

Convention To Discuss TV Methods

The University's television committee is asking 175 Nebraska educational and civic group representatives to meet on the campus May 15, to discuss possible uses of television in the state's educational program.

The all-day session will feature reports on what use is being made of television in University, college and adult educational areas, in elementary and secondary school systems and on problems being encountered by educational interests seeking to establish non-commercial educational television stations.

Speakers will include Paul Reed, Washington, D.C., assistant director of the Joint Committee on Educational Television; William B. Levenson, assistant superintendent of schools, Cleveland, O., and Arthur Brandon, University of Michigan public relations director and television committee member.

Representatives of Nebraska's commercial television stations are being asked to take part in a panel discussion on what place educational television programs might have on the schedules of commercial outlets. Senator Richard Marvel of Hastings, chairman of the legislature's Education Committee, will preside at the panel discussion.

Dr. Knute O. Broady, University's extension division director and conference chairman, said the conference will open at 10 a.m. in the Love Library auditorium and that the day-time discussions will be open to the public. A dinner meeting will be given over to a general discussion on what steps, if any, Nebraska educational groups should take to properly utilize television.

Innocent Alumni Plan Lectureship, Golden Anniversary Dinner At NU

Reed Donates $5,000 To Humanities Series

An annual lectureship has been set up by the Alumni Innocents Association of the University.

Proposed and adopted by the Association at their annual spring reunion last year, the purpose of the endowment is to provide funds for an annual series of lectures in humanities by some outstanding scholar in the field.

The lectureship will supplement the work of the College of Arts and Sciences in teaching students a sound philosophy of life, according to Guy E. Reed, president of the Alumni Innocents Association for the past two years. Reed, originator of the plan, conceived the lectureship in anticipation of the Association's golden anniversary. According to Reed, the lectureship, a permanent contribution, is something significant for the University which will memorialize the Innocents Society.

Chancellor Gustavson, who has been working in coordination with the Innocents Society to set up the lectureship, estimated that the annual cost would be approximately $2,500. The project has been endowment for 1954 and 1955 by Reed. When this 5,000 endowment expires, the Alumni Innocents Association will maintain the lectureship.

According to Fritz Daly, secretary of the Association, "This lectureship is the finest thing that has happened at the University; that is, it will be." He added, "It is an over-all affair aimed at teaching the student more about the humanities and their importance to him in his life."

The program will start next fall. Selection of the speaker will be in the hands of a special committee composed of members representing the faculty, Alumni Innocents Association, and, tentatively, an active Innocents Society member.

The speaker will spend three or four days at the University lecturing on the humanities and presiding at panel discussions.

A booth will be set up between Social Science and Burnett Hall to apply the reflective tape. The booth will be open from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Under the direction of Gordon Gay, Business Administration student, the bumpers are washed, dried, and given a 5 to 6 foot strip of the red tape. The application takes about two minutes and costs $1.

The one inch reflective tape, produced by the same company which manufactures Scotch Tape, is visible for about one half mile and catches an approaching driver's eye about 70 per cent quicker than the regular car reflectors. The tape can only be obtained from Jaycee's, who are sponsoring this University booth.

Lincolnites New Book Co-Authors

Dr. Floyd L. Rogers and Dr. Ruth M. Leverton, both of Lincoln, are the authors of a new book, "Your Diabetes and How to Live With It," recently published by the University Press.

Miss Emily Schossberger, editor of the University Press, said the book carries two messages—one from the doctor to the patient and the other from the dietitian to the patient.

The book contains explanations from the doctor, directed principally to the new diabetic patient, on how to control the illness and in so doing live a longer, more useful and happier life.

In addition, the book contains 16 diets, of which six were developed by a joint committee of the American Diabetic Association, the American Diabetes Association, the American Dietetic Section of the Public Health Service. Ten of the diets were developed by Dr. Leverton and her staff of nutritionists. Dr. Leverton is professor of home economics and chairman of the nutrition research department at the University.

A special section of recipes is also included in the book.

The recent publication is a revised and enlarged edition of one previously printed privately by the authors.
