In a discussion of several students concerning the Junior-Senior Class Board efforts to get underwriters for the Junior-Senior Prom, it was pointed out that in previous years underwriters were stuck for the financial responsibility of the affair with last year's individual bill running upwards of 10 dollars.

One junior, who apparently hadn't realized that his signature involved financial responsibility exclaimed, "Oh my Gosh!" "And I signed the thing 10 times."

WARING CONCERT

Pennsylvanians Started As 4 'Banjazztrists'

By NATALIE KATY Staff Writer

Thirty years ago four "banjazztrists" began playing for jazz parties, mixing their banjo rhythms along with their guitar hymns. These "banjazztrists," increased in number, have come to be internationally known as the Pennsylvanians.

Fred Waring, and the Pennsylvanians, will appear at the Coliseum, Mar. 3. The concert is sponsored by the Union.

The Pennsylvanians have increased from four to 64, but the songs they sing and play retain essentially the same fervor and techniques of rhythm as when the group originated.

Encouraged by Paul Whiteman, the four original members traveled around New York playing at prominent nightspots. The group expanded and became known as the College Syncopationist playing primarily on college and university campuses.

In 1923 Waring and his group were booked in one of Europe's most distinguished supper clubs, Der Ambassadeurs, in Paris. This booking encouraged the group to work even harder, and also showed Americans the popular appeal of the Waring type of music.

The public, after hearing and seeing the Fred Waring show, demanded recordings of some of the more popular renditions. The Pennsylvanians have recorded such concerts as "Twas the Night Before Christmas," "God Bless America," "The Holy City," and "Songs of Faith."

Members of the singing group come from all parts of the U.S. and from varied backgrounds. Many former Pennsylvanians have achieved success with the help of the choral singing background.

Tickets for the Fred Waring concert are on sale at the box office in the City and Ag Union. Main floor seating will be sold for $2, $2 and $1 with balcony seats selling for $2, $2.50, $2 and $1.50.
