarette, PLEASE."

Just remember, "You too can be a cigarette moocher."

You Too Can Be A Cigarette Moocher—In Four Lessons

Cigarette Moochers!
Are you no longer able to mooch as many cigarettes as you would like to? Do you no longer have cigarette hangover? Then this is the article for you.

Actually, cigarette mooching is an art. Actually the only way to perfect this art is to practice it. You too can be a successful cigarette moocher. No longer will you have to sit on the sidelines, while other mooch.

Let us review the basic types of moochers.

1. Type one uses the indirect approach. This is usually the more successful, as it does not brand one as a moocher, but instead infers that the person is just fresh out of cigarettes.

The technique is simple: the person who is about to mooch looks at you, smiles, and then reaches in his pocket as if reaching for a cigarette. A look of horrible disappointment slowly shades over his face as he finds to his astonishment that his pocket is bare.

If this doesn't work, he reaches in another pocket, and a shade more ghastly than the first comes upon him. (This is known among professionals as "That Hound-Dog Look"). This is kept up until you get the hint.

The annual Agronomy Fall Field Day at the College of Agriculture is scheduled for next Saturday, J. D. Furrer, assistant extension agronomist, is in charge of the event.

Starting at 9:00 a.m., the program for the day will include stops at soybean experiments, corn hybrid varieties and corn rotation plots.

The last stop will be at the chemurgic evaluation plots. Here the per acre returns of the various chemurgic crops such as castor beans, safflower, sesame, etc., are compared to the per acre return of corn.
