

Aquaettes Present Pageant, 'Down The Mississippi' Tonight

By MARY JANE McCULLOUGH Staff Writer

Aquaettes, women's swim club, will take spectators on a tour "Down The Mississippi" at its annual water pageant at the Coliseum, Friday and Saturday, April 4 and 5, at 8 p.m.

mosphere with their black stockings.

A comedy act will find swimmers playing leap frog, stunt diving and clown swimming along the banks of the Mississippi.

At Memphis, the next port, southern belles in their ruffles and frills twirl their umbrellas and dominate the scene.

The swimmers will wear skirts and tails as they stroke together "Cruising Down the River."

Moving further southward, fluorescent painted hands shag to "Dixie" as they glow in the darkness.

Bad weather hits the Mississippi as "Stormy Weather" is portrayed by girls with clashing gold spangles doing ballet leg and back dolphins stunts.

Elaine Esch, Sally Mallory and Jo Raben, performing as a trio are the first in the history of Aquaettes to use body lights as the sole illumination in their darkness number that brings the "Daybreak" after the storm.

Earnings add to the jazz of the "Basin Street Blues" as the submarine performers do back dolphin dives.

"Rhapsody in Blue", a diving trio number, stars Virginia Nye, intramural diving champion.

New Orleans is the last stop as the swimmers celebrate the Mardi Gras with the traditional balloons and masks.

Everyone joins in the finale to take one last glance at "Old Man River."

Narrator Nancie DeBord will be on hand to relate the voyage tale.

Aquaette officers are: Jo Raben, president; Elaine Esch, vice president; Sally Mollory, secretary; and Phoebe Dempster, publicity chairman. Mary Mulvaney is sponsor.

SAL Installs 11 Officers

New officers of Sigma Alpha Iota, women's music sorority, were installed Tuesday night.

The new officers are Ruthann Lavine, president; Gladys Novotny, vice president; Marilyn Preusse, secretary; Phoebe Dempster, treasurer; Lucy Lavine, assistant treasurer; Marilyn Hammond, chaplain; Janet Kasi, assistant chaplain; Janice Fullerton, corresponding secretary; Anne Jane Hall, rush and social chairman; Judy Sehnert, program chairman; and Harriet Swanson, editor.

Plans were made for a party to be given by the chapter's pledges April 18. At that time the pledges will present their original compositions. The next day, the morning of April 19, six will be initiated into the organization. To be initiated are Janet Rash, Charlotte Hervert, Lucy Lavine, Muriel Pickett, Delores Garrett and Sherry Clover.

Ten Sigma Alpha Iota members attended the province convention at the University of Kansas, Lawrence, the weekend of March 15. Delegates were Ruth Lemka, Jan Liljedahl, Gladys Novotny, Kathy Robinson, Janet Rash, Ruthann Lavine, Marjorie Murphy (instructor), Mary Jane Waggoner (instructor), Janice Wagner and Bonnie Weddel.

Tri Deltas, Alpha Xis, ATOs To Hold Spring Formals Saturday

Connie Gordon

The spring formal season is really in full swing now. Every week brings a new flow of parties and terrific parties they are!

For instance, Saturday evening, the Tri Deltas are holding their spring formal at Cotner Terrace. Before the dance, two parties are going to be held at the respective homes of Jeanne Stockstill and Marti Hill. And after the dance, the Tri Deltas and their dates are going to migrate to the Village.

The news of the day concern the pinning of Gamma Phi Beta to Phi Gamma Glenn Rosenquist. Congratulations to both. The news yesterday (I forgot to put this in the column) is the pinning of Chi O Dee Hopp to Delt Jerry Yeager.

NU Singers Concert Set For Sunday

A special Palm Sunday concert will be presented by University Singers at First Plymouth Congregational church at 5 p.m. Sunday. Dr. Arthur Westbrook, director of the school of fine arts, will direct the University choral group as it sings Faure's "Requiem."

Parts of the "Requiem" are "Grant Them Rest Eternal," "Offertory," "Holy, Holy, Holy," "Blessed Jesus," "Lamb of God," "Deliver Me" and "In Paradise."

An organ presentation of Franck's "Fantasy in A" will be given by Myron Roberts, associate professor of organ and theory, before the "Requiem."

Local Symphony Includes 27 University Students

By DICK RALSTON Feature Editor

University students have invaded the Lincoln Symphony orchestra.

Altogether, there are 27 students playing with the Symphony for reasons ranging from gaining experience to earning spending money. In addition, there are several graduate students and faculty members who participate in the city music group.

Emanuel Wishnow, professor of violin and director of the University orchestra, cited the arrangement as "working for the mutual advantage of both the students and the Lincoln Symphony. The experience gained (by the students) in playing with professional musicians and accompanying the guest soloists is invaluable," he said.

"I think it's a fine experience," reported Bob Chab, tuba player with the Lincoln Symphony and a junior in Teachers college, "and I thoroughly enjoy it. We've been playing very good music, and it's been a wonderful opportunity."

Velda Stonecypher, viola player and winner of the Lincoln Symphony's annual vocal audition, said that playing with the Lincoln Symphony "has helped a great deal in developing a greater knowledge of symphonic music."

Referring to Leo Kopp, director of the Lincoln Symphony, she said, "I think he's a very interesting personality and a very fine musician. I appreciate the opportunity to be able to play under him."

In addition to the experience, students belonging to a union get paid for each concert. "It's not much, said Chab, "but it helps."

Students playing violin with the Lincoln Symphony are: Earl Schuman, Keith Eck, Irene Roberts, Donna Gardner, Sheila Brown, Ruth Johnson and Alice Saunders, Velda Stonecypher is the only viola player from the University.

Charles Klasek, Janice Liljedahl and James Christensen play cello, and Miriam Willey and William Krause help out in the flute section.

'Skin Deep' Beauty Brought To Surface By Women Ever Since Cleopatra's Time

By CONNIE GORDON Society Editor

Beauty may be only skin deep, but for thousands of years, women have been using every commodity imaginable to bring it to the surface.

The eyes had it back in Cleopatra's day. The women of that time had kohl on their eyelashes with kohl and were shadowed with green paint.

Poppaea, the wife of Nero, whitened her skin with white lead. For contrast she smeared the juice of wild berries on her lips and cheeks. She also used kohl for her eyes and lashes.

Soap from Gal furnished bleach for the royal heir.

The Roman women had a novel way of curing skin disorders. They used flour and butter to cure them and pumice stone to whiten their teeth.

The Crusaders returning from the East brought make-up with them to England. The beauty patch that was the vogue recently originated during the reign of Queen Elizabeth. One beauty routine that was also very popular during that time was a hot bath followed by a face wash in wine. This was supposed to induce a ruddy complexion.

Milk baths were the rage during the reign of Charles II; but Mary Queen of Scots was not a teetotaling bather and is said to have taken wine baths.

Things got so bad in England that in 1770, the English parliament introduced a bill stating that a woman could be accused of witchcraft if she "betrayed in matrimony" any of the subjects of the king through the use of powders, paints or padded hips.

Because of this law, the use of cosmetics became nil... until about two decades had passed, anyway.

Then, and since, cosmetics have played an important role in the looks of women all over the civilized world... uncivilized too, for that matter. It looks as if beauty out of a jar is going to continue to be popular for many years to come.

Tea To Honor 400 At FHA Convention

Four hundred high school girls attending the annual Future Homemakers of American convention at the University this week will be honored at a tea Saturday afternoon.

Sponsored by Ag Builders and Home Ec club, the tea will be held between 3 and 5 p.m. in the lounge of the Food and Nutrition building.

Catherine Melvin and Mary Jean Niehaus are in charge of displays and Karen Hagarty and Ann Kokjer are planning the food. Among the hostesses are Marilyn Sehnert, Jean Selk, Miss Melvin and Miss Kokjer.

At a recent KAM meeting, Stan Sohl, co-sponsor of the organization, gave a talk on print quality and showed illustrations of results achieved from using various photographic papers.

Sohl's talk and illustrations were designed to show KAM members the importance of striving for good print quality in photo competition prints.
