CHANCELLOR SAYS

No Religious Controversy

Chancellor Gustavson told The Daily Nebraskan Thursday that "the whole matter of the so-called religious controversy was cleared up."

The Journal said Wednesday that the immediate controversy centered around a bulletin published by the "Institute of Religion" announcing its classes and schedules.

Bruce Nicoll, Administrative Assistant to the Chancellor, asserted Wednesday after the conference between the student pastors and the Chancellor that no controversy existed between them and that the meeting was called to clear the misunderstanding arising from the bulletin.

The issue arose from complaints the Chancellor received from persons who believed the Institute's courses were a part of the University curriculum. The Institute, Nicoll said, is completely separated from the University curriculum.

At the conference, the Chancellor made these three points:

1. The University endorses and commends the instructors and student pastors in the Institute.
2. The administration "encourages" any faculty member or student who wants to enroll.
3. The Chancellor and pastors agreed that the bulletin left the implication that it was part of the University curriculum.

Rev. Rex Knowles, pastor at the Presbyterian-Congregational Student House, said that the Chancellor just wanted to be sure the University was abiding by the constitution of Nebraska. He said that there was no controversy.

Sam Gibson, director of the University YMCA, said that the so-called "controversy" is "non-existent" as far as the Institute is concerned.

DEMOCRATS

Long Directs Attention To Sen. Butler

Stanley Long, Democratic candidate for senator for the long term, speaking at a Tuesday meeting for Lancaster County Democratic Committee, presented his political views in comparison with those of his opponent, Republican Sen. Hugh Butler.

Long emphasized the fact that although Butler has been a senator for 12 years, his absentee record shows that actually he has only been our senator 25 per cent of the time.

Charles Ledwith, Lincoln attorney and a county manager, spoke in behalf of William Ritchie, candidate for the Senate short term.

A question period followed the speeches.

Plans were discussed concerning a registration drive, according to Mrs. Diez, president of Young Democrats. She also said that the plans included the help of University students for non-partisan work.

Austrian Returns To NU After Year In Vienna To Begin Work On Doctorate

By PAT PECK
Feature Editor

Transfer students from Iowa, Colorado or even California are not uncommon at the University. But Heinz R. Schreiner is a student from the University of Vienna, Austria.

Schreiner, who is working for his doctorate in biochemistry, first came to the University in 1950 on a scholarship of the U. S. Army. The scholarship was given on the basis of good citizenship, intelligence, command of English and grades and knowledge of the applicant in his field.

Applicants appeared before a board composed of the American Consul in Austria, a representative of the U. S. Army, two Austrian professors and the Chairman of the Austro-American Institute of Education in Vienna.

The Russians occupied the eastern third of Austria in 1945 under the Potsdam agreement. Austria is occupied by the four major powers, France, Great Britain, Russia and the United States. Vienna, in the Russian zone, is also occupied by the four powers.

Schreiner finished high school in 1948 and entered the University of Vienna to major in physics and mathematics. His scholarship permitted him to study in the United States for one year and he received his Bachelor of Science degree at the University in 1951.

The summer of 1951 he spent as a counselor at a boys camp in New York. He traveled in 22 states. When his year was up, however, he returned to Austria under the terms of his scholarship agreement. Schreiner did not want to return to Austria, where he had been an officer of an anti-Communist group.

He studied again at the University of Vienna in 1951-52. During this period he kept in touch with G. W. Rosenlof, foreign student adviser and Dr. Walter Millizer, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, with whom he had worked for his undergraduate degree. With the consent of Chancellor R. G. Gustavson they wrote that the University wished him to

Schreiner worked from February to work on his doctorate during July of this year getting his sophomore year by the time of application, and (4) receive official endorsement of his college or university.

The University committee which will screen the applications is composed of Profs. David Dow, C. E. McNeill, H. W. Manter and Lane Lancaster.

Each has a basic value of about $2,000. In addition, scholars who qualify under the G. I. bill, or other military educational funds, may use their benefits at Oxford on the same basis as at an American university.
