

Three Lab Play Tryouts Scheduled For Tuesday

University students may try out Tuesday for three comedy lab plays to be given April 25 and 26. Tryouts for the plays will be held in Room 201, Temple Building, from 2 to 5 p.m.

The plays "Suppressed Desires," "The Warrior's Husband," and "The Pot-Boiler" will be directed and managed by students.

"Suppressed Desires" by Susan Glaspell is a take-off on psychoanalysis. The cast has one male and two female characters. Members of the cast are: Henrietta, a bored New York housewife who has taken up psycho-analysis to counteract her boredom. Her husband, Steve, a wealthy architect, is not in sympathy with his wife's interest in psycho-analysis. Mabel is Henrietta's young sister who lives in the country and comes to the big city to visit.

This play will be directed by Dorothy Elliott and produced by Harriett Harvey.

"The Warrior's Husband" by Julian Thompson deals with a reversal of the sexes in which the female is dominant and the male subordinate. The cast has ten characters. Members are: Hippolyte, an Amazon queen; Pomposia, her sly and clever advisor; Cautica and Heroica, counselors to Hippolyte; Buria, a faithful servant of Hippolyte and captain of the army; Antiope, the beautiful virgin princess; Sapiens, Jomoposia's fragile son who is sure of his powers of charm; Sapiens Major, the father and effeminate character who never says a word; Homer, a Greek warrior and Theocritus, a Greek warrior.

author-director; Mr. Would-be, a young author who wishes to learn about play-writing and a stagehand in the play proper and Mrs. Pencil, the woman in the case; Mr. Ruler, the hero, Mr. Inkwell, the villain; Miss Ivory, the pure, white, and lovely heroine and Mr. Ivory, her father. This play will be directed by Norma Erickson and managed by Norma Carse.

University Television Group To Test TV Films For Classroom

The University Television Committee has begun a project to produce films that are not only good for television use, but also for use in classrooms.

The first experimental film, a reproduction of the "Doors of Knowledge" program which is broadcast over WOVTV by the University of Nebraska, Omaha

University, and Creighton University, who rotate in producing the program, was finished this week. This film will be shown to television-viewers April 6.

Under the supervision of the photographic laboratory and the University Extension division, two more films are in the process of reproduction.

The University also has the Farm Question Box on WOVTV and a health series which is produced by the College of Medicine for WOVTV.

Through this project the Television Committee hopes to keep a record of television for film use, and to see if film television programs are as effective as live performances.

George Round, committee chairman and Director of Public Relations, commented, "The Committee feels that it should explore all avenues of presenting educational television programs to the public on film as well as by live performance."

Other members of the committee are K. O. Broady, director of the University Extension Division; E. W. Janike, associate director of Agricultural Extension Service; Walter Beggs, professor of school administration and history and principles of education; George Clark, director of athletics and Ferris Norris, professor of electrical engineering.

prove and widen facilities of the hospital used in medical training, to add more technicians and improve facilities of medical laboratories, to add more dieticians for the dietary department, and to provide additional instructors for a better teaching program.

Dean Tollman said that the University Medical school is not meeting the needs of a modern medical school, and is in danger of losing its accredited standing as a College of Medicine.

Roy Green, Dean of the Engineering College, pointed out the general needs of other University colleges. He said that appropriation is needed for the Department of Mathematics, salaries for graduation assistants, funds for the University libraries to cover increased cost of books and expansion into other fields and to expand upon the program of preparing teachers to help handicapped children.

Dean Green pointed out the difficulty the University is facing in keeping teachers at relatively low salaries and lack of proper facilities. The Budget Committee will meet again with University representatives before voting on the proposed appropriation.

University Singers Present 'Requiem' To Capacity Crowd

The University Singers presented "A German Requiem" by Johannes Brahms to a capacity audience in the First Plymouth Congregational Church Sunday afternoon.

The Singers presented the oratorio in an ensemble tone of stirring vitality. The "Requiem" was, when Brahms composed it, the apotheosis of a nation's grief, and it is today a summation of grief and belief in ultimate triumph over death. The Singers, a top choral organization in the country, gave a great recreation of Brahms' oratorio.

Harriet Swanson, senior from Highmore, S. D., sang the soprano solo in the fifth section of the work. John Whaley, assistant professor of music education, sang the baritone solos in the third and last sections of the oratorio.

Eight Coeds Travel, Learn As Convention Delegates

"California or bust!"

It wasn't a gold rush, but a rush to the national WAA convention which attracted eight University coeds to Palo Alto, California, last week.

Early Saturday morning, March 21, Phyllis Loudon, Sally Mallory, Georgia Hulac, Marilyn Corneman, Shirley Jesse, Ann Yeakley and Miss Margaret Mulvaney, faculty advisor, piled into a bus with 33 other girls and headed for the land of sunshine and heavy dew. The Nebraska-sponsored bus included WAA delegates from Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa, South Dakota and Kansas.

The bus stopped long enough in its dash to California to allow the girls to take in the sights of Salt Lake City, Utah, where they toured the famous Mormon grounds. Particularly fascinating to many in the group was the Mormon tabernacle where they actually could hear the proverbial pin drop. Another short detour was made to San Francisco, with a boat ride around the bay a special attraction.

Stanford University at Palo Alto was the convention host, but all the bay area school co-operated in planning and organizing the event. All the 300 delegates were housed in one dorm, where each girl had some share in the responsibility. All agreed that the convention was very well-organized, and one girl said, "Stanford is proud of its university, and they wanted to make us proud of it too. They certainly succeeded."

The students and faculty, in separate groups, were conducted on tours of the Stanford campus. Of particular interest was the Hoover Memorial Library, where all materials on peace and war are kept. No one is allowed to view the library without special permission. The faculty tour included a trip through Herbert Hoover's home, where the president of Stanford College now lives.

After the convention closed Thursday noon, the girls clambered back into the bus and made another short jaunt to San Francisco. A three-hour bus tour of the city highlighted the day in the big city. The sight-seeing viewed the Golden Gate Bridge, the Japanese Tea Gardens, the Cliff House, the Seal Rocks, Presidio (the large army base guarding the bay), Fisherman's Wharf, and the civic buildings which are familiar California landmarks.

Although the group crossed half a continent and saw much of California's vacationland, "I thought the convention itself was the best of all," Miss Mulvaney said. "We all came home with a tremendous amount of information to help in developing our own WAA, and it was a wonderful experience," she added.

Sunday afternoon, the eight tired delegates returned to the campus, full of the glories of California and the WAA and vowing to invade Texas in two years when the next WAA national convention is held at the University of Texas.

Forty Feeders View Ag Experiments

Forty members of the Exeter Feeders Association toured experimental cattle feeding operations at the University Friday afternoon.
