Lethargy Or Leaders?

Koehler or Loudon? DeBord or Gass? Esch or Mann? Carey or Weaver?

Which of these women will head campus activities during the coming year? The decision will be made by the women students Tuesday.

Each year there are many coeds who fail to take the time or fail to show enough interest to go to the polls.

The Associated Women Students board periodically is under fire from individuals and organizations who oppose its policies.

A strong, active organization for independent women is a necessity on this campus.

Looking Toward College

The efforts many high schools are exerting to stress the importance of higher education was well demonstrated last week at Nebraska City high school's College day.

The program, one of the most extensive in this area, is a project well worth the consideration of other high schools.

The message delivered to those high school students at the opening session by Julius Humann, assistant principal of Lincoln Northeast high school in Lincoln, is one deserving attention of all students.

Dear Mr. Quigley . . .

Sen. Estes Kefauver's election over President Truman may be the best news since television to the cohorts in the Kefauver camp.

Margin Notes

Congratulations to the University Builders members who have gone without much sleep this past week to entertain visiting high school students and to interest them in the University.

The day of the high school basketball convention might very well have been a relief to many University students driving cars on campus.

However, many University drivers have become so accustomed to the strict parking laws on campus that they forgot about the weekend rule and still kept playing "ring-around-Sosh" before their 8 o'clock.

Since a delegation of Hawaiians is traveling to the States to demand a retraction of statement from Sen. "up-for-election" Tom Connolly, it might be possible and profitable for a similar Alaskan delegation to visit Washington, D.C.

The Daily Nebraska believes it might do a number of students some good to look at the atomic energy exhibition, prepared by Life magazine, now on display in the Union lounge.

Far Eastern students who have seen the exhibit viewed with horror and almost forgotten memories the picture of one of the 69,000 atomic bomb victims who was fortunate in escaping the Hiroshima blast alive.

It might also prove beneficial to a number of the political and military leaders who insist that the atomic or hydrogen bomb should be used.

And speaking of the state tournament, Husker fans might take a few lessons from the never-dying spirit demonstrated by the high school fans. Win or lose, it appears as if they always think their team is tops.

Congratulations are in order for the administrative personnel who are responsible for University students' grades coming out almost one and a half months earlier than in previous years.

Daily Thought

Constant questioning is the key to wisdom . . . Through doubting we come to inquiry and through inquiry we perceive truth. Abelard.

Activities Board for Women can will this need if qualified persons are elected to the positions. Any independent woman who fails to vote will have no grounds for crying that only Greek women have any power on campus.

Similarly, the Coed Councilors board will be planning the program for women entering the University as freshmen next fall.

The Women's Athletic association, although its election is open to members only, also must have a strong board to direct its activities.

However, even if all women in University vote in the election, there is a strong possibility that best-qualified leaders will not be elected.

Election results will be announced Wednesday. Let us hope that the most capable boards will be elected. It can be done, if EVERY woman votes. —S.A.

and a good one.

He reminded us that from the Biblical time when Cain hit Abel, we have progressed in a multitude of ways.

But, as Humann pointed out, we still use one method entirely primitive. We still use a club to hit a misbehaving neighbor.

Since we still use this one primitive method, our minds need to be educated to the point where they will not devote so much of their work to wreck the world.

It is the knowledge and significance of peace and constructiveness we must learn. For that reason alone, college is vital.

The Nebraska City project illustrates a progressive and direct way of encouraging high school students to continue education.—J.K.

C. Quigley's way of thinking, the Kefauver win does not make the Nebraska Kerr-Kefauver contest any more significant, it is "just one of those things," and he considers the folks in New Hampshire an "entirely different kind of people."

The Daily Nebraskan would like to take issue with Quigley's statements; not in regard to the outcome of the Kerr-Kefauver contest in Nebraska, but concerning his opinion of this nation's voters.

It hardly can be said that the results of one of the nation's most important primaries are "just one of those things." What the election results indicate is the judgment of persons over 21 years of age about whom they would like to have leading the affairs of their country.

Your addition statement, Mr. Quigley, that people are unpredictable does not seem to have any relevance to the possible connection between the New Hampshire and Nebraska primaries.

The Daily Nebraskan realizes, Mr. Quigley, that your statements were in regard to the effect of Kefauver's win on the state Kerr-Kefauver contest. However, for whatever purpose you directed your remarks, we feel that you have completely underestimated the strengths and merits of the voting public—that very public whose votes you seek for Sen. Robert S. Kerr. —R.R.

We Need UMT

To the Editor: I do not stand for what Adolph Hitler said he wanted, nor do I agree with George Washington (today's application).

I do sincerely believe that we need a strong, enlarged and trained reserve force, which UMT would provide.

A naval air reservist, was on active duty from July, 1950 to October, 1951. Therefore I have seen what the reservist means to us.

It was the general knowledge, and previous training of our voluntary reservists that provided the crew for this ship, and trained those 50 men in operation of that highly mechanical, or electrical controlled ship.

What are we going to do if the Soviet Union decides to move with her submarines and armies into either Asia or Europe, or perhaps in both places.

Sincerely, DALE KING TOPS

Comments Anderson

The impulse of writing to an editor is usually stronger when something appears in a paper with which one disagrees.

However, ever since the beginning of this school year up until now I have had the impression that The Daily Nebraskan has done a very fine job in calling the attention of the University family to vital questions of the day.

Naturally, as a faculty member whose work is the language and literature of another people, I was impressed with the article by Professor E. N. Anderson of the history department.

I admire his profound insight as to the cultural and human need for knowing another language.

When we people of the language departments point out the important facts about our field, people may be tempted to regard our pleadings as speaking up for our "bread and butter."

Yours sincerely, W. K. PFELLER, Chairman, Department of Germanic Languages.

'Pal Joey' Points Up Trend Toward Lack Of U.S. Morals

Charles Gomon

One of this season's openings on Broadway which seems destined to be a smash hit is the O'Hara-Rogers-Hart musical "Pal Joey."

The theater, particularly the Broadway musical, may not be the best yardstick of contemporary moral standards.

Of even greater significance is the fact that "Pal Joey" was first produced twelve years ago but at that time it was not much of a success.

As is a well-known fact, leap year is here and spring almost year is here and spring almost.

They don't detract from good looks. Another interesting fact is that coeds prefer a veritable Tarzan with a 32-inch waist and a 38-inch chest.

Democracy In Reverse

Racial discrimination in California since World War II has for the most part gone on subtly, beneath the surface, unreported in newspaper headlines.

There are no segregated sections on our streets and trains. Our public rest rooms do not draw a blatant dividing line between "white ladies" and "colored women."

Only occasionally does a dramatic incident of racial intolerance crop up in the press. When this happens, it rips the complacent surface from our self-termed broadmindedness.

The experience of Sing Sheng and his family, who after an unfavorable vote of their neighbors, yielded their home in the Southwood district of South San Francisco, forces such a re-examination upon us.

There was no terrorism involved in the removal of the Shengs from their home.

In this state, discrimination is couched in the unstated understandings of restaurant owners and rooming house landlords and—as in the Southwood incident—in the fine type of restrictive covenants.

Every adult resident of Southwood must be aware of the fact that restrictive covenants are unconstitutional. Most of them probably consider discrimination intolerable and intolerance underecognize it, a laxity of moral and ethical standards does exist in this country.

The deplorable part of the situation is that the moral and ethical standard seems to have disappeared.

It is true that the victories of Sen. Estes (Crime-Buster) Kefauver in the New Hampshire primary and of Rudolph Hall, the crime committee's chief investigator, in the New York city council elections indicate that some citizens are becoming aware of the problem of morals and ethics.

This lovely hypothetical young thing must have dark, medium long and wavy hair, which all goes to prove that gentlemen don't ALWAYS prefer blondes.

Leap year's advent seems to have instigated a series of nasty words between sexes throughout the country.

It would seem that the survival of our society is dependent on the reestablishment of high moral and ethical standards.

Technically "Pal Joey" is an excellent musical, but it also serves to point up the current trend in moral and ethical standards.
