'Phoenix Too Frequent' To Open Friday Night

Mood Of Play Ironic, Playful But Overpowered By Words

By GRACE NEWELL MEEKER

Faculty Reviewer
"A 'Phoenix Too Frequent,' a comedy in one act by Christopher Fry, will open Friday in the Arena Theater at 8:15 p.m. The play is directed by Dale Holt as a part of his work in advanced production. There is no admission charge.

The one-act play tells the story of a young Grecian widow who is planning to die at the tomb of her husband where she has come with her maid to wait for death. She abandons the intent when she falls in love with a young soldier who is guarding the bodies of six executed prisoners.

THE PLAY is written in an ironic and playful mood but it is overpowered by words. What is said is less important than the manner of saying it and consequently the style of acting is very important and here the actors found their greatest difficulty.

The acting as a whole lacked the finesse, the pacing, the drollery, the highly polished quality the play demands. Luane Raun was lovable and convincing but her performance lacked shading and changes of mood and feeling.

Jack Parris as Tegeus-Chronis, the soldier, played with animation and sincerity, but his characterization needed an intensity of feeling which was lacking. Dodo, the maid, was played by Margot Hunt. Miss Hunt read the humorous lines particularly well and her characterization was consistent throughout the play. Her drunk scene, however, was not convincing and one might argue for a Dodo who is more saucy and less coy.

MR. HOLT'S use of action was excellent; it gave the play pace and movement which aided in lending interest to the wordy scene. The play was, almost without exception, played at one level of intensity, and some variation in this regard would have given the performance additional interest and even humor.

The costumes were appropriate and the setting ingeniously adapted to arena staging.

The cast and the director are to be commended for doing this difficult piece. The difficulties they faced would not be easily overcome even by professionals, and this cast turned in a genuinely entertaining performance.

YD's Challenge Young GOP's To Debate On 2 Ike Policies

The Lancaster County Young Democrats have challenged the County Young Republicans to a debate.

The Young Democrats wish to determine whether the Young

Republicans agree with their colleagues in Omaha. The Douglas County Young Republicans have adopted a platform advocating the immediate withdrawal of the United States from the United Nations, the removal of American ground forces and economic aid from Europe, and if the Korean truce talks accomplish nothing "that military and financial aid be given South Koreans and Nationalist China and that war be brought immediately to a successful conclusion. We recommend the withdrawal of American ground forces except in advisory capacities."

THESE TWO points were continued in the debate challenge:

1. Resolved, that we support the non-partisan foreign policy as proposed by President Eisenhower, and that we reject the foreign policy plank adopted by the Douglas County Young Republicans.

2. Resolved, that we reject the power marketing criteria of the Republican Administration, and we support the principle of maintaining the REA cooperatives as preferred customers in the sale of public power.

The state committee also gave strong support in any action the Omaha Democrats deemed feasible at the debate.
