

ANOTHER NEBRASKAN

Matzke Cites Root-Tilden Scholarship Advantages

Gerald Matzke, University graduate attending New York University School of Law on a Root-Tilden scholarship, wrote a letter to a University student saying that he would like to see another Nebraskan win this scholarship.

The deal this year. Selection is based on (1) scholarship (which is supposed to be of the Phi Beta Kappa level); (2) extra-curricular activities; and potential capacity for public leadership (interest in political affairs). It's quite a deal; we get our tuition ($700) and $1,500 ($167 a month).

Continuance Of Entrance Rule Urged

NU Officials Want High Requirements

University academic requirements, a topic scornfully viewed by many students, were termed, "A necessity to better education" by four faculty members Tuesday.

In the wake of Friday's meeting of the Nebraska Association of School Administrators, this topic has been receiving widespread attention on the part of the entire faculty of the University.

At the meeting last year, high school educators favored a proposal abolishing specific requirements for college students, while University officials upheld the present methods of subject requirements.

Faculty members were asked if these specific requirements were really necessary. They replied: "Yes, without question. Subjects that lend themselves to thinking should be constantly exposed to students in order to train their minds more effectively. It would be a step backward if college students were allowed to take only the subjects they wanted. Education would suffer."

J. M. Schroeter, instructor of English — "Definitely. Many students haven't had adequate educational development for college work, and in order to prevent a waste of their time, money and effort, their education should be broadened to include specific subjects that will help them the most."

H. S. Saenz, associate professor of romance languages — "Absolutely. The requirements should be strengthened, if anything. They have a basic, cultural value to the student because they aid in acquiring a better all-around education, the real purpose of a university. I cannot see how students could disagree with this idea. If they do, they do not belong here."

C. H. Patterson, professor of philosophy — "I feel strongly that specific subjects should be required. Higher education is being hurt by the omission of these requirements, and is losing its content. Educated people should have something in common, something to enable them to talk intelligently about the problems of the world."

Applications For Navy Scholarships Due Nov. 20

All college men who are interested in four more years of schooling and high school seniors must apply before Thursday if they wish to compete for the 2,000 United States Navy college scholarships offered next year.

In correction of Tuesday's report, all applications must reach the Naval Examining Center by midnight Saturday.

Winners of scholarships, worth approximately $6,000 each, will become regular students under the Navy ROTC program. Interested students may obtain information from the department of naval science, Navy recruiting stations or high school principals.

Isaacson Receives Plaque

Neb. County Agents Honor J. J. Isaacson At Banquet

The Nebraska County Agents Association honored Mr. J. J. Isaacson, manager of Omaha's Knights of Ak-Sar-Ben, at their annual banquet Monday night.

The banquet was held in connection with an extension conference sponsored by Ag College.

Isaacson, a former newspaperman, received the award annually presented to the man who contributes the most toward agricultural education within the state.

The Omahan was given credit for bringing the Ak-Sar-Ben organization into the black and expanding its program. Isaacson has developed the largest 4-H show in the nation in one of the most modern facilities, Ak-Sar-Ben Field.

At the instigation of Isaacson, the organization furnishes 102 scholarships to college students, aids county agents in preparing for advanced work, and assists vocational agriculture teachers in Nebraska and Iowa.

Other projects sponsored by Ak-Sar-Ben include good neighbor awards, 4-H leader training and an extension road show in co-operation with the University's extension service.

Coed Counselors To See Fur Show

More than 30 styles and kinds of furs will be exhibited in a style show for Coed Counselors and their little sisters at the Cadwallader Fur Co., 129 S. 12th St., at 7 p.m. Wednesday.

Admittance will be by tickets, which may be obtained from Coed Counselors. Winnie Stolz and Darlene Gooding are in charge of the show.

The six counselors who will model furs are Mary Ida Barnes, Nancee Peterson, Ruth Randolph, Kathy Shank, Ellen Svoboda and Marilyn Tyson.

Lee Davis, sales manager for Cadwallader, will discuss the purchasing of furs and will recommend furs best for college women.

Filing, Nominating Open For YWCA

Filings and nomination blanks are now available for 1953 YWCA offices. Filings will begin Wednesday.

The nominating committee will ask each applicant to fill out a questionnaire concerning her activities in the Y. In addition, interested students may nominate another girl.

Blanks are available at the Y office. Filings will close Tuesday, Dec. 2. Candidates for office must have at least a 5.5 weighted average and be active in YWCA.

Positions are president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer and district representative.

The University of Santa Tomas at Manila, P. I., is the oldest university under the United States flag. It celebrated the 215th anniversary of its founding recently.

Temple Change Includes New Lab Entrance

The Temple Building is being modernized.

Little work will be carried on outside of the building except for construction of a new entrance from 12th Street to the speech laboratory. This entrance will be south of the present one.

Plans for the inside of Temple include an office for the director of speech lab, a booth for ticket sales and a display area. There will be new classrooms for designing play costumes and scenery. These rooms will be used in connection with play productions. The stage in the auditorium will be enlarged and modernized.

Charles Fowler of the Department of Buildings and Grounds hopes to announce completion of work by next fall.

Six Skits, Presentations To Highlight KK Revue

Making up the program for the 1952 Kosmet Klub Revue will be six skits and the presentation of the Nebraska Sweetheart and Prince Kosmet. The show will be Thursday at 8 p.m. in the Coliseum.

Winners of the titles will again be selected by the method of ticket stub balloting.

Ruth Raymond, Barbara Adams, Beth Rohwer, Barbara Bell, Marilyn Brewster and Phyllis Colbert are the finalists for Nebraska Sweetheart.

Vying for the title of Prince Kosmet are Jack Greer Pat Mallett, Ed Berg, Joel Mead, Bernard Goodman and Joe Good.

Under the direction of John Ellwell, Beta Theta Pi, Delta Tau Delta, Sigma Chi, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Phi Delta Theta and Zeta Beta Tau fraternities will participate in the Revue.

Master of Ceremonies is Hank Gibson.

The Betas will present "Big Manhattan Bargain," based on the Indians selling Manhattan Island to the white man for $24.

The Deltas will give the story of the four to one ratio of men to women on the campus, "Guys and No Dolls."

Dealing with the kidnapping by the black rifs of the Queen of the white rifs and the struggle to recapture her is "Shiek of Araby," the Sigma Chi skit.

A hillbilly goes to college and finds the value of his training somewhat doubtful after he has finished, in "You Can't Eat a College Education" which Sigma Phi Epsilon will present.

"The Comedy Hour," Phi Delta Theta's skit, is a take-off on TV comedy programs.

Monday, which was called to decide on the method of election. It was decided that for the present election balloting would be done by tickets.

Another point of importance on the Council agenda is a proposal to convert the mall into a parking lot. This proposal was made three weeks ago by Rocky Yapp, chairman of the Council parking committee. The proposal called for a concrete parking area on the mall between the Coliseum and the Carillon Tower. This mall is now used by the ROTC Department, by the College of Engineering and by intramural teams for football practice. The Council referred the suggestion to a special committee for investigation of problems and possibilities of such a project.

One other point of Council business will be discussion on the newly proposed Junior - Senior Class Council constitution. There will be no action taken at this meeting on the proposed constitution.

Once Over Lightly Dorm Bright Lights Give Rise To Melodrama On Front Steps

A little melodrama embodying the better parts of a Hollywood grade "B" movie occurs almost every night in front of the women's dorm.

The time is usually when the young ladies are required to be in the dorm; the heroine is the young lady who lives in the dorm. The villain is her date. The plot evolves about the stowaway principals of kissing each other "good-night."

Our story begins as the heroine is going to the door with her date (the villain). In this maneuver, she is not unlike a good fullback. She must get past her date to get to the door. At this point the plot thickens. Above the door is placed an exceptionally bright light—not unlike the lighting used on Love Library. The young lady's problems were anticipated; her date is confronted with this light and is embarrassed. The idea with the light is that he is so embarrassed that he will not kiss her good-night.

lights are objectionable. One of these days, someone is going to wise up, buy a B.B. gun, and . . . But there are some who can cope with the situation. They just don't stand under the lights. For these people, large bushes are placed around the entrance. . . . This light serves a more practical purpose than to discourage "good nights." From a distance, this lighting is a beautiful thing to see—and can be seen for a considerable distance. It is there to brighten up the night—and how many fellows cannot help but enjoy its brightness when they kiss their girls under this light?

More than one such fellow, fully appreciative of the value of the intense lighting, has looked up at the lights spellbound and said enthralled: "How come the bright lights?"

NU Student Sees Account 'Paid In Full' After Visit To Red Cross Bloodmobile

Donor Says 'Rosy Glow Marks Claim'

By PHYLLIS BECKER Staff Writer

"Lie down," the nurse said. I sank on the springy green couch. This was the climax of my big, brave idea to give blood at the Red Cross Bloodmobile. "Is this your first time?" she asked.

"Yes," I squeaked nervously. "Just relax," said Junior Nightingale, swabbing my arm. "Now make a hard fist." She jabbed the inside of my elbow. As I sagged down on the couch, I glanced down the row of beds. Everybody else was lying down, too. What a comfort to find that I wasn't the only one doing my duty.

New Plan May Curb Drinking Among Minors

Mayor Anderson, the City Council and Public Safety Director Ray Osborn are discussing a plan of information cards designed to prevent minors from purchasing liquor.

Minors questioned about age in taverns, would, under the proposed plan be required to furnish information as to date and place of birth and other details and sign the card.

"I think the minor will study a long time before filling in and signing such evidence," said Osborn, "particularly in view of the fact that all cards will be carefully checked."

There are three ways listed in which minors can procure forbidden drink, or have done so.

1. Through the carelessness of an operator.

2. Through misrepresentation of age.

3. Through the agency of an outside party.

Phony military cards, faked draft papers and doctored birth certificates have presented difficulties, Osborn said. He believes that the proposed information card will accomplish much in the way of enforcement.

There will be no excuse for a person responsible for buying liquor or beer for a minor, according to Osborn. The Council is by ordinance currently doubling the maximum penalty, from $50 to $100, for sale to a minor, purchase by a minor through misrepresentation of age and purchase by another party for a minor.

The present ordinances, as to minors, provides, in part, the following: "No person shall sell or give any alcohol to, procure same for or permit sale or gift of such liquor to a minor. No minor shall represent he is of age for the purpose of purchasing or receiving liquor."

like a hospital?

The nurse smiled down at me and said, "You're doing fine, but you'll do fine faster if you make a hard fist about every five seconds." Who's got enough strength to double up a fist?

Then it was over and another nurse was escorting me to the refreshment stand. "Sit here at this table for four. Drink this water." I sat and I drank.

"Would you like milk or coffee?"

"Milk, thank you," I said, remembering that I had to start a blood building program. I reinforced the program with a sandwich, also courtesy of the management. Regretted passing up the chocolate cake, but I was in a practical mood.

"Did you get your pin?" a nurse asked—just as if I would leave without proof of my donorship.

I was convinced that any rosy glow I might have had inside must have run out into the bottle and left for the Far East. I don't know much about blood donation, but I strongly suspect that they pump the rosy glow in while they drain the blood out, because I could feel it. And don't say that "rosy glow" is an abstract term, because it marked the claim for one pint of blood—"paid in full."

Liberty. While waiting for the Subway they met the assistant district attorney of New York City, who showed them Wall Street, the grave of Alexander Hamilton, the inaugural place of George Washington, the grave of Robert Fulton and Trinity Episcopal Church. They were surprised to find that it cost only a nickel to ride the ferry to Staten Island, Miss O'Dell reported. In addition to the Statue of Liberty they saw the liner Queen Elizabeth.

Thursday evening activities included shopping on Fifth Avenue and dinner at a French restaurant. The restaurant, Miss O'Dell recalled, was long on atmosphere and totally without English-speaking waiters.

Part of the group ate dinner at Schraff's on Friday night and later went to Lindy's, supposedly frequented by wheels in general and Walter Winchell in particular. Winchell was not present, but some of the students who returned the next night saw him and got his autograph.

Saturday afternoon was devoted to a sight-seeing tour which included the Bowery, Greenwich Village and Chinatown, Miss O'Dell and some other members of the group toured Chinatown, having tea at a Chinese restaurant and walking through the stores. She reported an unfavorable impression of the odors of fish and seafood drying in the shops.

Janice Osborn, director of the University YWCA, who served as chaperone to the group and Miss O'Dell dined Saturday night at Longhams, an elite French restaurant. Another group, however, went to the Rosevelt Hotel where Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians were featured. Seven of them who were present suffered something akin to shock to find that the check was $60.

Radio City and Rockefeller Center were also included on the agenda of activities.

Approximately 140 students from 22 schools over the nation attended the seminar and more than one third of this group were students from Nebraska. "I think the group did a very good job of doing important things," the chaperone, Miss Osborn, said. And the opinion among the students questioned seems to indicate that they would not mind a repeat performance.
