

Gallery Exhibit Emphasizes Practical -Not Beautiful-Side Of Modern Design

The "Arts For Use" exhibition, now being featured in the University Art Galleries, stresses the practical rather than the beautiful side of art.

All items were selected from stocks of local stores by staff members of art galleries and the art department.

Lincoln's first art show of this kind, the exhibition features modern designs of furniture, ceramics and glass, metalware, electric ware and other objects.

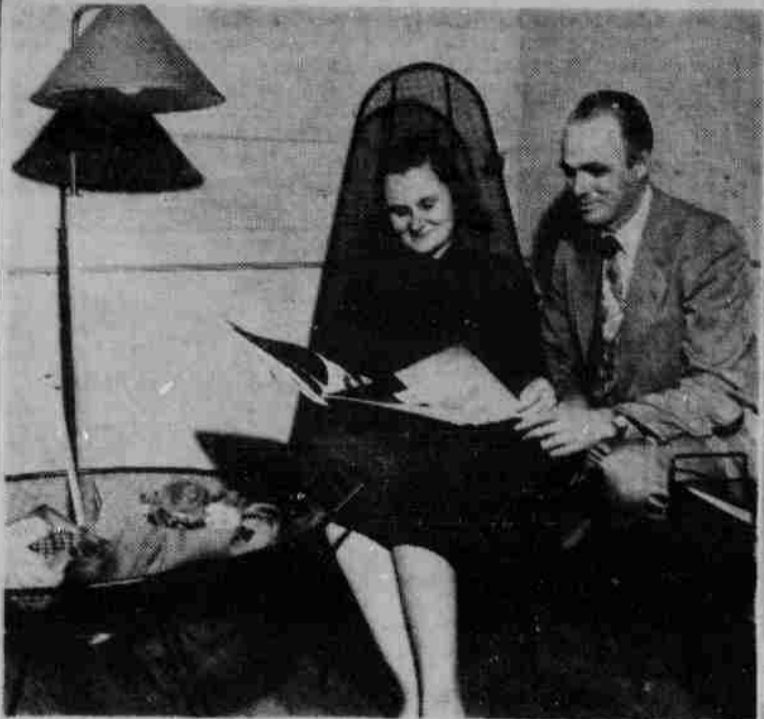

The show, produced with the cooperation of local merchants who furnished the objects, is purely for educational—not commercial—purposes, gallery curator Norman Geske stated.

Five prints from the autumn show have been added to the Hall collection at the University, according to Duard W. Laging, director of the galleries.

They are "Burnt Ordinary," a woodcut by Worden Day; "Rhubarb," a woodcut by Antonio Frasconi; "Glass Blower," a wood engraving by Misch Kohn; and "Evening Wind" and "Night Shadows," etchings by Edward Hopper.

Carl O. Schiewind and Harold J. Joachim of the Art Institute of Chicago were consultants for the Hall purchases, made possible through funds left to the University by Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Hall. The collection is on permanent display in Morrill hall.

On Sunday, Dec. 9, Geske, Laging and Peter North, assistant professor of design at the University, will discuss, in a special gallery talk, "What Is Good Design?"

Traditional Hanging Of Greens To Start Holiday Festivities

Traditionally beginning the holiday festivities by giving Ellen Smith hall its Christmas dressing, the Hanging of the Greens will be held Thursday evening at 7 p.m.

As a part of the evening program, evergreen boughs will be hung around the balcony of the main room and a twelve-foot Christmas tree decorated. Similar decorations will grace the dining room, worship room and the offices of Miss Piper and Miss Johnson.

Hanging of the Greens is a custom long observed at the University. To the usual program of a dessert supper, musical program and the decorating, a new feature will be added. Minstrels will wander from room to room during the evening singing the traditional songs of Christmas. The minstrels, Gayle Roxberg and Sheila Brown, will be dressed in old English costumes and will play violins.

The program will consist of a piano solo by Janice Fullerton, Christmas reading by Christine Phillips, a vocal solo by Rose Mary Castner.

"The Hanging of the Green" is a long observed custom at the University and marks the beginning of the Christmas season on campus, according to Jane Jackson, general chairman in charge of the festivities. Other members of the committee are: refreshments, Lois Miller; publicity, Jackie Ullstrom; decorations, Marilyn House; program, Jean Davis; invitations, Judy Morgan.

Dr. Henry A. White, Former NU English Professor, Dies

Dr. Henry A. White, 75, nationally known writer, professor of English at the University for 26 years, and a leader in high school forensics throughout the state, died early Sunday morning in a local hospital.

The doctor was recently honored by the University for his work on a subject index to a short title catalogue of Renaissance literature. Author of several literary books, he contributed to educational and literary periodicals, and also made an analysis of the works of Sir Walter Scott and Robert Louis Stevenson, with writings on English study and autobiography.

Dr. White received his B.A. from Nebraska Wesleyan University in 1904, followed by his masters degree from Wesleyan in 1905 and Yale university in 1908. He received his Ph.D. from Yale in 1924.

Dr. White was a member of the Modern Language Association of America, vice president of the Nebraska section of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, on the advisory council for simplified spelling, advisor for the Nebraska radio commission, and the Interprofessional Institute.

Services will be held at 10 a.m. at Trinity Methodist church conducted by Rev. T. H. Leonard. Burial will be at the place of Dr. White's birth, Oran, N. Y. The family requests no flowers, but suggests instead that contributions be made in Dr. White's name to the University of Nebraska Foundation Cancer Fund.

Union To Sponsor 'Decorating' Party

It's time for Union workers to put their ingenuity and artistic ability to work.

The Union is holding a decorating party Tuesday from 7 to 9 p.m. in the Union. The party will serve both as a mass meeting and as a general get-together for all Union workers.

Workers on various committees will be divided into different teams. Each team will decorate according to its own individual ideas of what a Christmas tree should look like.

Approximately 14 trees will be decorated and there will be work for all amateur artists. Cocos and cookies will be served following the decoration contest.

Thom Snyder, chairman of the general entertainment committee, is in charge of the party.

'City Design' Exhibition Opens Here

"The Architecture of the City Plan," an exhibition planned and circulated by the Museum of Modern Art, New York, opens today at Morrill hall. It will remain open through December 17.

Twenty-nine panels of enlarged photographs, accompanied by explanatory texts, explain the fundamental principles of city design which have given emotional and visual satisfaction to men since ancient times.

These principles are shown in the arrangement of buildings, plazas, streets, monuments and parks in cities built to meet differing social, economic and political needs in various countries and in successive historical periods.

The exhibition opens with photographs of the ancient cities of Athens and Ostia, Italy. Cities in Germany, France and the Netherlands illustrate the deliberately planned informality of the medieval city with its dominant architectural masterpiece, the cathedral.

Panels show the influence of the new bourgeois class in 18th century Nancy and Bath. Other panels cover the development in overseas colonies, notably Williamsburg, and the residential development in the Bloomsbury area in London.

Pictures covering the 19th century emphasize the revivals of past architectural styles superimposed on the new industrial cities. Panels showing the New York skyline and Rockefeller Center reflect 20th century romanticism. The UN Secretariat building furnishes a recent example of an admittedly esthetic approach to a functional design problem. Photographs of Frank Lloyd Wright's model for a decentralized Broadacre City and of Le Corbusier's sketch of the "vertical city" illustrate two divergent approaches to future city design.

'Rumor Concerning Cigarette Ribbons False'—Tobacco Co., Seeing Eye Inc.

What's in a rumor? The Daily Nebraska printed a story which appeared in the Oct. 5, 1951, issue describing the efforts of Lois Jean Olson to collect ribbons from cigarette packages to help blind youngsters.

Miss Olson had heard that the youngster would receive a seeing eye dog from a cigarette company for a certain number of ribbons. Miss Olson was energetically trying to do her part for a good cause.

The feature editor received a letter from E. R. Dunning, Jr., sales manager of the American Tobacco Company. Dunning had been notified about the article and wrote to inform the editor that similar instances occasionally spring up throughout the United States and the situations are false.

"We do not know how such rumors originate," he writes, "but we have diligently sought to scotch them wherever and whenever they arise."

Dunning continued, "We have cooperated closely with the seeing eye organization to prevent the spread of such rumors, and some time ago, at our expense, Seeing Eye, Incorporated, addressed a letter to every daily newspaper in the United States, advising the editor and his staff that, should any such rumor spring up in his community, it is untrue and should be denied."

A copy of the letter from Henry Colgate, president of The Seeing Eye, Incorporated, to the newspapers was enclosed with Dunning's message.

"There is absolutely no truth to any of these rumors," says Colgate.

"From time to time during the last several years a rumor has arisen in various parts of the country to the general effect that a blind person might obtain a seeing eye dog by collecting a specified number of empty cigarette packages, or cartons, empty match folders, a certain quantity of tin foil or other similar objects," writes Colgate.

The Seeing Eye, Incorporated, and the cigarette companies have successfully dispelled such rumors in various communities when they have been notified of the rumors.

"Nevertheless," continued Colgate, "every once in a while the tobacco manufacturers and our organization receive a pathetic appeal from a blind person asking that a dog be sent to him in return for a collection of wrappers, match covers or tin foil, the quantities varying from 5,000 to as high as 150,000. It is really heartbreaking to have to tell these unfortunate persons that all their work in collecting these objects has been futile."

Thus, small talk may develop into rumors which may result in disappointment for all persons concerned.

Better Living Series To Feature Discussion Of Dating Problems

Rev. Rex Knowles, Presbyterian student pastor, will lead the discussion on dating problems at the third meeting of the Better Living series. The meeting will be Tuesday at 5 p.m. in the Ag Union lounge in the College Activities building.

Mary Lou Huse, activities director for the Ag Union, urged students to bring any personal dating problems to the discussion. She also said that suggestions are welcome concerning where to go on dates, and how to have fun on dates with the least possible expense.

The same discussion will be held Wednesday at 5 p.m. in the Ag Union lounge, and will feature Mrs. Virginia Trotter, assistant professor of home economics, as discussion leader.

Sutherland

and Dan Youngblade. Both are intermen, as is Stange. Both held down regular spots at times last year.

Sutherland believes that this year's team possesses more speed and probably is better defensively than a year ago.

One of the pleasant surprises of the pre-season drills has been the showing of sophomore Howard Johnson. Almost completely out of the varsity picture at the start of drills in October, Johnson has fought and shot his way to the number three forward spot.

Sutherland figures Johnson will be able to give either starter both keen competition and good relief. Howard Frank and George Reas, the latter a regular just reporting from football, are the other top forwards at the moment.

Behind Stange at center are a pair of juniors, Delmar Mierks and Clave Essie. Both show improvement this fall and have been making the center spot deeper than it was a year ago.

Vig Byerly and Jack Lühring have been getting a lot of work at guard spots and have looked good. Lühring has also been used at forward.
