

Free Attorney Help Available Through Lincoln Legal Bureau

Residents of Lancaster county who are unable to afford attorney fees can obtain the free services of skilled attorneys.

Through the Lincoln Legal Aid Bureau, now in its fifth year of operation at the University Law College, needy clients may obtain assistance from a senior law student. A dual purpose is served by the bureau. Senior students get experience with situations met in actual practices and the clients get competent council, according to Law College dean, Edmund O. Belsheim.

Sponsors of the bureau are the Lincoln Bar association, the Lincoln Barriers and the Law College. Guy C. Chambers, representing the Bar association, Thomas R. Pansing for the Barriers and Dean Belsheim, bureau director, constitute the governing committee. Mrs. Betta Axelrod, a lawyer, is assistant director.

Following is a typical case handled by the bureau: Mrs. Ruth came to the bureau in the spring of 1941. Her husband had left her two months before, after cashing a no fund check in Lincoln for $80. She was living with their three children, two girls aged eight and three, and a boy six, in an apartment where she paid $20 a month rent.

She had no word from her husband and had been unable to locate him. It appeared unlikely he would return to Lincoln with a criminal charge facing him. As she had no income, she was found eligible for legal aid.

First, the Social Service Exchange of Lincoln was contacted in order to locate the agencies that could give her immediate assistance for family food and rent. Next, Mrs. — was sent to a lawyer who was selected from the bureau's pool of Lincoln attorneys. He discussed the situation with her and the senior law student who had been assigned to the case. The petition for divorce was drawn up by the senior under the direction of the attorney. He also filed the papers at the court house. At the hearing, the case was argued by the lawyer, with the student present to observe how it was done.

Later, the bureau received a letter from the attorney notifying him that a decree had been granted providing for an absolute divorce and custody of the three minor children to Mrs. —. The file was then closed.

Since its opening in 1947, the bureau has received approximately 400 applications for legal aid. Senior law students serve on a volunteer basis with the 37 Lincoln lawyers in the bureau. Indigent persons are thus assured that their cases get professional handling, and students are enabled to handle a legal case from start to finish. The bureau is located in the Law College building. It is open between 1:30 and 4:30 p.m., Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Boys' Letter Disputes 'Ratio' Of Men, Women

BY AMY PALMER Staff Reporter

It has been brought to the attention of this reporter that certain figures published under her name were incorrect. The figures under fire are those pertaining to the ratio of men to women on this campus. Said figures were 3 1/4 men to every one (1) woman. The article also went on to say that since some men were previously engaged, deadheads or too short, this left only 3/4 a man to that one (1) girl.

A group of "the boys" have written a letter which brought to my attention the fact that "it is expedient to categorize the girls." They were categorized into four divisions similar to the four divisions into which the men were classified. They then arrived at the conclusion that only 10 per cent of the girls on campus are worth wasting an evening with.

Dividing this 10 per cent into the three to four ratio we had previously, "the letter said," we finally arrive at a more nearly correct figure of 7 1/2 boys to each girl." The letter concluded, "you think you got it bad? You ain't never had it so good."

As previously mentioned, this is the opinion of a few. After several telephone calls, more opinions were received. Following are a few of the decent ones:

"I don't know about the accuracy of your figures, but I do know that the stuff about deadheads just doesn't apply to this house. So that may raise the ratio a little."

"I am not prepared to make a statement at this time, but if we could get together some evening, I'll let you know then." Some people just can't keep their minds on business.

"No girl on this campus deserves three men, or even a fourth. There's only about one in every house that's worth dating." Of course, in most houses, it's better to date only one... at a time.

And so it went. No one would disagree with the actual figures, which, by the way, were not authentic. But one of the men men seemed to think they would stack up that way. Conceit.

Now that both sides of the problem have been presented, it's best to forget the matter. We'll let the deadheads get together with the short girls and the married or otherwise ineligible men get together with the women with rings on their left fingers. Now doesn't that sound like a logical arrangement?

the tongue; twisting the tongue so that the lateral sides would be dorsally and ventrally placed; extending the tongue to touch the tip of the nose; and swallowing the tongue.

Only six of the fourteen persons could perform all of these tongue maneuvers and one was negative for lateral edge rolling.

FROSH LEARN FAST; DANCE AFTER RALLY

BY JANE RANDALL Feature Editor

It all happened last Friday. To be sure, it was a day of rejoicing for the worthy members of the T.H.F.F. (Thank Heaven For Friday) Club. However, the fact that it was Friday made no difference to Hortense and Horace.

Being new students at the University, and "just another one of those steady couples on campus," they were feeling mighty low because everyone ignored them. In other words, they weren't at all happy.

"They wanted to have a good time, but they didn't know how to do it. They wanted to be part of the crowd, but they didn't know whom to see about it."

When they walked to class together Friday morning, they noticed all the "Rally Tonight" signs. Both of them sighed.

"This is just going to be another one of those things that we'll be left out of," Horace moaned.

"I suppose so," Hortense unwillingly agreed. "Oh! By the way, Horace, when are you coming after me tonight for our long walk? I probably won't see you again until tonight, with all my classes and things."

"Well, how about seven?" Horace supplied. "And we haven't seen that Acropolis thing 'way over on the north part of the campus. I thought we might take that in."

"All right," Hortense agreed. The couple parted and went to their respective classes. With so many things to do, both found that the day passed by quickly.

When seven o'clock rolled around, Hortense was in a mad frenzy. If a car wasn't there, seven-fifteen. Still no Horace.

"Horace is always here on time," she thought to herself. Suddenly her buzzer rang. She rushed down to find the dorm lobby in an uproar.

"Horace!" she yelled. At that he glanced up, grinning.

"Hortense," he said smugly. "I'd like to have you meet Julie and Juniper. They're new students here too, but someone told them about something new to do. They're going out to Joe's Jazz Joint to dance. They want us to go with them."

Before Horace could get another word in, Hortense yelled, "Oh, fine!"

That was it. They were off. As they whizzed west on the main drag, the traffic seemed to grow heavier. Yet, they were leaving town.

When they arrived at Joe's, the crowd enveloped the two couples. The excitement in the air seemed to be contagious. And, as the evening went on, the pace—along with the music—seemed to become faster and faster.

First it was the shag in a circle. Then it was a snake dance. Later still came a conga line and a round of polkas. Drunk with the enthusiasm of it all, the two couples joined in everything.

"What fun!" Hortense and Julie unconsciously shrieked together.

They both looked at each other and laughed.

The fellows looked at each other and winked knowingly, silently agreeing that their accidental meeting had been a success.

"Really," Hortense said, "I didn't know that anyone could have so much fun here at school!"

"I didn't either!" shouted Julie.

While the girls chattered on excitedly, Horace looked at Juniper and said, as quietly as he could in the midst of the uproar, "Got to do this again."

Juniper nodded his wholehearted approval. Suddenly their chat was interrupted by "Huskers Fight—fight, fight, fight!"

The four looked up just in time to see a flock of red and white sweaters jump up and down. The crowd roared.

The two couples looked at each other. Never had they seen such spirit. They looked amazedly at the crowd of noise-makers. Seeing that they were the only ones who weren't cheering, they joined in.

When people started singing University songs, they all sang, stumbling along from word to word. Despite the errors they were making, they all laughed at each other and tried harder to get them right the next time.

The evening went very fast. Soon it was time to leave.

"I wish this evening would never end!" exclaimed Hortense. "That's the way I feel!" Julie joined in.

Juniper added, "Yes! I wish there were a rally every night!"

As the two couples walked up to the dorm door where they had first met, there was a warm feeling of friendship between them. They felt now that this old University wasn't such a bad place after all.

Wanted—Men For Orchestis Dance Group

No one has to know a thing. That is, to try out for Orchestis.

According to Miss Helen Troy Martin, Orchestis director, all that is required is an earnest desire to build bulging biceps and maintain those mammoth muscles.

No, ladies—this does not apply to you. This is recruitment for the male modern dance crew. Anyone belonging to the masculine gender, who harbors such ambitions as outlined above, should see Miss Martin, modern dance studio, Grant Memorial.

Now—for Orchestis—the women's end of modern dance. Try-outs, according to Miss Martin, will be held Wednesday, Oct. 3, at 7:15 p.m. in the modern dance studio, Grant Memorial.

It's Roundup Time

FRESHMAN NAMES UNION CAFETERIA... Douglas Jensen, freshman student at the University, receives his award from a Union official for naming the Union cafeteria. His prize is $20 in meals at the cafeteria. A committee of Union student workers and executive officers picked the winning name out of over 100 entries. The new name is "Round Up."

Members Of Two Madrigal Singing Groups Announced

There are two Madrigal singing groups this year instead of the usual one.

The increase was made, David V. Foltz, associate professor of voice, said, because of the large number of "potentially fine singers" interested in this type of music.

The second group climaxes a three-year increase in the number of students auditioning for the group. This is only one of the several program additions to be made by the School of Fine Arts this year.

Members of the two groups as announced by Foltz Friday are:

First group—Peggy Bayer, Nancy Norman, Pat Laffin, Gwen Grosshans, Gladys Novotny, Rose Mary Castner, Jo Smith, Marjorie Danly, Nancy Burton, Virginia Cummings, Janice Wagner, Janice Fullerton, Roberta Lewis, John Moran, Joe Feeney, Dan Rasdal.
