

Husker Horizons That Elusvie Dove

Ever since Jacob Malik first suggested that Korean truce talks be held, hopes for armistice in that Far Eastern country have alternately risen and fallen. Several times it has seemed that the dove of peace was about to be let out of its cage. Then abruptly that cage would be slammed shut again. After long, weary months of negotiation, the two sides now seem closer together than at any time since the talks started.

Early this week, the United Nations and the communists reached agreement on the location of the cease-fire line. Now the two sides have 30 days in which to reach agreement on other disputed points. The two points which are most controversial:

1. Shall joint truce teams be free to inspect the whole of the Korean peninsula?
2. Will there be a ban against military build-ups?

Upon the successful settlement of these points may rest the conclusion of truce talks. The world is waiting and hoping that there may be peace by Christmas or shortly thereafter. But the world remembers a statement made about a year ago in which someone said that America's boys would be home by Christmas.

Ohio Clod Fight

The 1950 senate battle in Ohio is being fought all over again.

The senate elections committee is studying the campaign techniques used by Sen. Robert A. Taft and his opponent, "Jumping Joe" Ferguson in the 1950 campaign. The committee is investigating charges of improper spending and techniques. The results show some dirty linen on both sides of the fence.

Both Ferguson and Taft have accused the other of spend a great deal more than their campaign expense accounts revealed. And both are probably right. Ferguson said that Taft and his supporters spent $5,000,000 instead of the $300,000 reported. Taft said that Ferguson spent $2,000,000 instead of $100,000 reported.

Ferguson charges that there was an alliance between Taft and democratic Gov. Frank J. Lausche, since both men seemed to carry the same election districts. He overlooked the fact that Lausche has always run far ahead of the rest of his party in every election. He also overlooked the fact that there was a great deal of popular revulsion against the type of campaign being waged by labor on behalf of the somewhat inept Ferguson. This campaign included distribution of a picture of Taft and Earl Browder, former head of the communist party in America, on the same plat-

Using State Funds

Dismissal of a state employe for making political trips on state money and state time is a step forward in promoting good government on a state level. Such was the case of Joe Nekuda, former state employe, who was dismissed by Gov. Val Peterson for "misconduct" in making political trips.

The governor's statement that his office "disapproves of use of any state property or state time for political campaigns on anyone's behalf," could well be applied in other states and on national levels.

But there is an unfortunate side to the case, also. As Rufus Howard, state Agriculture director, Tuesday, the reds offered a proposal for a joint armistice commission responsible for armistice arrangements and supervision which offered no provision for inspection behind the lines. The allies wanted this commission to travel anywhere in Korea to make sure that neither side builds up its armaments. North Korean Gen. Nam Il called the allied proposals "inappropriate and impracticable." That is where the situation stood Wednesday.

The allied demands, on their face, seemed reasonable enough. The communists might well wish to conceal the things which lie behind the bamboo curtain. For a curtain isn't a curtain if people can see through it. Whether the reds would start another war in Korea after an armistice is problematical. Maurice Hindus, who addressed a University convocation last week, seemed to think not.

The negotiations have been halted from time to time by various charges and counter-charges. The U.N. has been firm in its demands and the reds have gradually backed down from their original position. How much farther they will back down is questionable. The world would not be too greatly surprised if nothing comes of the talks. But they are hoping that the dove of peace will again fly over a troubled world.

The picture was taken at a public forum in Cleveland during the 1930's.

On the other hand, Taft intimated that Gus Hall, convicted communist leader, was active in Ferguson's behalf.

Both sides have pointed at each other and claimed the respective campaigns were conducted by carpet baggers. The democratic carpet baggers were supposed to be union leaders. The republican carpet baggers included various high GOP officials, including Nebraska's Senator Wherry.

Ferguson also hinted that Taft had paid public school principals in Ohio to let the republican senator speak in assemblies during the course of the campaign.

The charges are still flying—thick and fast. The whole affair prompted Sen. Guy Gillette, committee chairman to remark that the present system for controlling election campaigns is entirely inadequate. There ought to be some way that election campaigns could be controlled so that candidates violating the rules of the game could be denied their seats if they won.

At any rate, Senator Taft is getting quite a few clods thrown in his direction. It looks as if some of them might injure him in his drive for the presidency in 1952.

R. L. Schelkopf Wins Chicago Judging Meet

Russell L. Schelkopf, Ag college senior, was named high individual judge in the intercollegiate livestock judging contest held recently in Chicago.

Schelkopf is a member of the University's senior livestock judging team. Other members are Clayton Yeutter, Darrell Heiss, Frank Sibert, Ralph Hill and Steve Eberhart.

M. A. Alexander, professor of animal husbandry and coach of the team, said this year's intercollegiate contest was the largest since the activity was started in 1900. There were 34 college teams with 170 individuals participating.

The University team placed second in judging cattle, fourth in horses and 20th in the overall contest. Schelkopf was third high man in cattle and 10th in horses. Yeutter placed fourth in cattle.

The University meats judging team placed 10th in their division. Members of the team are Wayne Frost, Tom Lambert and Jerome Warner.

Frost was 15th high individual in the contest, 10th in beef judging and sixth in beef grading. Lambert placed fourth in beef judging and Warner placed eighth in lamb grading.

The meats judging team is coached by Charles Adams, assistant professor of animal husbandry.

Henninger Urges Men To Register

Brig. Gen. Guy N. Henninger, Nebraska State Director of Selective Service, feels that many youths in Nebraska are placing themselves in jeopardy due to their failure to register.

Gen. Henninger could make no estimate of the number of eligibles who were not registered, but the local boards have standing instructions to turn over the names of suspected delinquents under the Selective Service law to federal authorities for investigation and prosecution if facts warrant.

Gen. Henninger went on to report that Nebraska college and high school students have been advised not to be alarmed if they are first classified into class 1-A and retained in that class even though they are full-time students. After registering a young man is put into class 1-A unless he has claim for deferment other than his status as a student.

The law makes it mandatory that the induction of the registrant be postponed until the end of the academic year if in college, or until the registrant graduates from high school or reaches the age of 26 if in high school.

AUF To Stage Auction; Feature Activity Queen

Everything from pledge classes to beauty queens will go on the auction block Dec. 12 from 7 to 8 p.m. in the Union.

The block will be featured at the annual AUF auction with a faculty auctioneer, wielding the hammer. The auction is an All-University Fund money raising event in which anyone may participate.

Featured at the auction will be the presentation of the Activity Queen. She must be a sophomore and will be nominated by an activity in which she participates and selected by the vote of students attending the auction.

The selection of the finalists will be made by the AUF board based on the quality of participation in activities, interest, enthusiasm, ability to work with people and scholarship.

Filings for Activity Queen by activity organizations must be in the AUF mailbox at the Union by 5 p.m. Nov. 30.

Robert H. Dott To Discuss Geology

Robert H. Dott, director of the Oklahoma geological survey, will discuss the mineral rocks of Oklahoma at 8 p.m. Thursday in Morrill hall.

His talk, "Stratigraphy of Oklahoma," will be based upon Kodachrome slides of rock outcrops in the state.

The stratigraphy of Oklahoma is important to all the mid-continent belt, according to geologists, because similar conditions have existed over much of the area east of the Rocky Mountains in the geologic past.

Dott will discuss formations from the granite basement to recent river deposits. He will emphasize new facts relating to oil, gas and other minerals of Oklahoma.

The speech is jointly sponsored by the University Research Council and the department of geology.

Braunroth Places In Essay Contest

Douglas Braunroth, Ag college junior, was named recently as one of the 35 winners in a national Swift and Company essay writing contest.

An all-expense trip to Chicago was awarded to Braunroth. The 35 winners will assemble there Dec. 2 to 5 for a special marketing study program. The subject of Braunroth's essay was the use of meat products.

KU Poll Shows 75% Of Frosh Coeds Want 'Unprintable Humor'

Kathryn Radaker

Kansas University . . .

Sour Owl, humor magazine, recently took a survey of student opinion on what they wanted in a campus humor magazine.

The survey showed, strangely enough, that students want humor in a humor magazine.

They got some surprising results. According to the survey, only 25 per cent of the men questioned wanted "unprintable humor," but 75 per cent of the freshman girls wanted it.

Also Kansas university asks "What do girls look for in boys?" Some of the answers:

"One, has he got a car? Two, a fellow that treats me like a lady and takes someone else into consideration besides himself. Three, two big arms . . ."

"Gee, I guess I look for those broad shoulders . . ."

"The first thing I look for in a boy is a good personality. Next, I usually think about his probabilities for future success. Last, and least, comes his looks."

"I look for their more personal qualities like a car, money, etc. You know!"

University of California . . .

band received quite a student sendoff for its trip to UCLA.

As the band was loading itself and its equipment into buses, students inside the library opened the windows and rained water bombs onto the court below.

It was quite a barrage, causing an estimated $600 worth of damage to the band's equipment—mostly the drums. One band member got a bloody nose when he attempted to "rush" the bomb throwers.

Michigan State . . .

columnist declared after writing about "campus intellectuals": "The majority of them wear horn rimmed glasses, sport long, wavy hair, and delicately hold king-size cigarettes in their long narrow fingers. Many of them feel that, being philosophers, they should smoke nothing but pipes and are rarely seen without one."

Ed note: With a cigarette in one hand and a pipe in the other, how do they put on their horn rimmed glasses?
