Researcher To Lecture Thursday

Destructive Pest Control Sought

Gerald Thorne, senior nematologist with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, is visiting the University for two weeks.

Thorne is working with the Ag College faculty and advanced students in furthering their knowledge of the parasite. Thorne, who has studied nematodes for the past 36 years, said the only economical method to control the root-eating nematodes is by crop rotation.

According to Thorne, although microscopic nematodes, commonly referred to as "eelworms," may be "raising cane" with the sugar beets in the North Platte Valley, they are forcing Nebraska farmers to adopt proper farming methods.

The farmers of Nebraska's panhandle have actually increased their yield per acre, he said. Thorne continued, "But only crops of sugar beets can be produced every four years on heavily infested land."

The only other method of controlling the sweet-toothed parasite is by fumigating the soil, he said. "But chemical control costs $40 an acre which is much too expensive—and fumigation lasts for only one crop."

HE SAID that some new type of chemical must be discovered if we expect to increase our food supply. The supply must, by 1975, feed approximately 190 million people in the U.S., he added.

Thorne said that there is "probably not a single crop grown from which these microscopic pests do not exact a toll," even though sugar beets are the main victims in Nebraska.

Thorne will discuss "Plant Parasitic Nematodes in our Agricultural Economy" in a public lecture Feb. 26 at 3:30 p.m. in the Agronomy Building.

Law Students Prepare Cases For Moot Court

Local Attorneys To Judge Rounds

By BEV DEEPE
Staff Writer

The freshmen participating in the Thomas Stinson Allen Moot Court Competition are scurrying about the Law building as they nervously delve into documents and records for information from which to prepare their briefs.

The eight sophomores participating in the competition are doing less scurrying than the freshman, but more methodical delving. The four junior participants are seldom seen except as they wander from one book shelf in the library to another.

THESE "MOOT COURTERS" are busy finding information for their briefs which will be returned to the Board of Advisors from March 4 to March 15, depending on the date briefs were issued. The members have been given three weeks to prepare the briefs which are written according to the rules of the Supreme Court of Nebraska.

Unsettled points of law on which briefs are based are written by the Board of Advisors, which consists of 12 law students and Allen Axelrod, faculty advisor. The cases for the freshman are composed of torts, contracts, legislation, property and constitutional law. The sophomore cases contain more advanced work, such as securities, commercial law and criminal law.

THE CASE which junior participants will argue in the Supreme Court Chamber on March 27 involves a damage action which occurs when the pilot of a plane, attempting to make artificial rain, succeeds and floods a golf course.

After the briefs are received by the Board of Advisors, participants are given one week to prepare oral arguments they will use in their rounds of competition to defend their own cases and to refute their opponent's. Freshman rounds will be held March 15 through March 24. Sophomore rounds will be held March 11 and 12.

THREE LOCAL attorneys will act as judges for each freshman round of the competition. The Board of Advisors are seeking a local or district judge to sit in on sophomore and junior rounds.

The Allen Appellate Competition was established in 1946 by the faculty of the University College of Law as a memorial to the late Thomas Stinson Allen, first graduate of that college.

Program Operation Of KNUS Similar To Commercial Station

By BRUCE MINTER
Staff Writer

A classroom situation which closely resembles the operation of a commercial station is the course known officially as Speech 176. Actually, though the course has a calendar number, anyone interested in radio broadcasting experience may take a part.

Operation is much like that of a commercial station. Back of each broadcast day lies several hours of gathering commercial material, selecting music and assembling the broadcast "book."

KNUS, WHICH is the designation given the station, may be received in any one of the organized houses on campus as well as the dorms. Broadcasts begin at two o'clock with the Third Hour program, which is an hour of both poetry and prose, and classical music. During the next two hours popular music, news and sports and special features are carried, with students in charge of production.

Those students who have actual work on the air are responsible for filling a music sheet listing the records they intend to use. This sheet then goes to the record library, where records are pulled for the show. Another copy goes to the continuity department to be placed in the book, along with promotional announcements for the day.

THE STAFF is broken down into many sections: news, desk, sports, music and continuity, all headed by a director. The new organizational policy of the station makes provision for five directors, one director for each of the operational days. He is responsible for all programs and features for this day. It was believed that by doing this a better organization can be achieved.

SPECIAL PROGRAMS in addition to The Third Hour program are "What's Your View?", a panel discussion by University students every Friday. A program which will again be carried this semester is "Campus Capers," produced by Dave Chapman and Morse Weisgurt. Every week an interview with different campus sororities will be broadcast at 4 p.m. Featured, in the order of their appearance, are Delta Gamma, Gamma Phi Beta, Kappa Alpha Theta, Kappa Delta, Kappa Kappa Gamma, Pi Beta Phi, Sigma Delta Tau and Sigma Kappa.

The station will go on the air Monday at 2 p.m., beginning the second semester of station operation.
