The following factors are involved in the matter of these new commencement exercises: The published calendar for the 1953 Summer Session provides that final examinations be held on Friday, July 31. Goss Explains Objection To Proposed D Ed Degree

Dr. Robert W. Goss, dean of the University Graduate College, made a statement Monday to clarify the graduate council and graduate faculty's objection to the doctor of education degree recently approved by the Board of Regents.

The doctor of education degree to be administered by the University Teachers College, had been recommended by Chancellor R. G. Gustavson previous to the objections.

Reasons cited by Dean Goss were:

- "1. No evidence was presented showing a real need for this degree but only a desire for it.
2. The Ph.D. accomplished what the proposed program would.
3. The Graduate Council considered that the elimination of one requirement, foreign languages, and the weakening of the requirement in research was not sufficient justification for a new degree at supposedly the same level per did it change an academic degree to a so-called professional degree.
4. The Graduate Council believes that the administration of a graduate degree in an undergraduate college means a major and radical change in the policies of this University where all graduate work for over fifty years has been administered by the Graduate College. This permits and encourages the maximum utilization of all the facilities of the University into a broad and well integrated program for each individual student.

Regents Withhold Action On Laging's Resignation

No immediate action has been taken on the resignation of Duard W. Laging as chairman of the University's Art Department and director of University Galleries, according to Dean Walter Miltzer of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Laging, who has been chairman of the department since 1947 and director of the galleries since 1950, resigned because he felt "some influential people in the community regard him as symbol of 'the modernism they resent in art.'"

Laging said "pressures were brought to bear" from some "influential people in the community who resent anything that smacks of modernism."

Pointing out detailed awards and exhibits by staff members and students, and Fulbright awards won during his administration, Laging said the "pressure" comes at a time when the art department is at a peak and the student productions have never been better.

Laging stated, "I had the full support of the entire department during my term as chairman and director." He said that he still plans to continue on as a professor of Art History.
