Regents Report Faculty Committee Reduces Chancellor List To Thirteen

Thirteen out-of-state candidates are being considered for appointment as University Chancellor, it was announced Saturday after a Regents meeting with the faculty committee.

The faculty committee recommended the names from an original list of approximately 75. It was indicated that the men are on the faculties of institutions of higher learning in other states.

REGENT CHAIRMAN C. Y. Thompson said the Regents are not bound by the faculty group list, but are free to consider other names. He added, however, that the faculty nominees will be given "earnest consideration."

Thompson indicated that no action in the chancellorship search is likely until after the convention of the Association of Governing Boards of State Universities and Allied Institutions in Gainesville, Fla., which several Regents plan to attend at the end of the month. It was felt that Nebraska Regents might be able to utilize the Florida meeting to investigate some of the 13 men, another Regent said.

NU Regents Delay Action On Mitchell Lambert Invited To Meeting

"I'll just have to wait for the Regents," were the closing words of Dr. C. Clyde Mitchell, chairman of the University's department of Agricultural Economics, Sunday, as he presented his views of the current farm price support controversy.

Defending his original statement that the "story speaks for itself," Dr. Mitchell spoke on the problems of food, population, and surpluses to the Unitarian Student World Fellowship group at their breakfast Sunday morning.

DR. MITCHELL has been under fire from the Hall County Farm Bureau for his article in a recent national farm magazine. Mitchell advocates fixed price supports for farmers rather than the flexible supports favored by the Farm Bureau.

A committee of the Farm Bureau requested that the University Regents "take action" against Mitchell. At their Saturday meeting, the Regents decided to wait until next week's meeting before taking any definite stand.

DEAN W. V. LAMBERT of the College of Agriculture will be asked to attend this meeting. Dean Lambert has been in Denver at a conference for the past week and will return some time Tuesday. He has been unavailable for any comment.

As Dr. Mitchell spoke Sunday, he made a record on a transcribing machine of his entire discussion. After speaking, he distributed copies of his report to the Agricultural Committee of the National Production Authority. The report summarized his remarks of the morning discussion.

Solving the surplus problems of the next few years will require us to engage in vigorous programs of economic and social action. We can attempt to decrease production or increase consumption, or we can do both.

"Either course will be expensive and will require changes in present law, but if we refuse to face realities the problem will be more expensive and even dangerous to our national interest."

NU Coed Injured In Chemistry Lab

A University coed was injured Monday when a chemistry experiment exploded in her face.

Margaret Jane Drayton, a Home Ec sophomore, was making nitrobenzene for an experiment in Chemistry 31 lab. In the process of pouring benzene into a mixture of concentrated sulfuric and nitric acid, the compound reacted violently and splashed the liquid into her face. Several nearby students were showered but uninjured.

Although Miss Drayton's condition is not believed to be serious, she is being treated by Student Health.

Henry Baumgarten, assistant professor of chemistry and instructor of the lab, said the mishap was an "unavoidable accident."

Registration Open For Blood Donors

The Red Cross Bloodmobile will be on campus Nov. 30 between noon and 6 p.m.

A registration booth to enlist prospective donors opened in the Union Monday and will close Wednesday. Registration cards may also be obtained from all committee workers on the Red Cross blood recruitment committee.

During last month's campaign, 75 students signed up to give blood. Students over 18 may register to give blood, but those between 18 and 21 must have their parents' consent.

Before the student gives blood, Red Cross workers interview him to see if he is physically able to contribute. Of the 75 interviewed last month, five students were rejected.

BABW To Hold First Mass Meet

BABW worker activities are reporting, writing stories, typing and distributing the Barb Wire, BABW publication.

The purpose of the mass meeting is to acquaint new workers with the purposes and goals of BABW.

No Convocations Set This Year

Departmental Speeches Slated; Dow Explains New Organization

No all-University Convocations have been scheduled for this year but the convocation program has been extended—not broken down.

David Dow, professor of law and chairman of the convocations committee, made this statement when asked if any all-University convocations were to be omitted as part of University functions.

Dow said that the convocations program had been changed for two reasons. "First, because we had no regular Chancellor, the chancellor's convocation was not scheduled," he said. "The reason for making the second change," he continued, "was we have tried to experiment on a new idea to bring a larger number of people to talk to undergraduates in classes or lectures. This change in the convocations policy will bring speakers on the department's level, instead of the entire University," he said.

DOW SAID that the Convocations Committee asked the various departments to find men who would be stimulating to the students in that department and the Committee has received responses from 10 departments.

Dow said that the convocations program was changed because "many faculty members did not think the convocation speakers were giving worthwhile talks. This caused insufficient student reaction. The Committee members thought University money was inefficiently used and that perhaps this change might bring better results," he said.

ONE OF the "better results" was pointed out by Carl Snyder, former member of the Convocations Committee. He said that the speaker, an expert in his particular field, will be available to a smaller group of students who are definitely interested in that particular field. However, if the committee thinks the speaker will interest all University students, an all-University convocation will be scheduled.

While this experiment is "entirely new" at the University, Dow pointed out that plans were laid last spring. At that time former Chancellor Gustafson spoke of the experiment to Acting Chancellor Selleck and the Convocations Committee.

DOW ADDED that the Faculty-Student Seminar Series sponsored by the Union Convocations

'Mutiny'

Thursday Ends Sale Of Tickets

Sound, Stage To Be Changed

Student tickets for "The Caine Mutiny Courtmartial" may be purchased in the Union ticket booth until Thursday.

The production will be presented Thursday at 8 p.m. in the Coliseum. Student tickets are $1.25.

Advance notices indicate that the company is taking step to overcome the acoustics problem in Nebraska's airy auditorium by bringing their own sound system. This, coupled with building the stage out into the Coliseum, is planned to better the acoustics and to bring the audience closer to the action on the stage, according to Duane Lake, Union director.

THE PRESENTATION of Herman Wouk's adaptation of his best-selling novel, "The Caine Mutiny," will be part of a 67-city advance tour of the company before it reaches Broadway in January. The original company, headed by Henry Fonda, John Hodiak, and Lloyd Nolan, will remain in New York while another company will take the play on tour during the spring.

"The Caine Mutiny Courtmartial" is different from previous Paul-Gregory-Charles Laughton productions because it is a legitimate stage play complete with costumes, action and settings.

Examinations For Diabetes Announced

Free examinations for diabetes will be given at the University Student Health Center this week.

Dr. S. I. Fuenning, director of the Student Health Center, said the examination would be given in connection with the sixth annual drive to discover unknown cases of diabetes in the United States.

Sponsors of the drive have estimated there are 1,000,000 persons who have the disease and do not realize it until the advanced symptoms of diabetes become evident.

Dr. Fuenning said, "If caught in the early stages, diabetes can be arrested, thus permitting the patient to live a happy, normal life." He also expressed hope that everyone will take advantage of the examination service at the Center between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. this week.
