

Royal House Guest Max, Responds To Informality

By DICK COFFEY
Feature Editor

The formal address is "Come, Come, Oh Sirrom Gui de Noel." But Max, the royal house guest at Phi Delta Theta fraternity responds quickly to the cry, "Getch in here, stupid."

Not because he is craven and easily persuaded that the titles and prerogative of royalty may be dealt with lightly, but rather because he is understanding and realizes the exigencies of informality does he submit to such informality.

Max, a great white Pyrenees and the royal dog of France, has prevailed his good nature on many occasions to the ultimate benefit of all concerned.

Just because Max is strictly speaking a canine, on several occasions, people have attempted to take advantage of him. On the evening of the military ball for example, a party of pledges from a neighboring fraternity thought to play a prank and succeeded in painting the snow-white Max several shades of green and black, after which he was set free to roam the spacious halls of the Union.

Did bitterness prevail upon Max in his hour of ignominy? No.

True to the standard principles and the long-standing traditions of the true royalty in him, he thought to seek out his tormentors, and turning the other cheek, Max as thought to say, "I forgive you," jumped upon the principle plotter, a rather small person, with his full stature of five feet ten and with the full weight of his 120 pounds.

Overburdened by the superior weight of Max, the ringleader collapsed, while his comrades fled.

Max in attempting to make amends for the faux pas, tried to express his chagrin at the unintentional incident. In doing so, he waved his tail in the truly affectionate fashion of his noble predecessors. But Max was somewhat all feet and tail that night, for the tail he wagged in friendship was splashing green and black paint on the would-be friend.

It is said that in order to cover up his complicity in the deed, the student ringleader was forced to dye his shirt green to conform to the color so freely bestowed by Max, and that his trousers were mostly black now, still have somewhat greenish tinges.

Whenever by circumstance the former pledge finds he must pass in close proximity to the aging Max (who was 11 months old last April 1st), he either crosses the street or turns in a different direction.

One of Max's favorite pastimes is to eat. He consumes about a case of dog food a week and 14 eggs. Recent reports show that he is getting tired of eggs.

Max is very friendly with people on all occasions except when they try to take food away from him; however, he lets other dogs walk away with his bones.

Max will continue to grow until he is about two years old. His father weighed 180 pounds. Several of Max's brothers and sisters have appeared recently on television.

As all great Pyrenees, Max loves cold weather and the more violent the better. He also likes to swim in cold water.

Around the campus he likes to sit in the middle of the streets and go to sorority houses to see the girls.

During the summer months Max will be lodged at one of the Phi Delt's homes.

"SIRROM GUI DE NOEL" . . . Known informally as Max, the mascot of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity poses here with Eldon Lovell.

OPTOMETRY IN THREE YEARS, IF YOU HAVE SIXTY L. A. CREDITS

In three college years, you can prepare for the attractive profession of optometry, if you have a minimum of sixty required Liberal Arts credits.

There is a shortage of optometrists in many States. Eighty per cent of the Nation's millions depend upon the Doctor of Optometry and his professional skill in conserving vision.

The optometrist possesses the dignity of being a professional man. He renders a service essential to the health and well-being of his community. Substantial financial rewards are obtainable almost from the beginning of his practice. Optometry is especially attractive to women.

The U. S. Department of Defense and Selective Service grant optometry students the same consideration accorded medical students.

Chicago College of Optometry, nationally accredited, is located in the heart of the world's greatest center for teaching in the healing arts. It is famous for its eye clinic. A building program is in progress. Dormitory accommodations, apartments and other facilities are available on a large campus.

Driver's Actions Named As Traffic Enemy No. 1

By GRACE HARVEY
Staff Writer

The actions of drivers is the core of America's traffic accident problem. This conclusion was reached by an insurance company in their 1952 survey of traffic accidents.

The story has often been told about the peaceful pedestrian who becomes a blood-shot eyed maniac when he climbs behind the wheel of a car. Of the death resulting accidents 46.8 per cent were caused by drivers who exceed the speed limit.

The individual who drives safely and sanely in city traffic but who begins to relax when the traffic thins out in the suburbs is another example.

This is the story of how over 75 per cent of the fatal accidents occurred on straight roads, under clear weather conditions.

The driver's action which caused the second highest number of traffic fatalities was driving on the wrong side of the road -19.2 per cent. Reckless driving 12.4 per cent, driving without the right-of-way 8.8 per cent and driving off the roadway 7.6 per cent.
