

Cellophane Buys Sight... Olson Collects Ribbons From Cigarette Packages To Help Blind Youngster

By JANE RANDALL
Feature Editor

All of Lois Olson's friends thought her project of picking up the red, yellow, blue and green ribbons from cigarette packages was all a big joke.

That is, until she, being instigator of the idea here at the University, told them what it was all about.

She explained it like this. First, of all, she said it's the real deal—that the cellophane strong-openers on cigarette packages go to a five-year-old boy in South Dakota.

As soon as the boy acquires one pound of these things, he sends them in to one of the nationally known cigarette companies. In turn, this concern has agreed to send him a seeing eye dog.

Miss Olson said she received the idea of going into this welfare project through a lady in her hometown, Bloomfield, Neb.

"And, because University students—quite a few of them smoke—she added, 'I thought school might be a good place to pick up a whole lot more.'

On returning to school this fall, Miss Olson described how she ran around telling all her friends about it. And, laughing, she remembered how once someone asked her whether the dog were for herself or the little boy.

Now that school has been in progress for several weeks, Miss Olson reports that she has collected to a pint jar full of these cellophane objects.

"That means tightly packed, too," she asserted proudly. She also went on to tell how she had recruited one of her friends, a non-smoker, to help her.

"She calls herself the 'pick-up girl,'" Miss Olson said. "She feels that by going around collecting other people's donations, she is doing her bit for the cause."

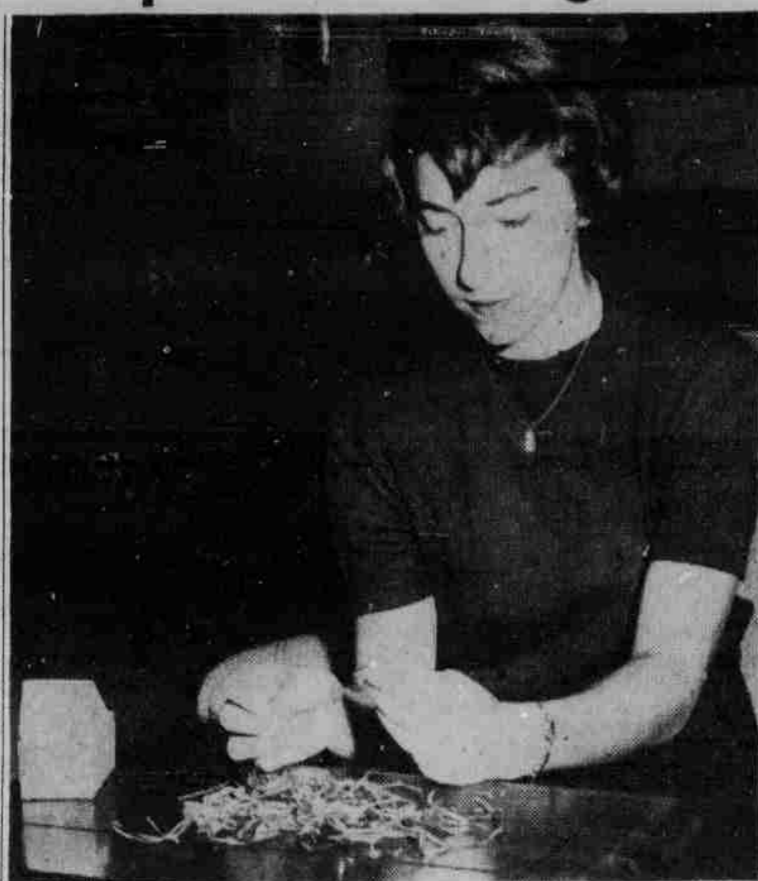

However, Miss Olson reported, charity work does get a little messy at times. She explained that her room was constantly in an uproar. People run in and out to bring the colored cellophane ribbons to her at any and every hour of the day or night, she said.

"They lay them on the desk—in fact, any place where there's a flat surface," she said. "It makes the room just a little harder to clean up, that's all."

When she has enough strings from cigarette packages—enough to pack tightly into a quart jar—Miss Olson is going to call it "mission accomplished."

At that time, she'll pack up the whole business and send it off—South Dakota bound. She's keeping one element of the project right here, however. That element is the satisfaction that she's helping a small boy to help himself.

All students who expect to receive associate, baccalaureate or advanced degrees or any teaching certificate this Jan. and who have not yet done so, should apply for same at the Senior checking office, Room 9, Administration building, by Nov. 1, 1951. Office hours 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily and 10 a.m. to noon Saturday.

SMOKER'S SAVINGS . . . Lois Jean Olson examines the little colored strips of cellophane collected from cigarette packages. Many contributors have helped Miss Olson accumulate this number. When she gets a quart jar full, she will send them to a blind boy who will receive a seeing-eye dog free from a cigarette company.

AFCW Meet Convenes

More than 80 women from seven Nebraska colleges will convene in Lincoln today, on the University campus, for the annual state conference of the Athletic Federation of College Women.

The University of Nebraska WAA council and women's physical education department will act as hosts during today's meetings and the Saturday play-day.

The weekend activities will begin at 1:30 p.m. today, with registration in the Union lobby. Group meetings will take up the afternoon in the Union faculty lounge and Room 316.

The Union will also be the scene of the AFCW banquet at 6:30 p.m. Miss Mabel Lee, head of the University physical education department, is to be the main speaker.

Members of Orchesis will provide the evening's entertainment and Charlotte Hervert will play piano solos.

Saturday will be an all-sports play-day for the visiting women. The conference delegates will meet at Grant Memorial at 9:30 a.m. for a morning of tennis, baseball and soccer ball.

After lunch, at Grant Memorial, the women will take in an afternoon of duckpins, badminton, Nebraska ball and swimming.

Two official delegates and other women from Luther College at Wahoo, Omaha University, Nebraska Wesleyan, Kearney State Teachers College, Doane College at Crete, York and Hastings colleges will be represented at the conference.

The WAA officers and physical education instructors will act as official hosts and planning committee for the visitors. WAA president is Delores Irwin; vice president, Alice Frampton; secretary, Beverly Mann; treasurer, Elaine Esch.

Ruth Schellberg and Mary Jean Mulvaney of the physical education faculty, will also help with the two-day conference.

First Pigskin Party Planned By Union

For those who can not make the trip to the game at Manhattan Saturday the Union will sponsor the first pigskin party of the 1951 football season at 2 p.m. in the Union lounge.

Industrial Design Exhibit Opens UN Art Galleries

The first in a new series of exhibitions devoted to the work of outstanding artists in the field of commercial and industrial design starts Friday at the University Art galleries.

The work of David Stone Martin, a leading national advertising artist and illustrator, is featured. Martin has done work in some of the largest advertising campaigns of recent years. A selection of original drawings will be included in the exhibition.

Also included will be drawings in specialized fields, such as his series of illustrations for Scientific American and the Columbia Broadcasting System. His work in these fields won him several awards in annual competitions sponsored by the National Art Directors Club.

The exhibition will continue in the galleries through Nov. 11.
