The Chancellor discussed such topics of universal student concern as a new dormitory project which will accommodate 900 more men students, the need for lowering University tuition, the athletic program, and the developments of colleges within the University. # Board Abandons College Days Plans Indefinitely

No Big Interest In Annual Show

College Days will not be held this year. This decision was handed down by the College Days Board in a meeting held Thursday. Joan Krueger, board chairman, gave the reasons why the program has been discontinued indefinitely. Miss Krueger said that there would have to be more of an active interest in any program of this type for it to be a real success. "The administration and organization of a program of the size and scope of College Days is difficult," she said, "and the problem of creating the necessary interest creates overwhelming odds against success."

nine colleges and the various schools and departments. For absolute fairness the co-operation of every student and faculty member would be necessary. Miss Krueger pointed out that, "There exists on campus such a great number of activities—both educational and extra-curricular—that a problem arises as to how these can be coordinated and whether it would be advisable even if feasible." One of the most important facts that the Board had to consider at its meeting was the fact that what schools did have programs of this type that were very successful. The consensus was that other Big Seven schools were operating under an entirely different atmosphere. Lincoln is a city first, she said, and a college town second. Many of the other schools are functioning in an area where the school is one of the foremost factors considered. Miss Krueger added, "This is not to say that the University is not considered important in Lincoln, she said, but it does not have the importance of a college operating in a smaller town."

Ag Formal Scheduled For Tonight

An annual Ag Campus activity, the Farmers Formal, will be the big thing on Friday night's schedule. The highlight of the evening will be the presentation of the 1952 Farmers Formal Queen. The Queen was chosen from 43 Ag College seniors in an Ag campus election last Wednesday. Presented with the Queen will be four attendants, also chosen by election.

Another factor mentioned in the discussion was that the University can not make arrangements for all the state's high schools to be dismissed at one time. This would cause a loss in the number of prospective students that would see a cross section of University life. The Board emphasized the fact that College Days had not been discontinued for any one reason, but for a combination of reasons. The difficulty did not center around any "particular factor or single group," Miss Krueger said in her report.

Johnny Cox and his orchestra will provide the dance music for jeans-and-cottons attired couples. The dance will be held in the Ag campus Activities Building from 9 to 12 p.m. Friday. Tickets may be obtained from any Exec Board member and are $1.20 per couple.

Julie Johnson, board vice-president, said she hoped that a College Days program could be presented some time in the future. "The basic principles are good," she added.

Committees for the formal include Ramona Laun and Bill Waldo, co-chairmen; decorations, Shirley Marsh, Laura Ann Harden, Dale Reynolds, John Van Houten and Dick Monson; ticket sales, Tom Leisy; presentation of the queen and her attendants, Ray Vlasin, Dale Olson, Leland George and Carolyn Gierhan. Miss Laun is in charge of publicity and heading the committee for chaperones and special guests is Lois Kieckhafer. Wayne Moody is head of the clean-up committee. Assisting him will be Wayne White, Art Kuhl and Don Pluknett.

Last year the College Days Board spent an entire year planning a program that was to be presented. The only actual program was in April, 1950. The same problem has confronted every chairman heading the Board, with the same results every year. The administrative problems are always just too much to cope with. For this reason the College Days program has never achieved a solid position as an annual University function.

Left Overs

By LILA WANER
A Bostonian was showing an Englishman the sights of his native city and finally took him out to Bunker Hill Monument. "This is where Warren fell, you know," he explained. The Englishman looked pensively up the tall shaft. "Nasty drop! Killed him of course."
The librarians at Love Library were rather taken aback when a freshman came in the other day asking for a novel by that famous French author, Risque.
Tomorrow the weather will be fair and just a little warmer than today. You may be able to disregard yesterday's report to get your winter coats out.
First Englishman: Cuthbert, did you hear that joke about the Egyptian guide who showed some tourists two skulls of Cleopatra—one as a girl and one as a woman?
Second Englishman: No, let's hear it.
Sue: My boy friend has a girl in every house on campus. How can I get him to stop chasing other women?
Grace: Have you tried cutting his legs off?
Girl: Whisper something soft and sweet to me.
Boy: Chocolate pudding.

"The girls," she said, "will have a chance to look over and ask questions about activities offered at the University. At this time the girls may sign up for the activities with which they would like to work."

NUCWA Discusses Foreign Policy At Mass Meet

Two members of both the Democratic and Republican parties locked horns Thursday evening before a Nebraska University Council on World Affairs mass meeting in the Union. Doris Carlson, who with Dr. Maurice Latta, assistant professor of economics represented the Republican side of a four-man panel, said that the United States was at its greatest strength in 1945 and that through Democratic "bungling" 40 per cent of the world's population is under domination of the Kremlin. Because of more "bungling" at Yalta and other conferences, she said, the United States has "sold China down the river, lost the strategic Far East, lost the peace and is now engaged in war."

Ken Rystrom, speaking with Bruce eKndall, speech instructor, said that the administration brought gains in world affairs through its decisions to use the Marshall Plan, join NATO, unify European nations, develop Point Four, ECA and German armies. These are "things which the Republicans claim were done through bipartisanism," Rystrom said. Rystrom added that, "We have shown the Russians that we will meet armed aggression anywhere with armed resistance."

Dr. Latta said that he did not believe that Eisenhower would make many changes in the present foreign policy, but rather he would change the execution of it. He said that Eisenhower would eliminate present "bungling" of execution of the policy that is now in practice. Dr. Latta said that we gained time in Korea, but that it cost us 120,000 casualties. "The time has come," he said, "when we can pass from the defensive to the offensive."

"The administration made a blunder as to the intentions of the Soviet Union, and had not yet admitted it." A new administration, Dr. Latta said, could better analyze the Communist menace and cope with it. He said that the record shows that conservative leaders have been able to accomplish more with the left-wingers and the Socialists. He said that the Communists know where they stand with the conservatives while they do not with the left-wingers. Kendall said that while it may be true that Eisenhower will not make any major changes in foreign policy, his conservative congress will. The views of the conservative senators, he said, such as McCarthy, Kenn, Jenner, and Taft, were anything but bipartisan. He pointed out that these senators would be in positions of value in the next Congress. Kendall charged that Eisenhower has not yet revealed his foreign policy to the American people. He said that we have a man who has been a primary cog in foreign policy, and yet he will not talk about this subject. The only inkling of Eisenhower's views on this subject, he said, were in the Philadelphia address in which the first point was that "there was a need for a change," and that the last seven points were the policies of the Democratic administration.

He also pointed out that the Republicans are crying for us to help the Communist countries to revolt, and yet they "almost to a man voted against the 'Voice of America.'" He said he did not think that now, when we are striving for peace, was a time for a military president and that he agreed with Stevenson when he said, that "This cold war should be an endurance test rather than a hundred yard dash."

HARTINGTON—Charles Brannan circulated a "false and fraudulent rumor" in the fall of 1948 that broke grain prices and helped elect President Truman. This charge against the Secretary of Agriculture was leveled by Sen. Hugh Butler. A member of the state Republican campaign caravan, the Senator said the rumor broke the price of grain although it was later proved that storage facilities were never filled beyond 60 per cent capacity. "Since 1948," Butler said, "Brannan has been trying to peddle his farming plan around the country in an effort to keep the farmer of the nation under the thumb of the agriculture department."

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.—"A more equitable sharing of the burden" in Korea is necessary, Secretary-General Trygve Lie told the 60 members of the United Nations. He said it is their duty to carry on the fight until an armistice is reached, that resistance to aggression in Korea had increased the security of all nations which desire to live in peace, and that an end of the war along present battle lines would be a victory for the U.N. The Korean conflict, he said, "has been undertaken and fought by the United Nations only to throw back the aggressors, to bring the aggression to an end, and to restore peace and security."

SAN FRANCISCO—Dwight Eisenhower once again blamed the Korean War on the political decision of the Truman administration. He said a 1951 statement by the State Department, leaving Korea outside the announced defense perimeter in the Pacific, had encouraged if not invited "the ordeal in Korea."

POLITICS . . . The everpresent topic among students was the topic of a NUCWA sponsored panel at a mass meeting Thursday night. Foreign policy of the two major parties was discussed. The Republican side was taken by (l. to r.) Maurice Latta, assistant professor of economics, and Doris Carlson, past president of NUCWA. Representing the Democratic party were Bruce Kennedy of the speech department and Ken Rystrom, Daily Nebraskan managing editor. (Daily Nebraskan Photo by Glenn Place.)
