

Fall Fashion—Full Skirts; More Feminine, Alluring?

Advertisers have prominently displayed the "full-skirted" look for Fall, 1951.

Their arguments to entice women to buy their wares are that these new skirts will make them look "more alluring," "more feminine and appealing to men."

But in spite of all this advertisement, how are these billowing skirts going over with the feminine public?

When asked her opinion of this type of skirt, one coed said

16 Students Attend Union's Bridge Lesson

Sixteen bridge beginners were taught the first rudiments of the game by James Porter Wednesday as part of the Union's bridge program.

This year the Union will be host to the Big Seven bridge tournament, last year held at Kansas university.

During December and January a series of advanced lessons and tournaments will be held by the Union. N. U. students will also have an opportunity to enter the National Collegiate Tournament held in Chicago in February.

Students who are interested in beginning lessons given every Wednesday afternoon from 4 to 5 p.m. through Nov. 14 may sign up in the Union Activities office.

that she "couldn't bear to look at another full skirt."

"They only look appropriate on the sweet feminine type," said the coed, "and I'm not that type."

Another girl said that full skirts can only be worn by very small girls.

"Large girls only look larger when they wear full skirts," the girl commented.

One girl said that gathered full skirts definitely made her look heavier, but she didn't mind the gored skirts.

"Full skirts don't look too sophisticated," said one coed, "but they're good for dances because tight skirts are too hard to dance in."

"Besides," she added, "you have to have too small a waistline to look 'sharp' in a full skirt."

Several statements indicated that many leading fashion designers agree that women do not look their best in full skirts.

After a lifetime of selling glamour to the world's best-dressed women, Mme. Elsa Schiaparelli believes that women should not be secondary to their clothes. They should avoid distortion of the human figure and keep the entire picture simple.

Hence Mme. Schiaparelli says that full skirts "make even a pretty woman look dowdy."

She believes that full skirts hide the natural lines of the body. They make thin women look fat, and fat women look enormous.

American Art On Display At NAA Exhibit

Many contemporary American artists are represented in the Nebraska Art Association's autumn show at Morrill Hall.

The pieces in the exhibit, all originals, are available for purchase. In selecting each work, the NAA took into consideration the price, size, and suitability for home display.

Beginning art collectors will find many oils, watercolors, etchings, silk-screens, and lithographs priced within the private purchase budget.

Main purpose of the show, though, is to amplify the functions of the NAA's annual spring show in bringing to Nebraska the latest work in modern American art.

Admission to the exhibit is free for University students.

Duane Laging, director of the art department, will give a short talk about the exhibition at 3:30 Sunday afternoon, in Gallery B of Morrill Hall.

Blood Donation Date Is Oct. 30

Thursday, Oct. 30, is the next time at which University students may donate blood to the Red Cross campaign.

The bloodmobile will be at the Scottish Rite temple between the hours of 11 a.m. and 5 p.m. that day.

Students wishing to donate blood may secure pledge cards from the Red Cross blood representative in their respective organizations. When these cards are filled out, they are sent to the Lancaster County Red Cross chapter in Lincoln. They are "business reply" style.

In order to qualify for blood donation, a student must be 21 or have the consent of his parents. Donors must weigh 110 pounds or more.

They must be in good health and free from contagious infection six months previous to the time at which the donation is to be given. It is also suggested that donors eat no fatty foods before giving blood. This is merely further insurance against allergies that might crop up in the recipient.
