

Council To Seek Student Opinion

Booking Agency, KNUS Power Discussed At Weekly Session

"What do you expect of your Student Council?" The Council at its meeting Wednesday voted to print this query in the Nebraskan. If suitable arrangements could be made, student response to this blank would help the Student Council better serve the students it represents.

When contacted, the editor of the Nebraskan, Ren Rystrom, said that these arrangements could be made.

THE CAMPUS Improvements Committee suggested construction of a "grievance box" to be placed in the Student Union for faculty and students. The suggestion was approved and action will be taken by the committee. Bill Cannon, chairman of the Parking Committee, reported to the Council that "it looks like the parking problem is being solved somewhat." He also reported that less traffic tickets have been issued so far this year.

Cannon added that students wishing to buy parking permits may do so at the campus police station. The parking board listened to two appeals last week; one was not granted and one will be settled this week.

INQUIRIES INTO the possibilities of increasing the power of the campus radio station, KNUS, revealed that radio instructors do not want an increase because the station is used purely for teaching purposes and not for public service and entertainment.

The possibility of an orchestra booking agency, through which organizations on campus could obtain bands, was discussed and a poll of sororities will be taken to find out whether it would be useful.

MARY FRIEDMAN was appointed to the Convocations Committee. The committee reported that the Honors Convocation is scheduled for April 6.

Plans for the special student train to Missouri were cancelled, due to lack of student interest. Jack Rogers reported that almost 1,000 game tickets had been sold.

The Outside World

McAuliffe, Palestine In News

Army Versed In Atomic Info

Gen. McAuliffe, new United States Seventh Army commander, said that more emphasis will be placed on the training for U.S. troops in Germany. Data on tactical principles and information for greater defense from atomic attack has been obtained and so the warfare program will be broadened, added the commander. Gen. McAuliffe who observed the Bikini bomb tests is the "first atomic general" to take command of the Seventh Army.

Situation Tense

The situation is critically tense in Palestine, reported Maj. Gen. Vasek Benkita, to the Security Council. A council session will be summoned Monday to hear the general's report and decide what United Nations action is necessary to restore calm. Even though matters are uneasy, it is not likely that a major world conflict will result from the situation, said the General.

Delegates Walk Out

The explanation groups have been delayed since Monday because of the walkout of the Polish and Czech delegates who were voted down by the Indians, Swedes and Swiss. The two Red satellite members left because they could not win their point in the Korean Prisoner Repatriation Commission. They proposed that anti-Red Koreans be forced to hear Communist efforts to wheedle them home.

U.S. Military Aid

As soon as the plans for European Defense Community are ratified, United States military aid will be sent to Western European countries. Secretary of State Dulles and other top officials have been reported as being confident that the EDC treaty which has been stalled for several months will finally be ratified within the next three or four months.

Germany is the only country which has ratified the treaty and if it passes it would mean rearming West Germany. Other signers include France, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg.

'Little Foxes' Shows First Night Flaws

Only 32 Present At University Theater Production

By BRUCE KENDALL
Faculty Reviewer

Temple Arena Theater was the scene of what resembled a wake Wednesday night, as the University Theater inaugurated its 1953-1954 season. The complete silence at the end of the first act did not indicate lack of appreciation by the thirty-two people present. It was just that the audience was so small that it was embarrassing to applaud.

This was certainly not the best performance ever presented by the University Theater, but its first night reception was scarcely deserved.

AN EFFECTIVE arena production of Lillian Hellman's skillfully contrived melodrama, "The Little Foxes," may be possible, but this reviewer doubts it. The play calls, above all, for deftly applied ham on the part of those portraying its villainous and maladjusted characters.

With the underplaying of the cast, necessary for the intimacy of the arena, the impression was that the foxes were only nibbling at the vines, and one had no fear for the grapes.

In the role of the vulgar vixen, Regina, Pat Loder happily did not imitate Tallulah; however, she played the part as if she were too much a lady to say the mean things Miss Hellman had written for her. Only in the third act could one sense the evil of her character.

CHARLES PETERSON coped valiantly with Oscar, a character for which he was completely miscast. At times, he appeared considerably more youthful than Jack Parris, who played Leo, his son.

Dale Holt portrayed the rascal Ben on one emotional level, never having the oily finesse vital to the role.

The most convincing character was created by Mrs. Fred Bradley as Addie, the servant. Morrel Clute showed sensitivity in the role of the invalid Horace, and Valerie Hompes caught the spirit of Birdie, but did not give the character the hysterical quality it required.

Jean Carol DeLong did her usual competent job as Alexandra, and Clark Rhudy and Forrest Smith were adequate in minor roles.

TWO DRAMATIC highlights of the play were strangely thrown away. One is the point at which Regina turns on her visiting relatives and shouts, "Why don't you all go home?" In this production, Regina spoke the line as if it were a civil and sincere request.

University Has Changed Little Remarks Returned Army Veteran, Dick Roeser.

Biz Ad Major Recommends Statehood For Hawaii

"The University hasn't changed much" in the opinion of Dick Roeser, second semester junior in the College of Business Administration.

Roeser, one of many students drafted while in the midst of their college careers, attended

Hastings College for two years and the University for one semester before going into the service.

He served in the Army for two years taking basic training in Hawaii. Only 18 days of his service career were spent in the United States.

AFTER BASIC training, Roeser served in "casual detachment," working with court martial cases. It was Roeser's job to obtain information for court marials and to interview the accused persons. Roeser mentioned that in his job he met "every type of person."

Roeser recommends Hawaii for statehood and stated that the islands of Hawaii are "very advanced in every field," and not primitive as many have been led to believe.

HE SAID he thought Honolulu was very much like Omaha except that it was spread out over more territory. The city, he said, has every modern convenience—television, telephone, city transportation.

Roeser hasn't had much trouble getting adjusted again to the life of a student, but said that he had forgotten some of the facts that he had learned in previous courses. However, he said he thought that his experiences in the armed service have helped him.
