Professor Skapski received his degree in physics in 1927 at the University of Krakow in Poland. In 1933 he won a Rockefeller Foundation award and was sent to Sweden to study the application of physics to metallurgy for one year.

Cosmopolitan Club To Hear Skapski Speak

When Hitler invaded Poland, the University of Krakow where he was then teaching was moved east. There he served as armaments advisor to Poland. The Russians arrested him and tried to make him use his scientific knowledge for the Communists' benefit. The professor refused and in 1942 he was released.

He joined the Polish Government in London as head of education until 1945 when he was invited to join the Metalographic Institute in Stockholm. However, that was too close to Russia so he rejected the offer. Meanwhile he accepted an invitation to join the University of Chicago, where he met R. G. Gustafson. When Gustafson became Chancellor of the University of Nebraska in 1947 he asked Professor Skapski to come to Nebraska.
