

Candidates Explain Platforms

The 49 year-old mayor would attempt, first of all, to unite the various factions who quarreled over the old system and defeated it in the referendum last spring. He believes his plan would be more successful than the present governor-state engineer department because it would get the commission "out of the governor's office."

Taking issue, the North Platte lawyer said he favors a program that is "independent of the governor's office." Crosby proposes a bipartisan committee that would have full authority to supervise the state highway program.

Although Anderson did not arrive at the discussion in time to take a stand on river basin development, Crosby came out strongly in favor of the Pick-Sloan Plan as opposed to the Missouri Valley Authority.

The local control allowed by the Pick-Sloan Plan makes it much more desirable than MVA, he said.

"I am enthusiastic about river basin development," he said. "The system of Platte valley development could be done on every valley."

About the fair Employment Practices bill now before the Legislature, Anderson said he believes "everyone should have an equal opportunity to work in the state" but took no stronger stand.

Crosby again voiced somewhat stronger opinion said, "I would have a Negro in a high public office," and failure to appoint a Negro to a state committee this last year reflects a "stupid attitude" on the part of committee members.

Anderson, one-time leader for acceptance of a high University budget, pledged all out support to University projects, among them an interdenominational chapel as suggested by a member of the audience.

Crosby said he also favors construction of a chapel and went along with Anderson on the suggestion of a Coordinator of Religious Activities on campus with the status of a professor.

Anderson, a banker and hardware merchant and Crosby who calls himself an amateur politician, pledged their mutual support following the April 1 primary.

The two shook hands and joked freely as they spoke on their separate platforms.

Crosby served as Lieutenant Governor, 1947 to 1949. He had previously been Speaker of the Legislature before leaving for naval duty in 1944.

Anderson began a 12 year term on the city Sanitary District I, 1936 and became a senator in 1948. Following his term in the Legislature he planned to retire from public life but was appointed mayor in 1950.

Anderson is the elder of the two candidates but Crosby has had a more extensive formal education. He is a graduate of Harvard law school. Anderson quit the University in his junior year to accept a partnership in his father's business immediately following the death of his father's partner.

'Music From Everywhere' Shows What Novices May Do

If you like music from everywhere, then you are sure to like "Music from Everywhere." This may sound slightly redundant, but an explanation of the statement will prove that it is not. "Music From Everywhere" is a program heard Monday, Wednesday, and Friday from 3 to 3:15 p.m. over KNUS. The program features every type of music, from "hop time" to waltz time.

Encees of the program are Dorothy Elliot and Roger Schimm. Schimm, a business administration major, writes the program and both he and Miss Elliot broadcast it.

Miss Elliot and Schimm prove the statement that a person need not be a radio major to produce a listenable radio program. Miss Elliot is a first year radio student and music librarian for KNUS. Schimm is taking his first course in radio this semester and with the little training he has had thus far, has found that he is able to produce the show three times, a week.

Other non-radio major students who are writing and producing excellent radio programs are Bruce Hollander and Joel Milder.

"Interlude" is the name of the program that KNUS broadcasts every Tuesday and Thursday from 3 to 3:15 p.m. Hollander writes and emcees both shows and Milder plays co-master-of-ceremonies and record selector for the Thursday show.

The interesting fact about "Interlude" is that it features music that is well-known, but yet not continually in the limelight. In other words, music that is perennially popular, instead of currently popular.

The Thursday "Interlude" show is a boom to campus pop lovers. Hollander and Milder play music with the accent of boy and sewing. Both "Music from Everywhere" and "Interlude" provide music for the masses . . . music that can be classified as popular whether old or new.

There are the short, long and high puffs. The dolman and pointed set-in sleeves continue to be good.

Of course the favorite for some time to be is the sleeveless blouse. You will be seeing cotton, sheers, linen, and shantung featured that have no sleeves. A new kind of sleeveless blouse caught my eye was the blouse with the pleated back.

Last year I noticed many people hesitated about buying blouses (especially the sleeveless cottons) that had rhinestone studs. I'm sure you will be more accustomed to them this season and will want to buy one.

Blouses In Vogue Winter Or Spring

Dolly McQuistan

So today I decided to write about blouses because I know you feel like taking a blouse out of your closet for something different to wear besides the regular skirt and sweater.

You may have glanced at the magazines, or the blouse counters and noticed the new candy striped blouses. The minute you put one on, that certain guy of yours is going to look twice, not because the stripes hurt his eye, but because they are so new and striking.

The striped or checked blouse is sometimes referred to as the "Gibson Girl" blouse. But the "Gibson Girl" has a style that will prove to be one of the most popular blouses for the spring season. The "Gibson Girl" usually has three-quarter length sleeves.

I wish I was an artist so I could draw you a picture of the "leg-of-mutton" sleeve which is also three-quarter length. I feel that the name of this particular sleeve does not do it justice for it is more appealing than it sounds. It is full at the top of the shoulder line and tight fitting at the cuff.

Sleeves and shoulder lines are less padded and have more puff.
