First freshman in math exam: "How far are you from the correct answer?"

Dean: "Where are your parents?" Coed: "I have none."

Dean: "Where are your guardians?" Coed: "I have none."

Dean: "Where are your supporters?" Coed: "Sir! You are forgetting yourself."

"Our economics prof talks to himself. Does yours?" "Yes, but he doesn't realize it—he thinks we're listening."

"I shall now illustrate what I have in mind," said the professor as he erased the board.

English Prof: "Mr. Brown, correct this sentence: 'Girls is naturally better looking than boys.'" Brown: "Girls is artificially better looking than boys."

Ir: "I see by the paper that nine professors and one student were killed in a wreck." Leo: "Poor chap."

Dr. Curt Stern Lectures On Effects Of Irradiation

Dr. Curt Stern, University of California geneticist, a visiting lecturer on the University campus, said that the probability of abnormal offspring is increased only slightly as a result of irradiation.

Dr. Stern made the statement in a lecture given on Tuesday, Feb. 2 as part of a series of four lectures he is to present at the University.

"Genetic Effects of Irradiation in Man" was presented at a meeting of the Nebraska Research Council Genetic Institute and the local Sigma Xi chapter.

Dr. Stern said that, "The present rate of one-half to one per cent abnormal offspring in the present birth rate would increase only one-tenth of one per cent as a result of widespread exposure of population to irradiation in any generation."

"Counseling in Human Genetics" will be the subject of another lecture by Dr. Stern. This type of counseling, "will grow in size and scope" and serve to a very useful tool for pre-marriage advice, he added.

Dr. Stern said there are, "four or five such counseling centers" in the U. S. today and perhaps a half dozen consultants.

The University has been using a book written by Dr. Stern, entitled, "Principles of Human Genetics." This text has also been translated into the Japanese language.

Dr. Stern, who is a native of Germany was a visiting lecturer in the United States in 1924-26 and returned in 1932 as a member of the Rockefeller Foundation.

"I intended returning to Germany, but I never did," he said in referring to the advent of Hitler at the time.

Dr. Stern has been an advisor to the Atomic Energy Commission since 1947 and a former editor of "Genetics," a professional publication.

Pollsters OK Former Reds On Faculties

College students favor allowing former members of the Communist party to teach on college faculties.

This fact was determined in a recent ACP poll of student opinion conducted on a national basis. The results of this poll were: yes, 45 per cent; no, 39 per cent; no opinion, nine per cent," says a senior in education at the University of Idaho.

One of the questions: "Do you think avowed Communist Party members should be allowed on college faculties?" brought overwhelming no's from the students. The results were yes, nine per cent; no, 85 per cent; no opinion, four per cent; and others, two per cent.

The few students who said yes usually qualified their answers "Communist teachers should be advertised as such," said a junior at the University of Nebraska. A sophomore in Law at Phoenix college, Arizona, claimed they should be "shot down like dogs."

Many students think former Communists would be good teachers because, as one student put it, "they would know both sides."

An ACP survey last winter indicated that the majority of students were against loyalty oaths for college professors. In the present survey, 60 per cent of the graduate students were in favor of college teaching jobs for former Communists.

Hup, two, three, four. The practicing units of the Navy, Air, and Army ROTC are familiar sights on the University campus. But what about the Marines?

All training is taken during the summer and a student receives his Marine commission as 2nd lieutenant upon college graduation.

Major J. R. Stockman, in charge of the University Marine recruitment program and also associated with the NROTC unit, is the man to contact for further information about the opportunities offered by a career in the Marines.

Women, as well as men, can take advantage of the Marine officer candidate plan. Students who are undergraduates will attend
