By NAT KATT Staff Writer

Beauty, harmony, holdness—these characteristics embodied with sincerity combine to produce the "true artifice," Karl Shapiro, Pulitzer prize winner, said in an address Wednesday evening.

"The difficulty of finding a way to combine the characteristics of beauty, harmony and symmetry into a good piece of art is a 'pain-staking task for the poet,' the editor of Poetry Magazine explained.

The characteristics of good poetry must all have the mark of sincerity, according to Shapiro. Sincerity faces a dual responsibility. "One responsibility," he said, "is to the author of the work; the other to the work itself."

"Sincerity," the poet added, "is an expression of other deeper sincerity. In sincere poetry occurs a moment when the author ignores the laws of symmetry and rhythm."

Poetic artifice demands that the piece of work, if sincere, be comprehended by the reader. The author should be under no obligations to explain his work, Shapiro explained.

Shapiro emphasized that true poetry doesn't need to be explained, and that the attempt of critics to explain poems is merely an "example of desperation."

The highest compliment, the writer said, is for a poet to be told he has an "ear." An "ear" is the feeling of harmony and musical sense. "Until ear has said it," he explained, "the poet himself doesn't know what to say."

Hunter Talks To YW, YM

"We are at a football game and there is a conspiracy to distract our attention from the ball to the balloons in the sky."

This illustration was used by Rev. Alan Hunter at a meeting of YWCA, YMCA cabinets and leaders of religious houses when pointing out that distraction leads us away from thinking about our first obligation—God.

The ball is God, Rev. Hunter said, and too often balloons (distractions) cause us to put our secondary obligations before God.

Distraction is the greatest enemy to vitality, continued the Los Angeles minister, and by training the mind, people may learn to overlook these distractions through meditation.

Students must weigh their values and find out what their real desire is, Rev. Hunter said. People often succumb to their ego's desire he added.

Rev. Hunter, pastor of the Mount Hollywood Congregational Church in Los Angeles, California, is the main speaker of Search Week.

Ag Instructor Heads Panel

A panel, moderated by Evan Hartman, extension conservationist at the College of Agriculture, discussed "The Use of Your Irrigation Water" at a meeting in Holdrege Tuesday.

Farmers attending the irrigation clinic heard that there was more to irrigating than just letting water run on the land.

The panel members told the farmers attending that conservation irrigation can mean savings in water, higher crop yields, lower production costs and assurance of continued productivity from the irrigated land.

Better methods of handling water were discussed and it was pointed out that the successful irrigator is one who has complete control over his irrigation water at all times.

Student Mock UN Delegates Have Busy Day In First Assembly Meet

Dr. Fatemi's Speech Scheduled For General Assembly Meeting

Dr. Nasrollah Saipour Fatemi, main speaker at the model United Nations General Assembly, will speak on "Facing the Issues in Iran and the Middle East," Thursday evening from 8 to 9 p.m. in the Union Ballroom.

Dr. Fatemi, Iranian representative to the Security Council and UNESCO Conference in Cleveland, Ohio, will discuss the Iranian oil dispute, the Palestine question, aid to underdeveloped areas in the Middle East, and the Colonial problem.

The Iranian oil dispute arose when Iran Premier Mossaddegh nationalized the Abadan oil refinery. The dispute is between Britain and Iran over a settlement on the British owned and operated refinery. This unsettled dispute has closed off Iran as a supplier of oil to the free world. Consequently, Europe has had to turn to the United States' depleted oil supply for fuel. Dr. Fatemi's brother, Deputy Prime Minister of Iran is involved in the present controversy.

Another issue which Fatemi will discuss is the Palestine question which originated with the formulation of the new state of Israel. Palestine has long been claimed by both the Arabs and the Jews.

The Colonial problem in the Middle East arises from the intense nationalism in some of the African and Asiatic colonies controlled by European countries. The fourth topic will be a discussion of the question of giving aid to the underdeveloped areas in the Middle East.

Those interested should meet at the southwest corner of the Coliseum.

Emergency

An emergency session of the Mock General Assembly has been scheduled for 2 p.m. Thursday in Room 313 Union.

The meeting was scheduled to consider a change in rule 25 stating, "committees shall not introduce items of their own initiative."

The change is necessary if any decision is to be reached on the North African protectorate question.

Motions to turn the protectorates over the complete control of the United Nations were postponed or withdrawn in the Assembly Wednesday.

Court Settles Dispute

A model International Court of Justice staged a hearing of the case between Great Britain and Iran on the Anglo-Iranian oil dispute Wednesday.

The court ruled in opposition to the real court decision saying that it did have jurisdiction in the oil dispute and that judgment should be rendered.

French State That African Protectorates Not Under General Assembly Jurisdiction

By DICK COFFEY Feature Editor

The North African question is outside the jurisdiction of the United Nations.

This position was taken by French delegates speaking at the Mock UN General Assembly session Wednesday afternoon.

The question of turning over the North African protectorates to the direct administration of the UN was brought up twice during Wednesday's session by India and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics but was postponed indefinitely.

The students representing France, Doris Carlson, Sharon Mangold, and Kay Nosky, refused to discuss the question in the UN.

In an interview after the session, Sharon Mangold, French delegate, said "France is indeed shocked to think that there are nations represented in this Assembly that are so imperialistic as to desire to interfere with the domestic concerns of France."

"The present disputes in Morocco and Tunisia are merely civil results resulting from action of extreme groups. These groups constitute only a minority of the people."

Interference by other nations is justifiable, Miss Mangold continued, only in case of a threat to the peace of the entire world or an act of aggression. Neither of these conditions are present, Miss Mangold said.

"Therefore, France maintains the North African question is outside the realm of jurisdiction of the UN and France will refuse to discuss it."

The peoples of France are desirous of achieving peace throughout the world, Miss Mangold continued, and the French have and will cooperate in any effort to achieve this peace, as long as that effort is fair and just to all parties concerned.

"However, we warn our fellow delegates not to be so eager to obtain peace, that they will be easily influenced by false overtures of peace."

"We cannot give confidence to member nations that proclaim peace and then commit acts of aggression."

The seating of Red China which was made in a resolution by USSR was voted out of order and French delegate, Kay Nosky told France's stand on this resolution.

Miss Nosky said, France strongly opposed the admission of Red China to the UN.

"On Feb. 1, 1951, the General Assembly had condemned the People's Government for committing an act of aggression in Korea. It is indeed fallacious to assume then that the People's Government could qualify for admission into the very organization against which it is engaging aggression."

"Furthermore, proposals concerning Chinese representation have been made on some 100 occasions in various organs of the UN and no change in attitude has resulted."

Introduction of another proposal in this General Assembly, Miss Nosky added, is merely a ruse to impede the business of the General Assembly.

An increasing correlation of thoughts between Soviet Russia and India became apparent in the first session of the Nebraska University Council of World Affairs Model United Nations General Assembly Conference in the Student Union ballroom, Wednesday afternoon.

The strongest bond between USSR and India appeared when both delegations favored resolutions to turn the North African protectorate over to a United Nations administrative agency.

Nita Helmstadter, Secretary-General, opened the conference by urging the delegates to "institute an organization which will ensure permanent peace."

The purposes of the United Nations are, she continued, to maintain international peace and security, to develop friendly relations among nations, to achieve international cooperation in solving problems and to be a center for harmonizing the actions of nations.

Jan Schmidtman, chairman of the credential committee, reported which nations were eligible to vote. The Russian delegation objected to allowing Formosa to vote, but the report was accepted by a vote of 21-7.

Two changes were made in the Rules of Procedure allowing the chair's decision to be over-ruled by a simple majority instead of a two-thirds vote and allowing an appeal to be discussed for two minutes instead of putting it to a vote immediately.

President Will Linkunkel, calling for the resolutions to be considered by the Conference, recognized India first. India presented a proposal to put the French Territories in North Africa under United Nations supervision.

These territories, Tunisia, Morocco, and Algeria, will then have a chance to demonstrate to the French government that they desire independence.

France immediately moved to postpone the issue indefinitely and the United Kingdom expressed the same desire. India objected to this motion, but a roll call vote decided on postponement.

India then presented a resolution to solve the Korean War question on the return of prisoners of war. This resolution was referred to committee for investigation.

The third resolution made by India asked for a thorough investigation of charges of germ warfare in Korea. The speaker for the Indian delegation stressed the importance of clarifying these charges. A motion to refer this to committee carried.

Referring to Kenya as a trouble spot in the world, the delegate from India resolved that it should be placed under a special United Nations Committee. The United Kingdom and France, maintaining that this situation was a domestic affair and not under the jurisdiction of the UN, objected to the resolution.

Pakistan, India and Russia argued that the situation had worldwide significance, but a vote of 20-11 decided that the resolution should not go to committee.

The Union of South Africa resolved that a conference should be held between the leaders of the countries involved in the Korean struggle. This delegation felt that true feelings would appear at such a conference and it would not "bog down."

A delegate from Russia moved that this be referred to committee and the motion carried.

The USSR asked for international recognition of deep admiration for their past great leader, Joseph Stalin. The United States objected to the wording of the resolution and Russia withdrew their resolution.

A resolution by Russia to recognize the government of the People's Republic of China and expel the Formosan government from participation in the United Nations was voted out of order after lengthy debate between Russia and the United Kingdom.

The proposal similar to the Indian resolution concerning the French empire was then presented by Russia. France supported a

Leo: "How come?"

Irv: "I can have a better time with my girl."

Leo: "What's the matter? Aren't you having fun now?"
