fer, Knostman and Lovellette. Art Punte is the only sophomore to make the Nebraskan's second team. The awkward looking Colorado did much to keep Colorado in the dangerous and giant-killing classification all year long.

On the second unit, Housey and Bob Kenney provide the spark from their guard spots; Jim Stange is in charge of the pivot duties; and Bunte and Sherman Norton of Oklahoma are the forwards. The honorable mention list includes, for the most part, players that were consistent throughout the season and were primary sources of support for the first and second team members.

Bill Lienhard, injured the last few Kansas games, Joe Good, Nebraska's scrappy junior, George Hess, Iowa State and Frank Gompert were all outstanding examples of dependable performers for their team.

If Harry Smith, Missouri's newest coaching addition, insists on putting in a 7-2-2-1 defense when spring drills begin here Monday, Head Man Don Faurot will have to pardon Smitty's yen for a 12-man football.

It's just his Canadian background, you see. Smith returns to the Missouri staff this month fresh from a one-year hitch as head coach of the Saskatchewan Rough Riders—and he's partial to those 12-man defenses. He's happy, though, to be back where football-playing weather is more temperate, especially after one memorable experience up north.

"We went into one of those playoff games with a three-inch layer of ice covering the field," Smitty shivers, "and another inch of snow fell during the game. We had to use hockey bluing to mark off the sidelines."

Still broad and compact—built along the lines of a refrigerator—Big Harry rejoined the Missouri staff March 1 after a two-year sojourn at USC as freshman grid coach, and a year in Canada. He replaces Bob Maddock who went to the University of Indiana as line coach last month, and who, incidentally, filled Smitty's vacancy here in 1949.

Last year, Smith—a two-time All-American guard at USC—led Saskatchewan to a 10-3 campaign, and the squad's first championship year since 1936. The Rough Riders were finalists in the Grey Cup playoffs.

Pro football is thriving in Canada, Smitty says, and in the Western sector, at least, is out-drawing hockey—the national pastime. The final playoff game, for instance, drew 28,000, and tickets were scaled all the way to $6 a copy.

Talent is, in Smitty's opinion, uniformly good. Each squad carries 30 players, but must pare its roster to seven American players by Oct. 1. Two of Saskatchewan's mainstays last year were Glenn Dobbs, former Tulsa triple-threat, and Don "Red" Ettinger, the ex-Kansas line stalwart.

Dobbs recently was named player-coach of the Saskatchewan club, succeeding Smith. Ettinger rates Smitty's highest accolades.

"That red-head is a football-playing demon—a great competitor," says Smith of Ettinger. "He played the full 60 minutes in sixteen of our games—and played it tough all the way."

Basically, Canadian football follows the American pattern, but has its own individualistic touches.

The major deviations are:

1. Twelve men instead of eleven

Cornhusker Coaching Staff

THEIR BIG JOB JUST STARTED... The Nebraska coaching staff has awakened after a four month dormancy period and has been shaping up the varsity football squad for the 1952 season. Over 100 prospective candidates have turned out to take their spring conditioning from (left to right) line coaches Marvin Franklin and Ralph Fire, backfield coach Bob Davis and (kneeling) head coach Bill Glassford.

Kansas State's Wildcats landed two players on the Daily Nebraskan's All Big Seven team this year, placed a man on the second team and two on the honorable mention list to lead this year's selections.

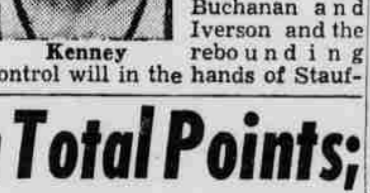

Dick Iverson, fiery Wildcat guard, and Dick Knostman both placed on the first team. Nebraska's Jim Buchanan won the other guard position with Iverson, while Missouri's Bill Stauffer fills the other forward post with Knostman. Clyde Lovellette had little difficulty winning the pivot post.

The University of Kansas placed a total of four men on this year's all star team. Besides Lovellette, senior Bob Kenney took a second berth guard position and two other Jayhawks received honorable mention.

The starting team consists of four senior and one junior. Three of the starting alignment set new records at their respective schools. Buchanan and Stauffer cracked Nebraska and Missouri's marks and Cumulus Clyde picked off the Jayhawk standard as well as national records.

Only Dick Knostman will require more court action next year. His teammates, Bob Rousey, Jesse Priscock and Gene Wilson will all be back next year to spark Coach Jack Gardner's basketballers.

There is no denying that starting team. They have scoring punch plus. They have height with an average of 6 feet 4 inches per man. They have the floor leadership in Buchanan and Iverson and rebo und i n g control will in the hands of Stauffer.

The girls basketball tournament is still underway. There were just two games played this week. The Chi Omega first team defeated the Kappa Delta first team 15-9. Joanie Corrick scored six points for the winners, and Marilyn Mathews scored six points for the losers.

Also the Alpha Xi's first team defeated the Gamma Phi Beta second team 18-10. Barbara Mann scored ten points for the winners.

The quarter-finals start next week, and from then on the tournament is going to be double elimination.

The officials, referees, umpires and time keepers, have had a very big part to play in this tournament. There is an officials club, and these girls had to pass skill, and written tests to get into this club. The time keepers, have just had past experience, and they are volunteering their time.

The badminton and duckpin club is still meeting every Wednesday, Kay Christoffel, and Barbara Tooley are heads of these clubs respectively.

The tennis club, headed by Carol Frene is also going to get underway as soon as weather permits.

Eight players on the roster of the Washington Senators hail from Cuba. None comes from Washington, D. C.

Huskers 3rd In Total Points; Buchanan 4th High Scorer

The Nebraska basketball team ranked third in total points scored this season in Big Seven basketball play. The Cornhuskers averaged 60.2 points per game to trail Kansas State, 73.8 and Kansas 71.4.

Jim Buchanan finished fourth among the conference high scorers. Clyde Lovellette won the title with 336 points and a 28.0 average. Buchanan had 184 points for a 15.3.
