NU Faculty Completes Three Books

Three new textbooks have been written by four University faculty members.

Clifford M. Hicks, chairman of the business organization and management department, is the author of "Business Law," published by Harper and Brothers of New York City. The 1,155 page book represents a fresh approach to teaching business law in that all rules and decisions in the cases are directly quoted words of court decisions, with only the fact being summarized by the author.

Dr. Norman Hill, professor of political science, is the author of "International Organization," published by Harper and Brothers. The book discusses the workings of the United Nations, International Court of Justice, and other governmental and private organizations, but is not concerned with international politics.

Dr. J. M. Reinhardt, chairman of the sociology department, and Dr. Paul Meadows, professor of sociology, and the late J. M. Gillette of the University of North Dakota, are the authors of "Social Problems and Social Policy" published by the American Book Company. The book deals with some of the major problems confronting society today and stresses the need for understanding and solving them through democratic processes.

Acacia's Red Flag Display May Cause $1,000 Fine Or Prison Term

By DICK RALSTON
Feature Editor

Acacia, it been nice having you around.

Leslie Jensen, freshman in Law college, reports that the Acacia boys may be fined up to $1,000 or be imprisoned up to five years according to existing Nebraskan statutes, for their display of a red, mock Russian flag.

The Acacians represented Russia at the mock United Nations assembly last Thursday and Friday. Their flag consisted of a star and a hammer and sickle on a red field.

Jensen quoted section 28-1104 of the Revised Statutes of Nebraska, 1943: "It shall be unlawful for any person to display within the state of Nebraska any red flag or black flag." Provision is made, however, that the railroads may use red flags as signals and that they may be used as warning signs.

Section 28-1105 states that "It shall be unlawful for any person to have in his possession, custody, or control any red or black flag."

Section 28-1107 sets the punishment for the violation of either of these statutes as "a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment of not more than five years."

The Acacians did run into some mild trouble over their flag when they were visited by detectives from the local police force late Wednesday afternoon. Pat Allen, junior in business administration, reports that "the detectives requested that we take (the flag) down for the evening because of several complaints over its display."

They took it down that evening, Allen said, and put it up early the next morning.

"Our purpose in the use of the flag," said Allen, "was to obtain information in the United Nations and cause the people to get further enlightenment in the proceedings of the U.N."

It was stated that Ed Weir, captain in 1924 and 1925, was the last captain named by players to some of the major problems confronting society today and stresses the need for understanding and solving them through democratic processes.
