intercollegiate program and urged adoption of a statement of policies and principles concerning these practices.

Those in attendance approved the matters brought up in the report, Dean Rosenlof said. Among recommendations made by the committee, which represented the secondary schools' stake in the matter of conduct of intercollegiate athletics, was one regarding the holding of post-season bowl and so-called all-star games. The committee recommended that no colleges make their facilities and staffs available for such contests, pointing out that the Big Ten had already taken such action.

National Collegiate Athletic association members present passed a resolution to present to the NCAA's January convention appropriate legislative proposals to enable delegates to vote on the post-season contest question. NCAA member schools will be requested not to make or renew any bowl commitments extending beyond Jan. 2, 1953.

The North Central committee, acting upon the premise that "present abuses... exert a powerful influence on lay opinion which is reflected in the attitude of the local public toward high school sports," listed those practices which it felt were harming high school athletes, who, it said, eventually become the college athletes and also, to some extent, the coaches of the future.

The committee listed the necessity for:

1. Statement of a fundamental philosophy by colleges that it is their business to educate and not to entertain the public on a commercial basis. All athletic practices should be premised on such philosophy, it said.

2. Practice of offering special financial inducements to athletes to attend, over and above those available to all students.

3. Cessation of the practice of recruiting by athletic departments and substitution of a method through which contact with prospective students could be made only through the office of the high school principal.

4. Cessation of the practice of "tryouts" and of elaborate entertainment for high school students.
5. Establishment of rigid standards of scholarship for intercollegiate athletic competition and the enforcement of those standards.
6. Cessation of the practice of granting athletic scholarships.
