By DICK COFFEY
Feature Editor

Up-to-date, the film production section of the Bureau of Audio-Visual Instruction has produced approximately two miles of finished film.

The production was added to the Audio-Visual Instruction in 1947 and it houses 14 motion pictures and 22 film strips of its own productions in the basement of Architecture Hall.

It also has some 3,632 instructional films and 735 film strips.

In the production section, three are employed: John Freeman, production supervisor; Robert Lee, assistant production supervisor, and Mrs. Colleen Flemming, artist technician.

"Most of the equipment is acquired at the University photo lab," Robert Lee said, "and their men do most of the shooting along with John Freeman."

"We usually shoot two takes of everything and take the best scene when the film editing is done. The film is processed in Kansas City, Mo., to make the work print, edited here and then sent back for them to make the finished motion picture. They are made both in color and black and white."

One of the department's recent productions, "Valley of Still Waters," is entered in the National Film Festival at Cleveland, Ohio. It is one of 12 selected from 65 entries.

This twenty-two minute, color motion picture was written and directed by John Freeman.

Lee said, "The purposes of the film are: 1. To persuade the people in the Salt-Wahoo area, and people in other watersheds over the country, to take positive action toward watershed development. 2. To show how floods and erosion affect the economy of farms and cities alike, and influence the lives of all people everywhere. 3. To inform audiences of the steps, costs and benefits of a comprehensive watershed program."

As a follow-up of "Valley of Still Waters," Lee said, the Bureau of Audio-Visual Instruction is planning a series of films of specific aspects of conservation and watershed development.

"Already in production are 'Maintaining Terraces,' 'Farming Terraces,' and 'Maintaining Grassed Waterways.'"

Another production now in progress, Lee said, is "TV Comes to Town."

"This is the story of the planning and building of a television station. It begins with the idea and ends with the station's maiden telecast. The film's value comes from its behind-the-scenes theme—selection of equipment, hiring of personnel, building of studios, preparation of facilities."

The movie was made possible by a grant of station KFOR-TV through the University Foundation, Lee continued.

A motion picture filmed on this campus is "Husker Album." It is a fifteen-minute color film.

"In it there are scenes from around the city campus and the Ag campus, football, and such ceremonies as Ivy Day and graduation. It sound track is composed of narration with a background of favorite Nebraska music played by the University Band."

"Art, an essential in production, is ably supplied by Mrs. Colleen Flemming, an alumna who joined the staff in the summer of 1951," Lee said, "and though are and layout work primarily occupy her, Mrs. Flemming also handles the section's typing and filing."

Mrs. Fleming said her work as an artist consists mainly of drawing posters, film strip titles, maps, and promotion.

Training Class For MCWA Starts In June

Training for Marine Corps women officer candidates will be held this year at Quantico, Virginia beginning in June.

Major Robert P. Wray, who is in charge of interviewing candidates for the training program in this area, said the class is known as the Marine Corps Women's Training Class.

The program consists of 12 weeks of special training designed to prepare the individual candidate for the responsible work she will have later on as a commissioned officer in the Corps.

Qualified young women who are still attending college, or those who are recent graduates, are eligible to enroll in the Marine Corps Women Officer Training Class. Major Wray pointed out, however, the applications for the June class must be sent to Marine Corps headquarters by June 1.

Graduates of the Women Officers Training Class, who will receive commissions as second lieutenants, U. S. Marine Corps Reserve, will be considered for assignments in such fields as personnel, administration, supply and public administration.

Application blanks and further information about the class are available at the Marine Corps office, Post Office Bldg., or by telephoning 2-4520.

E. Harrison To Present Music Recital

Ernest Harrison, associate professor of piano at the University, will present a piano recital at 8:15 p.m. Thursday in the Union ballroom.

Mr. Harrison, a charter member of Phi Mu Alpha—Sinfonia, men's professional music organization, will present a program which will include: "Chaconne" by Bach-Busoni, "Sonata, Op. 53" by Beethoven, "Ballad in A Flat" by Chopin, "Two Preludes" by Debussy and "Tarantelle" by Liszt.

Before joining the University's staff, Mr. Harrison toured the U.S. as accompanist for cellist Cornelius Van Vliet, as well as for the late Jeanette Vreeland, concert soprano, and Elias Breeskin, violinist. He has appeared as soloist with both the Lincoln and University symphony orchestras.

Graduate Students Permits must be obtained in the graduate office before May 14 by any graduate student planning to take the reading examination in French and German required for the Ph. D. degree. The examination will be given Saturday, May 16.

Perhaps it's just as well that spring fever is a chronic disease but not one that is death-dealing. If it were death-dealing, the student populations at the University would be practically nil after the first week of spring weather.

That Time Again Studying More Difficult As Spring Sports Arrive

By GRACE HARVEY
Staff Writer

"Come on out, the weather's fine!"

It seemed such a shame to stay in your room and study when the voice of spring was calling. Well, not actually the voice of spring, just your lucky comrades who were outdoors absorbing their share of Mr. Sun.

What a life! During the noon hour, after classes were over in the afternoon, and all evening, lucky students were piling into convertibles and touring the campus.

You begin to speculate. Wouldn't that history term paper be much easier to write in the evening when the sun wasn't shirking so brightly in the window and there weren't so many students sitting out in front of the houses. Perhaps if you quit studying now, you would feel more like studying this evening. If you played tennis or drove around with some of your friends this afternoon, you could work a little of that excess energy off. Then you would be content to settle back to the old grind when the sun went down.

You decide—the more I sit and rationalize the more of this glorious afternoon I'm wasting. So you throw the books on the bed, grab your tennis racket and car keys, and you're off "to the races." (If you don't happen to have a car—and thus no car keys—the next best thing is to try and fine someone who does.)

If either Tom, Dick, or Harry is available with his Model T, you're in luck. "To the tennis courts!" is the cry. Sunburned, tired, and thoroughly happy after two hours under Old Sol, you are ready for the muse that refreshes.

Now, you may pick a drive-in, Crib, or you may pick some other haunt for a different kind of refreshment.

Once again touring campus, you will see some of the organized houses holding Ivy Day practice on their lawns or some of the fellows playing catch in front of their houses. If you were a boy, you would probably like to join the Sigma Chi's on their roof and watch the coeds play softball.

When dinner is over, the old urge to join the crowd is back again. The fellows are out watering their front lawns—and anything else that happens—and talk of parties and picnics is in the air. However, the nostalgia of the evening cannot quite overcome the insistent little voice in the back of your mind that keeps repeating, "No term paper—flunk, flunk!"

If you are a good little girl—and we hope you are—that little whisper of conscience will win out. On second thought, perhaps it was just the voice of the parent speaking to the girl who flunks.
