Politics At A Glance

By LOUIS SCHOEN

Former Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower arrived home this past week with an official discharge from the United States Army in one hand and a presidential campaign speech in the other.

Never in my memory has such a hullabaloo been raised over a single candidate at this point in the race. Newspaper editors, politicians and just plain common folk all over the country have, within the last eight days, expressed almost every opinion possible concerning every possible thing about the man.

His personality has been hashed over the coals until, if he were to read every account which has been published of the kind of man he is, he would be the most maladjusted person in the world, and undoubtedly ready for a mental institution.

The tremendous difference of opinion concerning Ike and the meaning of his first campaign speech can be seen locally, by reading editorials of both the Lincoln Journal and the Omaha World-Herald.

A Journal editorial described him as "a man from the wrong side of the tracks who is fully at home with the common elements of American life, at home with great issues and noble ideals and at home with people in the mass or face to face."

The same editorial described his first speech, in Abilene, as outlining "Ike's broad principles and purposes for the nation and the free world, the foundation of his campaign for the nomination and for the presidency if nominated. This was a militant call to Americans to fight the battle of freedom and democracy at home as they fought abroad. It was a statement of a real American creed on which Americans can unite, dignified, frank, and without vituperation or rancor. Through it ran a gold thread of religious faith . . ."

A World-Herald editorial, published on the same day as the above excerpt from a Journal editorial, described Eisenhower's first speech as one which "added little to what was already known about his views . . ."

" . . . He is opposed to inflation and deficits. He thinks taxes are too high, and urges that 'waste, duplication and extravagance' be eliminated. He feels that the central Government has grown too large, should be deflated.

"This is good, sound doctrine, but hardly original or sensational. Others have said it, maybe even better."

It is, of course, a well known fact that the World-Herald is an avowed Robert A. Taft-supporting newspaper, and it is generally assumed that the Journal editorial policy favors Eisenhower for the presidency. Which, if either, of the two accounts of Eisenhower should the people believe? Only time will tell, and until it does, this editor will not be influenced by either of the two accounts.

On the Democratic side of the political picture, Sen. Estes Kefauver received added strength in his bid for the presidential nomination with sweeps of delegate strength in California and South Dakota. The Tennessee senator now leads the Democratic field by a wide margin, but much can happen between now and the July convention in Chicago.

The party conventions, of course, will be only the beginning of the race, for following them will be three months of bitter campaigning between the two party nominees before the final climax arrives—the November 4 election.

Union To Sponsor Summer Tours Of Lincoln and Omaha

Do you have a desire to travel and see the world? Why not start in Lincoln and Omaha, where some of the most significant spots of scenic and historical interest are located?

The Union will sponsor three tours, this summer, to give you a chance to see some of these places.

The first excursion will be Saturday afternoon, to the places of interest in Lincoln. Some of the places visited will be Pioneers Park and Bowl, the State Hospital and Penitentiary, the Piedmont district and Ag college campus.

A bus will leave from the Union at 1 p.m. There will be a ticket charge of 75 cents to cover transportation costs. Anyone who is interested should register at the Main Office of the Union before 5 p.m. Friday. Unless there is a group of 20, it will be impossible to conduct the tour, so Union Activities Director Marilyn Moomey has suggested that people get together and form groups to insure the necessary number of people, or you may register by yourself.

The second and third tours will take students to Omaha. The first of these, June 28, will take in such places of cultural interest as Boys Town, Joslyn Memorial and the television studio.

The July 2 tour will take in the industrial centers of Omaha. You can visit the Stock exchange, the World Herald building, and the cereal mills.

It will be necessary for you to register for these tours by 5 p.m.

on the Tuesday previous to the tour. Registration will be continued in the Main office of the Union, and the round trip charge for each excursion will be $2.25.

Union To Hold Square Dance

"Swing your partner and promenade" right down to the Union Friday night at 8:30 for a good old-fashioned Square Dance.

The whole affair is free to students, faculty, and staff of the University, and it is a good night's entertainment for anyone no matter how old or young. Bring a date or come with a group . . . square dancing is a good way to get acquainted.

Enthusiasts are urged to wear comfortable clothes.

W. G. Lewis, Address IVCF

W. G. Lewis will speak to the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in Room 315 of the Union.

Mr. Lewis, Lincoln Hatchery owner, recently returned from a seven month trip through the Orient.

He is a "dental missionary" who fixes the teeth of Christian missionaries in foreign lands. The program is open to the public.

Med College Graduates 148

One hundred forty-eight people received degrees, diplomas and certificates at the University College of Medicine and School of Nursing graduation exercises.

Three students were graduated "cum laude," the highest honor the Omaha college can bestow upon a graduate. They are:

Leo A. Hrnicek of Omaha, Hans Rath of Peru and James L. Vose of Sargent.

Dr. C. A. Weymuller, professor of pediatrics at the State University of New York and an alumnus of the college of medicine, who was the principal speaker of the commencement, was awarded an honorary Doctor of Science degree for his research in the care of newborn infants.

Chancellor R. G. Gustavson presided and presented the awards.

many aspects of crime and law enforcement.

Dr. Reinhardt, a member of the University faculty since 1931, has been a special lecturer at the academy since March, 1946. He is the only guest expert of which there are several each session, to be retained for such long tenure.

The University summer sessions, in co-operation with the Nebraska Bookmen's Association and the Nebraska Audio-Visual Association, is sponsoring the annual textbook and audio-visual exhibit again this summer.

The exhibit will be held in Love Library auditorium beginning Monday and ending Friday.

Approximately forty companies and other exhibitors will be on hand during the week with exhibits and materials.

Summer school students will have the opportunity to observe the newest products in textbooks and audio-visual aids. Representatives will be present to demonstrate the various audio-visual aids and explain and describe new textbooks.

Secondary English Teachers Confer

A Special Interest conference for English teachers in secondary schools will be held from June 16 to June 27.

Guest lecturer will be Dr. Mark Neville, headmaster of the Chicago Latin School.

Dr. Galen Saylor and Mary Mienlitz will co-direct the group. The conference will consist of panel discussions, demonstrations, and lectures dealing with the teaching of English in high schools and colleges.

Y-teen Councilors Needed For Camp

Are you interested in being a councilor for YMCA and YWCA young people?

If so, you will have a golden opportunity this summer.

Ruth Shrinin, executive director of the University YWCA, has announced that councilors are needed for the annual state-wide Y-teen Summer Conference July 27 to August 3.

The conference will be held at Camp Merrill at Fullerton, with the theme, "Problems and You in '52."

People who are now Y-teen advisers or people who would like to become Y-teen advisers are especially desired, she announced.

Some activities with which you might be connected at the conference, or jobs which you might hold are:

Folk dances, teaching games, photography, sports, "huddle groups," assistant officers conference bookshop, program council, painting, crafts, hiking, and conference publicity.

Anyone interested in counselling should contact Dorothy Pyle at the Nebraska District YWCA office at 1432 N, or phone 2-5682.
