Former New Yorker Likes Job In Union As Checker

By MARCIA MICKELSEN, Staff Writer

A man whom we often see but have seldom heard of is K. A. Hinote, checker in the Union.

Hinote, an octogenarian, has been checking students' coats and books at the Union stand for two years.

He formerly lived in New York, but returned to Nebraska after retiring because most of his relatives and friends live here.

HINOTE LIKES his work in the Union because it provides him with a way in which to pass time. Usually, he is busiest at meal times when students flock to the Union to eat.

Having plenty of time in which to observe students, he said, "I only wish I were their age."

Hinote admits being "a little bit jealous," and would have liked "to have had the opportunity that the students have" to go to college.

"I LIKE students very much," he said. However, he does have one complaint about his Union job — students that think the checking booth is an information stand and expect him to know about various places and where they are located in the building or on campus.

One change that Hinote has noticed in the past is that students don't "cut up" as much in the Union Lobby as they did last year. Perhaps this means that college students are finally becoming more mature, he said.

Unseasonal Sun Beckons NU Beauties

Nebraska co-eds in swimming suits are climbing to the roof tops with hopes of absorbing some of February's slanting sun rays before the ground hog makes his cold weather prediction come true.

The Nebraska campus has turned into a southern university. Watch out, Arizona and UCLA! All that we need now is a Rose Bowl Queen for Homecoming.

Musical Mueller Family Contributes To Carillon

Tower Dedicated '49; Designed By Kuska, Architecture Student

Musical interest in the Mueller family resulted in the building of the Ralph Mueller Carillon Tower.

Ralph Mueller was the son of an immigrant who came in the 1800's to the United States and was employed as a railroad worker, but later gave up that occupation to preserve his physical well-being. Mr. Mueller then moved his family to Council Bluffs where he was employed doing outdoor work.

IT IS told that one day the elder Mueller was working at a home where a little girl was practicing her music lesson. The mother asked if Mr. Mueller had heard the daughter practicing and he replied yes, but went on to say that the girl hadn't played the piece correctly.

At the mother's request, Mueller went into the house and played the piece as he thought it should be played. This incidental happening caused Mr. Mueller to start giving music lessons to the daughter, and he then became a music teacher in Council Bluffs.

AFTER CHANGING his profession Mueller had a piano shipped up the Missouri River by boat. He sold the piano and became the first person to sell pianos locally. Formally, all pianos in the Council Bluffs area had been shipped from the East, after being purchased there.

Eventually, his piano dealing was climaxed by the establishment of the Mueller Piano Company. Mr. Mueller died, but his son, a brother of the Carillon Tower donor, went on to become a partner in the Schmolter-Mueller Piano Company of Lincoln and Omaha, a company which still exists today, even though the Mueller brother is not now associated with it.

THUS THE musical interest of the Mueller family was perhaps the primary reason for donating funds to build the $90,000 tower.

Ralph Mueller, the son and brother of the two men mentioned previously, and donor of the limestone pillar, attended the University of Omaha and was graduated in 1898.

Now a resident of Cleveland,
